It happened in New York's lower East Side.

"How many seasons are there?" asked the teacher.

"Just two," answered Rachel.

"What are they?" inquired the puzzled instructor.

"Slack and busy," replied Rachel.

"Pay your taxes with a smile," advised Mayor Ostrocks.

"I should love to," said Miss Homely, "but they insist on cash."

MAKING MUMMY BETTER

A DELIGHTFUL STORY
BY ELIZABETH GEORGE

"Well, what did the doctor say about you, Mary?" asked David Symes, as he leant over the couch where his wife lay, propped up with cushions, a worried look on his grave dependable face. "Was he pleased with the way you're getting on?"

"Yes, on the whole he was," Mary smiled a trifle doubtfully. "He said it's bound to take time for me to pick up my strength, after flu and tonsilitis. I've got to take things easy for a bit, and eat all the food I can."

"And try to get fatter," put in six-year-old Betty from her perch on the edge of the couch. "The doctor said that was very important, didn't he, granny?" She turned her dark brown eyes on her grandmother, who entered the room with a jray at that moment.

"Yes, dearie, he did!" The old lady's face lit up with an indulgent smile as she set the tray on the table by her daughter-in-law's side. "Now, Mary, try to eat this fish, my dear. Betty is quite right. Doctor Fleeter said you've got to eat a deal and get more flesh on your bones. I've made you a baked custard to follow."

"You're very kind," Mary smiled the wistful smile of the invalid who feels she is making a lot of trouble for other people. They were her husband's people, too—old Mrs. Symes's unmarried daughter, Connie, who lived with her; Eva Symes, David's married sister, whose husband, Henry, had a snug little confectioner's and tea-room business near the cathedral. They had all been wonderfully kind—but they were busy people, and Mary felt she had not the same right to their services as if they had been her own relations.

As she ate her steamed fish, her languid blue eyes went to a photo on the oak bureau—a photo of a lovely girl of eighteen or so, with fair wavy hair like Mary's, and a sweet and vivacious expression. David had said as her eyes met the laughing face of her only sister, Kitty, who had run away from the home to go on the stage.

She had obtained an engagement in the chorus of a musical comedy on tour, and had kept in touch with them till the death of her parents; but after that, her letters and visits ceased.

The last time Mary heard news she was in a third-rate pantomime in the north, and without any certainty of an engagement when the show came to an end.

Mary had written time after time; but the letters came back.

Mary did so long for a relative of her own to come and see her, and since her illness the longing had increased. David's was such a united family, and their affection and interest in each other's concerns only strengthened her own desire for the sister who had once been her constant companion.

Kitty would have loved her pretty bedroom in the late June evening, for the river, the diamond-paned windows curtained in daffodil-yellow, the garden, where tulips and irises bloomed beside the cobbled path, and a gnarled old apple tree shaded by David's bed kept so trim and velvety.

There was a scrap of kitchen garden, where raspberry canes and early vegetables were second to none in Greychester—which was not surprising, seeing that David was head gardener at a big country house a mile out of the town, and his own garden was the benefit of his professional skill.

David came in that moment with the custard, looking the picture of health beside his fragile little wife in her bed at all. Mary dear, Mother look such pains over it," he said cently. "She has to go after dinner and Betty can stay at home from school this afternoon if you like."

"Not on any account," Mary shook her thin hand into her husband's big brown one, a grateful smile lighting up her pale face. "I shall go on to sleep soon, and Betty will be in soon after four. I shall be quite all right, really, dear."

"I'll tell Betty to come straight home. She passes the confectioner's on her way, and now they are putting up the swings and merry-go-rounds and she'll be tempted to stop," said David, bending to kiss his wife good-bye.

"Take care of yourself. I'll be home as early as I can."

David left, pausing to speak to Betty in the hall. A few minutes later the child, too, departed, scampering down the garden path, with a little chum, Phyllis Chandler, who lived next door. Mary heard their chirping voices, and wondered what they were discussing. Probably the fair that was coming to the village.

It was the fair! Phyllis' father was a carpenter, and had been engaged on odds jobs up on the fairground. He had been behind the scenes, watching the erection of the tents and stalls, caught a glimpse of the Living Skeleton off duty, and had actually seen the Fat Lady eating one of her stupendous meals!

Daddy said she ate a whole pound of sausages for her dinner, and a dishful of potatoes, as well as pudding and some bananas," said Phyllis. "I don't wonder she's fat!"

Betty nodded her red-capped head, a look of deep reflection on her round, rosy face.

"I wonder if sausages and bread pudding would make mummy fat," she said. "The doctor says she has simply got to get fatter, but she says sausages give her a pain."

"The Fat Lady eats lots of other things as well—toffee and creamy cakes and sugar buns, I expect," said Phyllis, who was very fond of fun. "Father, My Aunty hasn't got them 'cos she wants to get thin. She eats lettuces and funny crunchy biscuits and things like that, 'for the good of her figure,' she says. I don't know what she means."

Neither did Betty, and in any case she was too occupied with an idea that was slowly forming in her brain to care. If only she knew what the Fat Lady ate—to make her fat she would be able to tell Mummy, and then she would get well quickly. She did so want her to be the gay, happy mummy who played with her, made impromptu picnic lunches and told her a bedtime story every night. Aunty Connie had promised to take Betty to the fair on Saturday. Perhaps she might be able to question the Fat Lady on the subject of her meals.

Aunty had not forgotten her promise. She came in after tea on the way home from the knitting factory where she worked, to help Mary to bed and put the potato pie her mother had made in the oven for David's supper. Mary could hear her talking to Betty down in the kitchen, discussing the treat in store, while Connie got out the yellow china ready for supper, and Betty set the table in the grave, deliberate way that was so like her father's.

"There is a fortune - telling tent, and a shooting range and coconut-shies, and an entertainment of some kind in one of the tents," Connie announced, as she dived into the larder for bread, "and there they have a circus and a fairy all in pink tulle and spangles—"

"Like my Aunty Kitty." Betty looked up from the knife-box with an eager smile. "We've got a photo of her dressed as a fairy. I do hope we shall see her, Aunty Con, and the Fat Lady."

"I shouldn't miss her. She's as big as a battleship," declared Connie, surveying the supper table. "I think that's about all, dear. I must be off, dear. I shall be round for you on Saturday at half-past two. Mind you're ready."

Betty gave her aunty a farewell hug, and followed her into the garden, where she picked a few sprays of lilacs for her mother's bedroom, and tried to make it such a size. Not that she wanted mummy to become enormous like her, but if she ate lots of the same food as the lady at the fair, she might become less like "that pair of bones" she had heard her Aunty Eva, who never minced her words, once call her.

Saturday was a lovely day with the sky as blue as Betty's eyes, and the river sliding silver-smooth between the low-lying meadows. Betty felt she was held in a bie field by the old stone bridge, and when Betty and Phyllis had had a ride on it, it was fun in full swing.

"You'd like a ride on the hobby horses, wouldn't you, Betty?" asked Aunty Connie, pushing her way towards the big roundabout covered with scarlet, white and gilt horses.

"I'll sit on the next horse, then you won't be frightened. Up you go—"

Betty was not frightened. She enjoyed the ride immensely; but she wanted to get off and explore more than she had yet been so anxious to see the Fat Lady. She was treated to a second ride, and wanted to take her on the swing-boats, and was disappointed when the child expressed a wish to visit the Fat Lady first.

"She is in her tent. You pay twopence extra to go in and see her," said Aunty Con. "I don't think it's worth it, myself."

"I can pay for myself. I've got tenpence left in my purse," said Betty, her little red handbag. "Do let's go, aunty."

The good-natured Conine gave in and into the tent they went. At first Betty could hardly distinguish its occupant, for her eyes grew more accustomed to the dim light, she made out a huge figure in pink satin, liberally trimmed with lace. The Fat Lady would have been terrified if she had known how Betty had been for her affable smile, and the mass of tight yellow curls which framed her massive face. She appeared in no wise disturbed by the outspoken remarks of the audience.

"My, isn't she a size?"

"Do with a bit of slimming! Look at her arms, wonderful freckled-face youth at Betty's side. "Wonder what she eats to make her so enormous?"

Betty wondered, too; but there seemed little chance of her being able to find out, for the tent was filling rapidly and Aunty Con, who disliked crowds, was suggesting that she could hardly breathe.

Betty followed her out into the open, rather disappointed. Even the joy of visiting the stalls and choosing a necklace of pink beads for mummy did not console her.

Her thoughts were centered on the Fat Lady. If only she knew which caravan she lived in she might manage to creep in when the coast was clear and catch her when she went in to tea. Betty reflected... her eyes scanning the gaily-painted caravans doubtfully. None of them looked strong enough to bear the weight of the Fat Lady; but the blue one with the orange curtains was certainly the most substantial.

She cast longing glances at it as she and Aunty Con stood enjoying the fine-arts exhibit, and knew that there seemed no chance of evading her watchful aunt. Then she saw there was no hope of securing the Fat Lady's attention on such a busy day, and decided that Sunday morning would be a better time. The fair would not be open to the public then, and the Fat Lady would perhaps be at liberty.

Aunty Eva was coming to cook the Sunday dinner, and she never would let Betty help with the vegetables or anything, the silver like mums did. Daddy and Uncle Henry would be in the garden, so she should easily be able to get unnoticed.

Betty was up early the next morning and helped daddy arrange her mummy's breakfast tray; she made toast and "timed" the egg herself by the little egg-timer with the china figure mummy kept on the dresser.

"Well, you've put on your best frock, darling!" Mary looked rather surprised at her little daughter's figure with the lawn collar and cuffs was usually reserved for Sunday afternoon. "You'll take care of it, won't you Bettykins?"

Betty promised readily, a little conscience-stricker at the idea of having a secret from her mother, but comforted by the thought of the good that would result if she could only find out what it was the Fat Lady ate to make her so extremely plump. Mummy looked thinner than ever in her short-sleeved, blue bed-jacket, so Aunty Eva said when she arrived, rather disturbed by the fog outside, all, to take command of the kitchen.

"Roast lamb and mint sauce, isn't it, Betty? I'll make a gooseberry pie and some jam puffs while I'm about it. Betty, you can run out and pick some mint, dear. That's all I shall want you to do. I like to have the kitchen to myself when I am cooking."

Betty ran out into the garden, where her father and Uncle Henry were deep in a discussion about green fly and its remedies. She picked a generous bunch of mint and, having placed it on the kitchen table, slipped out of the kitchen door and down the road in the direction of the fair ground, feeling a trifle nervous at the idea of entering it alone.

She lingered on the outskirts for a time before summoning up enough courage to approach the caravans. There seemed to be no one stirring, so evidently the fair people enjoyed a lie-in bed late on Sunday. Betty looked about her a little dismayed, and was wondering what on earth she was going to do next when a big biscuit in a tin, with a puppy and a kitten on the lid, and scampered up to her.

"Here, Bob! Come here, lad!" cried a deep voice, and down the caravan steps came the Fat Lady, wearing a gaudy dressing-gown and a pair of satin slippers on her bulging feet.

"Don't be frightened, ducks," she cried, with a beaming smile on her huge face. "Bob won't hurt you. Are you looking for someone? We all lie abed late on Sundays. I was just in the middle of my breakfast when I saw you."

"Oh, were you," Betty hesitated a moment, her eyes on the remains of the meal on the table in front of the caravan door. "I wonder — oh would you mind telling me what you have for breakfast? You see, Mummy has been ill, and the doctor says she must get fatter, so I thought if you found you could tell me what she ought to eat," said Betty breathlessly.

"Well, you don't look as if you be as fat as I am, do you dearie?" The Fat Lady appeared highly amused. "I eat anything that comes along. I usually have kippers for breakfast; but this morning I'm having a bit of corned beef. Come along and have a look at the caravan while I finish. I've some sugar biscuits in a tin. Most little girls like them."

Betty was no exception. She munched at the biscuits while the Fat Lady ate 's huge piece of corned beef, followed by thick slices of bread and butter with plum jam.

Betty watched her, fascinated in the intervals of attending to the van and its contents.

"Hallo. Bob! Good doggie !" called a soft voice outside the caravan. The next moment a slim figure mounted the steps and paused on the threshold as she realised the Fat Lady was not alone.

"Can I come in, aunty ? I see you have a visitor," said the girl, her filling glance resting on Betty, who in her pink frock and fluffy golden hair and cornflower blue eyes could only belong to the Fairy Lady of whom Aunty Connie had spoken.

"Come in, dear; you're always welcome," said the Fat Lady kindly when little lady has come to find out what I eat to make me fat, and for the life of me I can't tell her," she added, with a chuckle.

"It's 'cos of mummy. She's so thin since she was ill, and the doctor says she must get fat somehow," explained Betty earnestly. "I thought perhaps the Fat Lady could tell me what she ought to eat; but, as she can't, perhaps I'd better go—"

"Then she turned out of the bed where she had been sitting, her brown eyes full of disappointment that the Fairy Lady least forward and took her hand.

"It was a fine idea, and I'm sure the Fat Lady would help you if she could," she said, with a gentle smile that seemed to the child in some strange way familiar. "Do you live far away, dear? And what is your name? Aren't you going to the fair?"

"I live at Number one, Ferry Cottages, and my name is Carter, Elizabeth Katherine Carter. I was called after Princess Elizabeth and my Aunty Kitty mummy's sister, who ran away to do dancing—"

"Elizabeth Katherine Carter! What is your mother's name, dear? What does daddy call her I mean?" asked the Fairy Lady in a tone of intense eagerness.

"Daddy calls her Mary."

"And is daddy's name David ?" Yes." Betty nodded, wide-eyed, as the Fairy Lady drew a long breath, and said:

"And your mummy live in a place called Hickory once; a little country village—"

"Yes she did ! Aunty Kitty lived there, too. Mummy keeps her photo on the bureau, always. I get my hair and coat. Oh, aunty, isn't it wonderful to think I shall see my own dear sister again?"

"And all through this little lady!" The Fat Lady beamed at Betty, who smiled back, her disappointment at the failure of her errand forgotten in the excitement of the news and charming relation.

Aunty Kitty was back in a few minutes. Betty was too young to notice the lines which anxiety and hardship had formed round the sensitive lips, or to realise the effort behind the Fairy Lady's gaiety. She only knew that Aunty Kitty was almost as sweet as mummy, and gayer than she had ever been, even before her illness. She thrust her hand into her new aunty's with eager confidence, anxious to reach home as soon as possible and tell mummy the wonderful news.

There was no one in sight when they reached Perry Cottages, but Betty, scampering round to the back, caught a glimpse of her mother sitting under the apple tree.

"There she is. There's mummy !" She turned to Aunty Kitty, who paused uncertainly, gave a little cry of joy, and sped across the grass to fall on her knees beside the slender figure in the wicker chair.

"Mary! It's Kitty. Oh, Mary darling, it is wonderful to see you again," said Kitty, between laughing and crying.

"Kitty ! Is it really you ?? It you only knew how I've longed to see you," cried Mary, her pale face flushed with delight as her sister's arms were round her. "Tell me everything, Kitty ! How did you get here ? Where have you come from ? I wrote to you often. Why didn't you reply to my letters ?"

"Because I was too ashamed; because my luck was so bad," said Kitty, with downcast head. "I was out of a job for months. I had one or two temporary engagements, and finally had to come down to dancing in a travelling fair entertainment. It was up on the fair ground that Betty found me this morning — and who here's David ?" she cried, springing to her feet as her brother-in-law came out of the house. "Do you remember me, David ? It's Kitty turned up again !"

"And you're welcome, too !" David stooped and gave her a hearty kiss, while Betty leant against her mother's knee, her little face beaming with contentment.

"I brought Aunty Kitty here, daddy," she announced. "I went to see the Fat Lady at the fair, and she came into the caravan while I was there."

"Good girl !" Her daddy rumpled her hair affectionately, while Kitty turned to the story of her misfortunes for his benefit.

"I haven't had any letters from Mary for years, and didn't even know where you were living," she said, "but that isn't surprising, seeing how I've been moving about," she added, with a wistful smile. "You don't know how sick I am of the travelling and discomfort of it all."

"Well you can put an end to it now," said David with a kindly hand on her shoulder. "Give up the show and stay with us for a little. You need someone to look after her, and later on I fancy my brother can find you a post as waitress in his tea-room. He was telling me just now that one of his girls is leaving to be married at the end of May. You should be only too glad to have your here and know Mary's got someone longing for someone of her own to keep her company."

"I'd have ! Oh, Kitty say you'll stay !" Mary begged. "It will be so glorious to have you."

"Stay ! I should love to." Kitty's eyes were misty with tears of thankfulness, and her lips were trembling as she bent to kiss her sister. "What do you say, Betty ? Will you have me ?"

"Of course I will, aunty !" the small niece joyfully. "I thought you didn't like it ? If I hadn't gone to see the fat lady I wouldn't have found you at all."

"And why did you go to see her, darling ? You haven't told us yet," said her mother, with a fond smile.

"Because I wanted to find out what she eats to make her so fat, so that you could have some and get fat like the doctor said you must," explained Betty, her face very serious. "But she doesn't eat anything special, so it wasn't much good going. I'm glad you've found me, though," I don't want you to get as fat as her, but just nice and plump—"

"And so she will now she has me to look after her. I'll see to that," said Kitty, while Mary and David exchanged glances of tender amusement over their small daughter's head.

Mary gave a sigh of deep content as she drew the child to her side. To have one of her own kith and kin at hand, and that one her beloved Kitty—the prospect seemed to send new strength coursing through her veins already. She rose unaided, as the door opened and the cook in the kitchen door to signal that dinner was ready.

"That roast lamb smells quite delicious I declare I feel quite hungry," she said. "Come along, Kitty ! You should be only too glad to have your here and know Mary's got someone longing for someone of her own to keep her company."

"I have ! Oh, Kitty say you'll stay !" Mary begged. "It will be so glorious to have you."

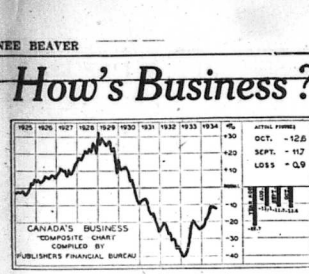
"Stay ! I should love to." Kitty's eyes were misty with tears of thankfulness, and her lips were trembling as she bent to kiss her sister. "What do you say, Betty ? Will you have me ?"

"Of course I will, aunty !" the small niece joyfully. "I thought you didn't like it ? If I hadn't gone to see the fat lady I wouldn't have found you at all."

"And why did you go to see her, darling ? You haven't told us yet," said her mother, with a fond smile.

"Because I wanted to find out what she eats to make her so fat, so

How's Business?



CANADIAN BUSINESS STABILIZES RECENT GAINS

Important as may be the local problems and developments of various sections of the country, the paramount question is "How is the general level of business — agricultural, industrial and financial — for the country as a whole, averaging up?" The Composite Index of Canada's basic barometers—employment, carloadings, prices, production and the like—is showing a slight hesitancy in business at present. Preliminary indications for October place business activity at about 12.6 per cent below "normal," compared with 11.1 per cent below in August, and the September figure revised to indicate latest reports dropped slightly from August.

When compared with the depression low of 40 per cent below normal, there is striking evidence of a splendid recovery in Canada. In fact, the past twelve months should have witnessed a gain of 12 per cent. The current period of irregularity is not surprising in view of the sharper declines which have been experienced recently in other countries. The problem of world trade is particularly serious for Canada and one which many economists feel must be untangled before much greater gains in recovery can occur. Moreover political factors in the Dominion itself are casting a shadow ahead. Perhaps the best barometer of current industrial conditions is employment figures which reached, in October, a new high since November 1931. In this between-season interval, the sense of activity is drifting from such lines as communications, highway and railway construction, hotels and restaurants, fish preserving, and rubber manufacturing to logging, mining, textiles, electrical equipment, food products, paper and paper. Mining is showing its greatest employment gain on record, while bush operations are apparently offering jobs in increasing numbers. These facts point to good opportunities in coming months and it must not be forgotten that farmers—accounting 29 per cent of Canada's gainfully employed workers—about 25 to 30 per cent more purchasing power this year, than last.

Wholesale and retail trade is picking up in response to the weather and the approaching holiday season. The heavy industries are still lagging behind consumer- lines. However, some improvement in construction (now about 45 per cent above a year ago) and pig iron production is encouraging. In the financial world, outstanding developments have been the inauguration of new low interest rates on Dominion deposits, and the opening of the Canadian Commodity Exchange for silver futures trading. A drop in bank debits reflect curtailed financial and speculative activity rather than shrinkage of general trade.

More About Photo-Greetings

(Left)—"The family is on the march to greet you." That, or something of the sort, serves to complete a greeting like this, made in the easy silhouette manner. (Right)—A little "fifteen cent store" reindeer made of glass, a toy Christmas tree and some sugar—that's all this table-top Christmas scene required.

A WEEK or so ago we talked about snapshot Christmas cards, but no one short discussion could possibly cover the subject adequately. A book could be written about it—but not by us. Instead we'll devote today's space to it.

As we said before, the most important factor in the success of a photocreeting is an idea—an easily understood, cheerful idea, worked out in terms of a simple picture.

The subjects referred to in our first talk of Christmas cards were deliberately selected from among the more obvious ones — fireside, holly wreaths, winter scenes of the home, and so on. Obvious though they are, any of them is capable of fresh, new interpretation—as individual as your own personality.

And, as you become more familiar with your camera and its capabilities, you'll discover many different approaches to any one idea.

You can use, for example, story-telling silhouettes to give novel twists to otherwise "ordinary" picture ideas. A good silhouette can be made of a young lady hanging up a bit of mistletoe, or of a little boy reaching for a Christmas tree ornament. Silhouettes, as you recall, are made with the help of a sheet, a doorway and a strong light.

Table-top photography (discussed recently) has endless Christmas possibilities. A little figure of Santa Claus, some white cotton sprinkled with sugar for snow . . . and you've got the foundation for a variety of good pictures.

You'll find plenty of Christmas materials — little reindeer, gnomes, sleighs, bells and a hundred other seasonable "props" in any "five, ten and fifteen cent" store. But guard against over-elaborate set-ups. The simpler the better.

Whatever you do, be careful to keep it in key with your own personality. If you are musical, a glimpse of your hands on the piano keyboard plus sheet music for a Christmas carol on the rack, would be much more appropriate than, say, a shot of your snow-covered home. Or a page with your head lifted, singing, if you find you look well that way.

A baby in the family of course, offers plenty of opportunity for growing snapshots. If this is the baby's first Christmas, so much the better. A semi-close-up of mother and dad, indoors or out, with the baby perched on dad's shoulders and all three waving cheerfully at the camera, should make a greeting of more than ordinary charm.

Christmas isn't far away now. You'll be wanting to send out your greetings soon. So don't delay!

For snow scenes in bright sunlight, remember to use a very small lens aperture. Otherwise, the intense brilliance of the scene will give you an over-exposed negative.

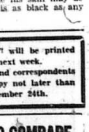
A Negro bishop was introducing an English churchman of high rank, "Brethern," he said, "it is not often I arise to present a white gentleman to this church. But you can be sure he has a powerful message for you." And while his skin may be little, his heart is as black as any of us!"

NOTHING TO COMPARE WITH BUCKLEY'S FOR COUGHS AND COLDS.



G. Billings of Colonsay, Sask., ought to know, for he has taken BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE for a cough. He writes: "There is nothing on the market to equal it. Its flash - like action is sudden death to a cold."

No matter how stubborn or long standing your cough or cold may be, try BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE. You will be amazed at the instant relief it affords. The very first sip relieves the cough, and in no time at all clears up the deep-seated congestion soothes and heals the tender, inflamed membranes and fortifies them against future attacks.

Buckley's acts like a flash—A single sip proves it.

The young people are very much worth while and are of mutual benefit.

Mr. Henry Martin has aroused considerable interest in former times by producing a number of tax bills, reports, etc., which have been in the possession of his family for a number of years. One of special interest is the financial statement of Selby circuit of the former Methodist Church, dated 1875-6, just two years after the present Selby church was built. In reviewing the list of contributors of the five appointments many interesting memories have been revived. It is noted that of the Selby charge, all have passed on with the exception of Mrs. Minor McKim, who later married the late Mr. Wm. Valleau, and is residing with her family, in the West.

The question "Were former times better than these," has been much discussed, and still remains unanswered to the satisfaction of all. However, it is the privilege of the present generation to prove themselves worthy of their inheritance. How ?— by remembering the Sabbath day and obeying the Ten Commandments.

The cheese factory, one of the oldest in the district, has closed operations, after a most successful season.

Parkhouse; Carne Funnell and Jim Sherman, and Bryce Moore and E. Moore; also readings by Mrs. Frank Parks, Mrs. E. Huffman and Miss McConkey. There were sixty present and it was a most delightful evening.

Remember the special birthday meeting of Sand Hill Ladies' Aid on Wednesday evening, November 28th, at 8:00 p.m. Seven years ago this Aid was organized and you are especially invited to come to the birthday party.

Rev. A. E. Oliver of Morven preached in Sand Hill Church on Sunday afternoon.

The Anderson Young People's Union held their semi-monthly meeting at the parsonage on Tuesday evening, with a good attendance. The evening was spent in games and contests with a short address by the minister. The Young People's Union are to be responsible for the social hour at the special Ladies' Aid supper, which is being held on Tuesday evening, November 27th, at 7:00 a.m., at the home of the president, Mrs. Allan Baldwin.

Miss Wilma Purrs was in Napanee last week and attended the Teachers' Training School, which was held in Grace United Church.

Everyone is invited to attend the special supper which is being served at the home of Mrs. Allan Baldwin, on Tuesday evening, November 27th, at 7:00 p.m., under the auspices of Anderson Ladies' Aid.

The Anderson Sunday School banquet is being held at the church on Tuesday evening, December 4th, at 7:00 p.m.

Canada Honors Prince By Giving Holiday To School Children

Prince George's Marriage On Thursday

Ontario's school children will have a holiday in honour of the marriage of Prince's Marina of Greece and the Duke of Kent. Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, announced that all schools in the Province would close on Thursday, November 29th, in honor of the marriage day of the youngest son of his Majesty, King George.

The announcement followed an Ottawa suggestion, made through Hon. C. H. Cahan by his Excellency the Earl of Bessborough.

The Procedure at the Wedding

London—Officially there will be no best man at the Royal wedding of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina November 29th.

Contrary to the general belief that the Prince of Wales would officiate alone for his younger brother, it was learned that both the Prince and the Duke of York will act as his "supporters."

It was also disclosed that the Duke will be married in naval uniform. He has chosen the hymns which are to be sung at the ceremony, and has given his approval of a special anthem "Alleluia Alleluia," the music for which was composed by Dr. Ernest Bullock, the Abbey organist.

There will be two ceremonies, it has been decided, both of them full of age-old religious ritual. The first will be the Church of England service at Westminster Abbey, where a long line of kings and queens lie buried.

The second will be a Greek Orthodox service. This will take place immediately afterward in a private chapel at Buckingham Palace where the King and Queen worship each Sunday while the Royal Court is in London.

1500 Guests to Attend

More than 1,200 guests will witness the ceremony in the Abbey. Only a few, possibly not more than 70, will attend the private ceremony at the Palace.

Under Royal precedence Cabinet members, former Cabinet members and members of the diplomatic corps, many of them in brilliant uniform, glittering with orders and awards, will be seated in the choir stalls.

Prominent personages, both men and women, will occupy seats in the transepts under plans worked out by the Lord Chamberlain, whose duty it is to make most of the arrangements.

The members of the British and the former Greek Royal Houses will occupy places in the Sacrarium, flanked on either side by high ecclesiastics and guests of the Royal Houses. Immediately in front of this august group will be the white-decked altar, gleaming with magnificent gold plate belonging to the Abbey. Custom dictates that the plate be thus displayed on such an occasion.

In other sections of the Abbey further color will be given by the presence of the King's Honorable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms and the Yeomen of the Guard. The former will wear their uniforms of scarlet and gold topped off by a waving white.

The King and Queen and the immediate members of their families will enter after all the other guests have been seated.

Meanwhile, the Dean of the Abbey, Dr. Foxley Norris, the Canon of Westminster, and other functionaries concerned with the intricacies of the ceremony, will gather at the west door awaiting the arrival of the bride and bridegroom.

All the clergy will be vested in magnificent copes. In addition the Abbey clergy will wear the magnificassock prescribed for such occasions.

Archbishop to Officiate

The Dean will read the exhortation of the marriage service itself, with the Archbishop of Canterbury officiating at the actual plighting of the troth. The first of the marriage blessings also will be pronounced by the Archbishop.

The psalms will be chanted by the Abbey choir, assisted by the "children and gentlemen" of the Chapel Royal. The Rev. Cyril Armitage, Abbey Precentor, will chant the suffrages.

At the altar the remaining prayers will be recited by the Archbishop of York. From this point the Archbishop of Canterbury then will address the newly - married couple, afterwards reciting the concluding benediction.

The ceremony will be completed with the official signing of the marriage registers by the bride and bridegroom and the official witnesses. For this ceremony the party will pass behind the Abbey's high altar into the Chapel of St. Edward the Confessor, where they will find the registers laid out on an oaken table. One of the registers belongs to the Abbey. The other is the special register of royal marriages.

The royal party will leave the Abbey by the same west door, repairing immediately to Buckingham Palace for the Greek Orthodox ceremony.

The first pumpkin pies were made by cutting a hole in the pumpkin, extracting the seeds and fibrous matter, stuffing the cavity with apples, spices, sugar and milk, and then baking the whole.

The First Contribution

Two little girls have made the first contribution to The Beaver Santa Claus Fund, this year. The girls are Bobby Wilson and Katherine Simpson.

They have, recently, been making and selling homemade candy and on Saturday they brought into the office, $4.00 the proceeds of their sale, which they wanted to go to the Santa Claus Fund.

This fine contribution is very gratefully acknowledged It makes a fine start for the fund.

Convention In Napanee East.-Ont. Dairymen

Will Meet Here In January

On Thursday, November 22nd, Mr. T. A. Thompson, M.P., of Almonte, Member of the Federal House at Ottawa for Lanark, and Secretary of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, was in Napanee making arrangements for the 38th Annual Convention, to be held here on January 3rd and 4th, 1935.

This will be the first time in a number of years the convention has been held in this County. The association takes in all the territory from Toronto, east, comprising a constituency of 18 Counties.

Mr. Thompson has been Secretary of the Association for 25 years, and has been Member of the Provincial House and Dominion Government for twelve years. Mr. W. A. Edwards, of Aultsville, is the President of the Association, and each of the 18 Counties have one Director. The Lennox and Addington Director is Mr. P. J. Murphy, of Enterprise, well known in the cheese industry of the County.

At the sessions on both days of the convention there will be addresses from the leading dairy experts in Canada. It is expected that among the speakers will be J. F. Singleton, Dairy Commissioner for Canada; Mr. Cro. Barr, Director of Dairies in Ontario, and Mr. L. A. Zufelt, Principal of the Dairy School at Kingston.

Several hundred delegates and people interested in the dairy industry will likely attend the convention.

County Judging Team Won Eighteenth Place At Winter Fair

Last week, Mr. C. W. Buchanan, the local Department of Agriculture representative, accompanied the county livestock judging team to the Royal Winter Fair, in Toronto, where they took part in the judging competition.

The team, consisting of Godfrey Barr, Robert McFarlane, Donald Paul and Basil Ballance, won eighteenth place. There were thirty teams in the competition.

Donald Paul, in the individual standing competitions, won a $10.00 prize, donated by the Royal Winter Fair.

Pools Being Held To Pack Poultry

Dominion Now in Midst of Gathering Important Harvest

Ottawa — Canadais in the midst of gathering one of its very important harvests, that of dressed poultry. Over 20,000,000 pounds will have been prepared for the market, between November 1 and Christmas. Already five hundred pools are being held to trade and pack poultry. Five were held in the Ottawa Valley last week. In Caseiman, for example, sixteen tons of dressed poultry was prepared.

These pools are a comparatively new undertaking, and one of the most picturesque developments of farm life since barn-raising and corn-husking bees passed out of existence. It is a big get-together day for the farmers of the district. It is even more entertaining than the custom of a few decades ago when farmers joined to do "statute labor" on the roads.

Poultry Graded

The farmers who belong to the association, are notified that a pool will be held, usually at the Township Hall on a given day. They dress their poultry the day before, all hands on the farm being employed for the task. The dressed poultry is brought to the hall, where Government inspectors grade them. The chickens, ducks, geese and turkeys are sorted into the various grades and tagged.

The manner with which boxes are made, has been shipped in cut size, and the boxes into which the poultry is to be packed, are constructed on the spot. The work of packing and packing is done by the farmers themselves. They also do the stencilling.

At Caseiman, forty farmers took part,

Packed in Boxes

The boxes contain twelve chickens, as a rule, the size of the box varying to meet the size of the chickens The product is then sent to cold storage plants and eventually reaches the consumer. The sale is arranged by officers of the association.

Government officials will grade about 1,000,000 pounds of poultry this year, and it is estimated that fully as much more is sold without grading, throughout the year. While there is a seady sale every month in the year, the bulk comes from the farms during November and December.

Suspended, Is Askd By Premier To Prove Charges

Toronto. — M. A. Sorosleil. Ontario Deputy-Minister of Welfare, is suspended until he can answer to charges of vice in the schools of the province, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said, recently.

Mr. Hepburn conferred with Hon. David A. Croll. Ontario Minister of Welfare, regarding the Sorosleil charges, and said he had nothing more to say.

"It's up to the deputy — or exdeputy," the Premier declared. Mr. Hepburn declared he had literally been bombarded with protests by the Deputy-Minister's reported statements.

Bishop Lyons At St. Mary's Church For Confirmation

On Sunday morning, the impressive confirmation service of the Anglican Church in Canada, was conducted by the Lord Bishop of Ontario, Rt. Rev. John D. Lyons, at St. Mary Magdalen Church, Napanee.

The Vicar, Venerable Archdeacon Dumbrille, presented the class which numbered eighteen. Following the ceremony of confirmation, the Lord Bishop preached and the choir rendered music suitable to the occasion

A large number of members of the church were present to take part in the service.

Large Quantities Fowl Expected in Napanee At Annual Poultry Fair

First Fair This Week Wed. and Thurs.

The first of Napanee's Poultry Fairs for the 1934 season, will be held this week, on Wednesday Thursday, November 28 and 29, second fair will be held on Friday December 14th.

The fair, this week, is expected take care of the greatest amount the season's produce. The latter has been arranged to provide market for turkeys, particularly and any fowl which needs the extra time in which to mature.

Pool Arranging Fair

As in the past few years, the Lennox and Addington Poultry Pools making arrangements for the fair. Mr. W. A. Ballance of Strathcona is president; Mr. Irvine Brooks, of Sillsville, vice-president, and Mr. T. D. Creighton, is secretary-treasurer. All poultry brought into the town on the fair days, intended for the pool, will be taken to the Armouries. Government graders will have charge of the grading and will supervise the packing and shipping. The work of packing will be conducted by local farmers.

Last year, the pool purchased over thirty-five tons of poultry on the fair days. The price of the pool is to pay, on the day fo the sale, a percentage of the final price realized. The balance is paid at a later date, when the produce has finally been disposed of.

Different Methods Today

The quantity of poultry sold on the Poultry Fair Days is much smaller now than some years ago. The conditions are quite different. Producers are being educated to prepare their poultry for the open at different dates in the year, when as some years ago it was the aim of farmers to have all their fowl ready for the market about the pool dates. Today, farm produce is supplied to people who would and almost every week. Instead of the dressed fowl, and the live cattle, are being made. The pay roll to the farmers is just as great, if not greater than in days past, and the poultry fair tonnage does not show up as well as formerly.

The local poultry pool has been instrumental in maintaining the price, by buying on the fair days and holding the stock purchased until the most advantageous markets presented themselves in the larger centres.

Among the independent buyers who are expected to be in the market for poultry on Wednesday and Thursday, will be representatives of The T. Eaton Company, Limited.

Mr. H. Grange Visits Home Town Following Serious Accident

Mr. Hugh Grange a former well-known resident of Napanee, is making one of his periodical visits to Napanee.

Mr. Grange is just recovering from the results of a serious accident, which occurred to him some months ago in Niagara Falls, N.Y. While leaving the curb, one day, to board a street car, he was struck by a passing car, operated by what proved to be a hit-and-run driver. For five months Mr. Grange was confined to his bed. Although able to be about now, he is still suffering from the effects of the accident.

After spending a few days in town, Mr. Grange is returning to Niagara Falls.

Distribution Committee Acknowledge Receipt Of West Relief Car

Chamberlain. Sask.,
November 12th, 1934.

The Secretary United Church,
Napanee, Ont.

Dear Sir.—The people of Chamberlain and district have asked me to write you a letter of heartful thanks and appreciation for the kindly and generous gift of fruit, vegetables, clothing, etc., received by them recently from your people.

No doubt you have realized that during the past five years crops and pastures have been almost failures, resulting in many hardships. Your timely gift is bringing comfort and happiness to people who would otherwise have been entering the long cold winter season with an inadequate supply of clothing and foodstuffs, especially vegetables, which are so necessary during that season. It is extremely difficult to convey to you by letter each individual case to whom assistance has been rendered, but, when summed up we wish you to know that your car was distributed among one hundred and fifteen needy families, which, with an average of five to a family, approximates six hundred persons so that you may be enabled to realize the amount of good you people have done.

The contents of the car reached us in perfect condition, and we wish to say that the quality could not be surpassed. We are thankful that Canada possesses a place where crops of such excellence are grown and where people of such largeness of heart, fulfill the Master's teaching of sharing with those less fortunate than themselves.

In order that all those participating in donations contained in the car may become acquainted with our thanks and appreciation may we suggest that your local newspapers publish an article telling of the distribution and the thankfulness of the people whom they have benefitted.

Thanking you once again, we remain, yours gratefully.

Belleville Presbytery Convened John St. Church, Belleville

The November meeting of Belleville Presbytery was convened in John St. United Church, Belleville, last Tuesday, with Rev. E. W. Rowland, chairman, presiding. Ministers and laymen from every section of the Presbytery were present.

During the business sessions, arrangements were made for the Moderator's Mission in Kingston, February 10th to 14th, 1935 ; thanks were expressed for the car load of vegetables that went forward to Western Canada; letters of sympathy were ordered sent to Rev. A. J. Wilson, Mrs. (Rev.) Walter Smart, Mrs. (Rev.) James Wood and Mr. Cartwright Hawley; a committee was appointed to study plans for a Ministers' Superannuation Fund, and arrangements for the next Presbytery meeting which will be held in Holloway United Church, Belleville, in February.

The main feature of this Presbytery was the spiritual conferences which were held in an upper room in the spacious Sunday School hall. Those in charge of these meetings were Rev. Frank Raynor and Mr. Peter Fletcher, both of Birmingham, England, and who are now in Toronto, assisting in the supplying of Sherbourne Street United Church, during the Moderator's term of office. These two young men, one a minister and the other a layman, have travelled in many parts of the world and have been, in these later days, taking a prominent part in the Oxford Group Movement.

They conducted, during the day,

Napanee Drama Group Present "Peer Gynt"

Splendid Attendance At Reading

The monthly open meeting of the Napanee Drama Group was held, last Thursday evening, in the auditorium of the Collegiate Institute.

The aim of the group is to stimulate interest in the best drama of these and other days. Henrik Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" was the theme on November 22nd.

Ibsen took "Peer Gynt's" name and character from a Norwegian folk tale and by the power of his genius, Mrs. Wiliams immortalized one of the egotistic, vacillating, indecisive side of human nature.

The hero is a mountain peasant, dreamy vagrant, loquacious, whose career is a selfish pursuit of experiences in many lands. His purpise is to please himself and to escape the unpleasant, at all times. He becomes a proud expert. In the play, various characters of symbolic figures, drawn from the mythologies of Norway mingle with the human characters, making the play difficult to interpret. This task of interpretation was performed by Mr. C. L. Graham who, when read by him, enabled the audience to personally feel and to see, with perfect clearness, the steady deterioration of "Peers" characters and the bitterness and heartache he caused in the lives of those who were fated to know him.

At each fresh unfolding of the drama, as outlined by Mr. Graham, Mrs. Harry Williams and Mrs. Katherine Powell read the lines of the poem. Mrs. Williams through out portrayed the characters of "Peers" character and the bitterness and heartache he caused in the lives of those who were fated to know him.

At each fresh unfolding of the drama, as outlined by Mr. Graham, Mrs. Harry Williams and Mrs. Katherine Powell read the lines of the poem. Mrs. Williams throughout portrayed the characters of "Peers" character and the bitterness and heartache he caused in the lives of those who were fated to know him.

The drama is divided into five acts, each of which is a complete picture of the egotistic, vacillating, indecisive side of human nature.

THE SORSOLEIL CHARGES

Speaking before the Toronto Centre Presbytery on Tuesday, Milton A. Sorsoleil, the Deputy Minister of Social Welfare, made some grave charges concerning the prevalency of immoral practices and excessive smoking among the school children of Ontario. Such a storm of protest from all over the Province, followed the publication of the charges, that the Government has suspended the Deputy Minister until such time as he proves his statements.

From time to time, we hear rumors such as the Deputy Minister has made, but proof of facts behind the rumors are never to be had. Some years ago, a similar statement was publicly made about our Napanee Collegiate, but no one took it seriously, or the one who made it, when pressed for proof, admitted it was all hearsay. But this is quite different from a Deputy Minister making a statement. For, in his case, he is expected to speak with some knowledge and with the responsibility of his high office. We are pleased that Mr. Sorsoleil will be given an opportunity to produce his evidence. And yet, even if the conditions in some schools should be found as he described them, it seems hardly good practice to draw general conclusions about the whole school system, on the basis of a few particular instances. In the Napanee schools the strictest sort of supervision is given to all pupils while on the premises. All sorts of extra curricula activities are organized and the youthful exuberance directed towards athletics, music and other interests of a practical and absorbing nature.

It is true that there is more cigarette smoking than there should be, among the 'teen age pupils. There can be no quarrel with an adult using the weed in any form he desires, but the effect on growing boys and girls, of the use of tobacco, cannot but have a rather bad effect on the intellectual and physical development.

On occasion, liquor has been discovered at certain of our school dances, brought there, it has been proven by those who were not members of the school, but guests for the evening. The eternal vigilance of the staff, however, has reduced those incidents to a minimum and saved the good name of the school. But were it not for the high calibre of the pupils and high school teachers and their care for the character of the pupils, conditions would, indeed, be much worse than they are. Adults vote for liquor and then wonder why young people get hold of it. They permit beer to flood the province and somehow or other are surprised when their own children drink it. No matter how perfect an institution the school is, it can never take the place of the influence of home training. We will never eliminate abuses from the youth of our land until parents are willing to sacrifice their own pleasure and appetite for the sake of their children.

The remarks which have called forth such a discussion were made during a rather lengthy speech, in which Mr. Sorsoleil was pleading for support on the part of the Church, for the social and moral welfare of the school children of the Province. To pick one or two sentences out of a long and excellent address and exaggerate them out of all proportion to the rest of the address, is quite unfair, both to the speaker and his message. If, however, the tempest awakens in the Province a few realizations with which modern youth is surrounded and elicits support for every effort to remove them, it may have served a useful purpose, indeed.

ALL SET

No interest seems to have been overlooked in the preparations for the wedding of Prince George and Princess Marina, on Thursday. The pubs will be allowed to stay open until 4:00 a.m., all week — the navy will get an extra ration of rum — the school children will have a holiday — and the Prince has his salary increased from $75,000 to $125,000 a year.

FOR SICK CHILDREN

One department of our Provincial Government's activities which receives less attention than it deserves, is its educational provision for sick and incapacitated children. Year after year, in a quiet, unostentatious manner, the work goes on. Were it not for this care and interest, many and many a child in Ontario would have to go through life handicapped by the lack of those fundamentals of education, which are so essential.

There are thousands of children in Ontario who are unable to attend the public schools in the regular way. They may have been born with a frail body, which prevents them taking their place in a public institution of learning. They may have contracted some ailment which makes it necessary that they remain in the home for a year or more. These and countless other causes, prevent a large number from attending the public schools in the regular manner. It is here that the Department of Education comes to the rescue. The parents of such a child present a doctor's certificate to the Department and request individual instruction in the home. At once, the child is registered, and the materials for study sent him — paper, pencils, books and instruction forms. Under the guidance of parent or older brother or sister, the first lesson is studied. The questions are then answered and sent to the Department in Toronto. These are carefully corrected and returned with helpful, encouraging and kindly comments. Subsequent lessons progressively graded are similarly sent, studied, examined, and returned.

This is one of the departments of the Government's work of which little is known by the general public. But it is on of the most helpful and kindly offices which is performs. Thousands of children are helped and encouraged by its provisions and a load of worry is lifted from the backs of parents who would often find it extremely difficult to keep their delicate children constructively employed, or to find the means of providing an education during the formative years of their lives.

The whole of this service, including materials and books, is entirely free, the cost being absorbed by the Department of Education.

DEMOCRACY AT ITS WORST

Ontario has often been called more British than England, but under the present Government it is demonstrating that the allegation no longer holds. Instead of following the precedent set by the Mother of Parliaments, the present Government has succumbed to the subtle influences of greed and patronage. It has adopted some of the worst and most un-British elements of Democracy — as it has come to be practiced in other States.

This week, a number of Government employees in Kingston have been discharged and their places taken by members of the present party in power. We have no intention of indulging in personalities. The newspaper in a small town is friendly with everybody. We know, intimately, those who have held the offices and those who succeed them. So far as the qualifications are concerned they are all equally capable. The honesty and efficiency of those who were discharged have never been questioned, and we believe that those who have been appointed are quite as capable as those who have been discharged. What causes grave concern, however, is the introduction of a principle which is bound to have a very sinister influence on the whole political life of the Province.

It is quite reasonable, of course, to expect that when a new appointment is made, that it should be made from among the friends of the party in power. Nobody could find fault with that procedure. But the policy of wholesale dismissals and replacements whenever there is a change of government, is something new in Ontario politics. The natural result of such a practice will be, inefficiency, or worse. Those who know that their tenure of office will terminate with a change of government, may be counted on to use their positions for political purposes, to lend every effort to keep their jobs by helping their party to retain power. While those who are out, will cast longing eyes at the positions they hope to secure when their time comes. They will be influenced in their voting, to a very large extent, by self interest. Their friends and their friends' friends will all be importuned into exercising the franchise in a manner that will bring them position and a safe salary.

Premier Hepburn has effected some much needed reorganization and some economies, but the introduction of a spoils system will be connected with his name, long after his finer achievements have been forgotten.

BILL THE LIZARD

(Researches in U.S.A. into the behaviour of several varieties of lizard indicate, it is said, that the gaudy colouring of many males has no effect upon the female lizards, as used to be supposed when the colours were regarded as a courting device. Such startling colour schemes have been developed "in order to terrify other males.")

There is a lizard which frequents
The smarter sort of pub,
Or else in summer ornaments
The road-house-country-club.
It is a beast of various hue,
And somewhat dubious fame;
He hair-is sleek, its clothes are new.
"Lounge-lizard" is its name.

This lizard in its colour scheme
Is often somewhat gay,
Which brave effects some people deem
An amorous array.
That view the wise inquirer shelves,
It will not stand the test;
The females, far more gay themselves,
Are wholly unimpressed.

Lounge-lizards do not dress that way
The female to regale;
It is a combative display
To daunt the rival male.
This lizard, in creation's plan,
Wears tags of brighter hew
To terrify his fellow-men—
And so, by gosh, they do.

LUCIO.

EAGLES IN HERALDRY

The restoration of the two-headed eagle, minus a crown, to the official flag of Austria, adds a new chapter to the long history of the most popular of heraldic birds. Persia is believed to have been the first nation to adopt the eagle as a symbol, and Rome followed suit under Tarquin, to whom an eagle is reported to have announced his royal power. Prussia acquired her eagle from the Teutonic knights, on whom it was conferred as a special mark of favor by the Emperor Frederick II. The origin of the Austrian double eagle is less clear. It appeared occasionally towards the end of the thirteenth century, and in 1325 appeared on the coin of Ludwig, the Bavarian, but opinions differ on whether it was intended to signify the division of the Roman Empire or the union of kingly and imperial power. There is no evidence, however, that the Romanus themselves symbolised the Eastern and West-ern Empire by a double eagle, and Kipling's centurion Parnesius, who told Dan and Una in "Puck of Pook's Hill" that "we split the eagle," would seem to have been referring Kipling-esquely to an historical rather than to an heraldic division.

Cheese imports into Canada during the past year were 567,613 lbs. as compared with 1,166,506 lbs. in 1932. These imports are made up largely of types and varieties that are not produced in Canada.

The native strawberry tree (arbutus unedo) of Ireland is not found in any adjacent country nearer than the Mediterranean region.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

November 23rd, 1934.

Secretary,
Lennox and Addington
Poultry Association.

Dear Sir:—

Owing to my attendance at the Municipal Council, which is held the same night as your poultry meeting, I am prevented from attending.

Ottawa. — Canada is in the midst of tratulations on the success of your recent banquet. Of course, the menu was only what could be expected, when put on by the ladies of our county, whose reputation for cooking is not excelled elsewhere in the world.

While the responsibility and labour was great, I know the committee in charge will feel gratified to know they have been successful in putting over one of the most orchestra banquets ever served within our county town of Napanee.

Again congratulating you, I remain,

Yours very truly,
A. S. HUGHSON, Reeve,
Napanee, Ont.

AN ENORMOUS DEVELOPMENT

If the air were an unsafe medium of travel, civil aviation would not have made the giant strides in popularity that it has made within recent years. In 1919, the year in which international travel began, the aggregate route mileage for the world was only 3,200 and the passenger flown that year was 1,000. By 1932 the route mileage had increased to 190,200, and in that year the number of miles flown reached the enormous total of 90,372,000. The lion's share of that traffic was taken by the United States, with its 50,932,969 miles flown and 540,681 passengers carried; but Great Britain, France, and Germany also have their network of air routes, and Canada, Russia, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Finland and Roumania are all served with air transport to a greater or less degree. — Melbourne Argus.

FATHER'S BIRTHDAY

(By Mrs. Louise Yates Towriss.)

"For the beauty of the earth,
For the beauty of the skies,
For the love that from our birth
Over and around us lies."

Father, unto Thee we raise
This our sacrifice of praise."

In the glorious sunshine of this perfect day, the giant maple stands in their gorgeous hues guarding the sacred spot. I am standing alone beside the mound of earth which we laid you to rest eight years ago. Do you remember, Father, that day in the Home Beyond, that this would have been your birthday anniversary down here?

In the old days, we were carefree and perchance oft wounded your love, and Father, you were grieved as you forgave our faults, and, by your strength, you stanched the flood which would harm and destroy; from your example, we have learned lessons of love. Father-love, type of God, who pardons offences, heals back-sliding and loves so freely.

"Father-like, He tends and spares us,
Well our feeble frame He knows,
In His hands He gently bears us,
Rescues us from all our foes."

You taught us to be pure and good and true, to be noble in thought and word and deed; you showed us how to toil for love's sweet sake, and how to endure. Many whatever life might contain for us. I recall your long drives through wind and weather to make possible our career at school. We appreciate your sacrifice, that we might have our chance.

I am standing alone today, your birthday, and my eyes grow so misty that I can scarcely discern the dates carved on the granite at your head—is it only eight years since we last saw your glad smile? Ah! It seems an age! But He doeth all things well.

"If joy should at Thy bidding fly,
And grief a dark hour come on,
We in our turn would meekly cry,
'Father, Thy Will be Done!'"

This would have been your birthday.—How many times through the years we children (and mother), came before you and wished you many happy returns of the day! I am wondering if you are wearying for the time when you may hold us to your heart again? We cannot return to us, but we may go to you.

As I say your glad smile to me, I am sure you are with me to be.

The writer of the above article is well-known in Napanee, where she made many friends a few years ago, as the adopted daughter of the Mother and Daughter banquet.

Husband: If a man steals, no matter what, he will live to regret it.

Wife (coyly): You used to steal kisses from me before we were married.

Husband: Well, you heard what I said.

It took 300 years to popularise the potato in Europe, and only dire necessity forced the country cottager to include it among his vegetables.

Editorial Comment

DARING EXAMPLE

Here is a fine precedent. Kingston puritan Kingston, former Stronghold of Dr. Edwards, has authorized slot machines. Without caring a hoot for the Federal law, the Orange city has decided to let the worst type of amusement, the slot machines, be in high, wide and handsome. A very heavy tax will be imposed on these machines, and Kingston knows there will be plenty of them. This is a lesson to the timid and the weak-kneed. No one would object to such a thing as a State lottery and who would join the Government in seizing every prize that comes out of the Dublin or Cork lotteries. And especially, it is a categoric and audacious challenge to the Federal law. Patience! On this, too, public opinion will finally overcome the stupidity of politicians.—"L'Illustration, Montreal.

THE DOMINIONS AND THE PACIFIC

The first and dominating consideration at this moment from the British point of view is that, even if the Japanese could end in a break-down, and if, as seems certain, the consequence were, to be a large increase in the already huge American building programme, this country would not be at all disturbed in its naval preparations. It would regard the increase with complete composure, for it is totally impossible to imagine a contingency which would bring the Navies of the American and British Empire into conflict. War between them would be the end of our civilisation. It is unthinkable. And not only would the United Kingdom and the United States; the parts of the Empire which have a Pacific seaboard are still less likely to quarrel with the growth of American sea-power. Canada and Australia are quite as closely interested in the balance of power in the Pacific as the United Kingdom, and even more directly. The solution of this naval problem is their concern as much as ours. No solution is in fact possible that does not involve their consent 'and cooperation. Here plainly is where not the Empire statesmen who will be gathered together in London next summer.—London Times.

CANADA: A CONTRAST

Two loan results are announced from the North American Continent which give grounds for serious consideration. Canada and the United States have both been renewed in the refunding of maturing indebtedness. The Dominion, proceeding by way of cash and conversion, offered the equivalent of $50,000,000. The United States, which did not invite any new money, had to provide for $250,000,000. Canada's terms were rather more favourable to the investor, but the fact remains that in eleven days its issue has been oversubscribed, whereas that of its bigger neighbour has been only about $2 per cent. successful after dragging on for a little more than a month. As a further $374,000,000 of the fourth Liberty four-and-a-quarter per cent. bonds has been called for redemption on 15th April next, the U. S. Treasury is evidently satisfied with the response. But it does not make a very flattering comparison with the Canadian result, or with the 93-per cent. acceptance of our own £2,000,000,000 War Loan conversion. — London Financial Times.

SHORT, BUT NOT SWEET

The death of Herr Alfons Adolph, who claimed to be the inventor of the picture postcard (from which, as is the experience of most inventors, he obtained little profit for himself), suggests the reflection that the history of the picture postcard will be curiously less important, so far as can be judged by present experience than that of the ordinary postcard. It may not be true that Gladstone used the postcard famously, but he certainly did use it as a vehicle to an extent unknown before his time and hardly attained more recently except by Bernard Shaw. The example of such men as these and their separate ways may have been useful in encouraging brevity of expression, the art of saying a good deal in a few words. Mr. Pickwick would certainly have written three notes to Mrs. Bardell on postcards had they been available.

It might be thought that the picture postcard, with its yet smaller space for writing, would have set up new standards of pithy correspondence. But have there been any picture postcards which could be called famous for anything except their pictures? Unlike the postcard of Gladstone or Shaw, the picture-card recently is a vehicle for banality. "Don't you wish you were here?" "Trained yesterday, but fits now," just going bathing." "Our boarding-house is just around the corner from here."—Plenty of girls like this down here." Probably the whole range of picture-postcard inscription would be contained under half a hundred sentences.

However, there is time yet. Why does not some press agent put into the minds of some of his budding poets, novelists, dramatists, publicists (blessed word!) the idea of establishing a new reputation as the "picture-postcard" poet or what not?

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 2ND, 1934

"CHRISTIANS AS WITNESSES"

I THESSALONIANS, 1 : 1 - 10

We turn, today, to the earliest of New Testament writings, where Paul commends and the determination he exhibits, in the face of trouble to suffer government persecution if necessary. The war might be abolished, and financial systems torn down, the principles of Jesus might be established in the business and economic life of the world.

In the second place, Paul speaks with admiration of the zeal and steadfastness of the converts, the knowledge of which, he said, had reached him everywhere. Progress in religion is always marked by witnessing. Everywhere that the early Christians went they made known their faith. It was their chief interest in life to bring others under its influence and their influence. The story of the Welsh revival is the story of intense and constant witness-bearing on the part of tens of thousands of men and women who had a personal experience of Christ. The success which has marked the progress of Christian Science is, in a very large extent, due to the anxiety and nervousness to bear testimony to the healing ministry of our religion. The modern Church has lost this note, nor will it recapture the power of the apostolic generation until it returns to a new emphasis on witness-bearing. To some extent this has been revived under the leadership of the Oxford and other groups and is perhaps the fashion of most value in the group movement.

But witness-bearing must conform itself to the needs of the new day. We are living in a time in which extreme individualism both in religion and economics is largely subordinated to a corporate interest. The Church, as a group of consecrated and devoted followers of Christ, must in a corporate way, bear witness to the power of Christianity in our day, not only individuals but to save society. Our politics must be changed, our business must be humanized, our international relations must be Christianized. With all the wealth the Church possesses, with all the organizing ability within its membership, with all the intelligence and prestige it has, it could abolish slums, end war, and bring in the reign of God in our generation, if only it had the faith, the will, and the spirit of God which so marked the early Church.

GIBBARD HOME FURNISHERS

BAY CIRCUIT

Bay Circuit, November 26. — The frosty condition of the weather the last few days reminds us that winter is just around the corner.

The first few days of this week are busy ones for many of the farmers, as they prepare their poultry for the Poultry Fair. If you don't believe it, prepare sixty or seventy chickens for marketing.

Plan to attend the temperance convention in Napanee this Thursday afternoon and evening. Special music, interesting addresses and an oratorical contest.

The local fishermen have been very successful lately with their catches of fish. Herring, especially, have been very plentiful.

Mr. and Mrs. William Fox and daughter, of Melrose, were Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. William Joyce.

Mr. Fred Mellow and daughter, and Miss Marita Mellow, spent Sunday with their parents, at Gretna.

The Gretna choir held a very successful pot luck supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Howell on Friday evening of last week, and a very pleasant evening was spent by the attendance.

One of the most successful evenings ever held under the auspices of Bay View Orange Lodge was held last Wednesday evening, in their Lodge room, at Bethany. It took the form of a chicken dinner and banquet. There were seventy-five in attendance. The programme was in charge of the Master of the Lodge, Mr. Chas. Sills. Among those who took part from this circuit were Mr. William Goodman, Mr. William Joyce and Mr. Beckel. Among the visitors who took part in the programme were Mr. Adam Scott, Mr. Roland Baker and Mr. Dafoe, Forest Mills; Rev. W. D. Craig of Roblin, and Mr. Correll, Mr. Higgs, Mr. Bell, Mr. Roy, of Napanee, and Mr. H. Graham, of Kingston. The young women and young men of the community acted as waiters in a very efficient manner. It was a great night for Orangeism in this neighborhood, and everyone seemed to have a real good time.

Mrs. George Burtch returned home on Sunday evening, after spending a week with friends at Gananoque.

Mrs. William Graham has returned home last week, having spent a couple of weeks with friends in Prince Edward County.

Miss Mary Rombough, who is at present a patient in Kingston General Hospital, expects to return home on Tuesday. All hope for Mary a speedy recovery.

The second in our series of Sunday School banquets was held in Bethany Church on Friday night. The programme had been prepared by Miss Ruth Miller, whose side were the winners in the contest. The programme consisted of readings, music, solos, trios, and a short negro sketch, by two girls. Prizes were presented to Miss Doris Joyce and Mr. Stanley Joyce for having attended Sunday School the most regular. The lunch was everything anyone could desire, and the collection of the evening helped the Sunday School carry on its work.

The Bethany Young People are presenting a play entitled, "Little Things," in the church on Monday evening, December 3rd, at 8 o'clock. The play is a comedy drama and has a splendid moral. There are eleven characters, and the young people are working hard to make it a real success. Help them by filling the church to the doors on the evening of December 3rd.

Some little adjustments have been made in the date of the Bethany Ladies' Aid pot luck social, which will be on December 12th instead of December 5th.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Prince Harnden, on the arrival of a new baby boy.

Mrs. Ronnie Miller has been spending a couple of weeks with her parents at Hawley.

Remember the Bay Bay Sunday School banquet this Friday evening, November 30th. Supper served at 7 o'clock, followed by a splendid programme. Everybody invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Walmsley and Frank and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harnden, of South Napanee, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. Hambly.

On Sunday, at the noon hour, the minister baptized the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rowe. Among those present at the special service and dinner were Mrs. Rowe's parents and brothers from Adolphustown, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer and Dorothy.

The seventh anniversary of the Sand Hill Ladies' Aid will be fitting-ly celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hambly on Wednesday evening of this week at 8 o'clock. Birthday cake and lunch. Good program, etc. Everybody come and have a good time.

The Anderson Sunday School are having their annual banquet on Tuesday evening, December 4th, at the church, beginning at 7 o'clock. Good programme, eats, etc. Everybody welcome.

Rev. J. E. and Mrs. Beckel were in Kingston on Friday, visiting the sick in the General Hospital.

Services on the Bay Circuit this Sunday, December 2nd, at Sand Hill at 10.30 a.m., at Hay Bay at 2.30 p.m., and at Gretna at 7.30 p.m.

DORLAND

Dorland, November 23.—The steady rain last night and today will be likely to reach the wells, which are still low.

The friends of Miss Jessie Chalmers will be sorry to learn that she is seriously ill.

The December meeting of the W. M. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. T. N. Davis, on the afternoon of December 5th. This is an important meeting and it is hoped there will be a good attendance. The thankoffering and mite boxes will be received, and the officers elected for the coming year.

Mrs. W. R. Henwood and sons, Roger and Grant, of Sandhurst, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Magee.

KALADAR

Kaladar, November 24. — Mrs. C. DeForge and Mrs. Bennett and daughter, of Point Anne, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. N. Tryon.

Miss Stella Purvis and friends, of Marlbank, visited Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allport on Sunday.

Mr. Allen Scott, clerk in the Northern Development office here, has been transferred to the Bancroft office.

Misses Edith Peters and Ula and Hilda Benny motored to Belleville on Saturday.

We are sorry to state that the family of Mr. M. Knox is quarantined with scarlet fever. It seems to be a mild type. The children in the village are being inoculated, and we hope no more cases break out.

Mr. Frank Bishop, who has been employed for the past year as stenographer at the Northern Development office here, has returned to his home at Verona.

Miss May Allport spent Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Forbes, at Actinolite.

Miss Reaford Markle, of Hamilton, and Miss Helen Choute, of Springbrook, spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Quirt.

The highway to Erinsville is progressing favorably. The rock cut south of the village is nearing completion.

Mr. W. W. Villneff has received his new license, and has re-opened his beverage room.

Those who attended the dance held at Mr. Ed. Berry's on Saturday evening, report a good time.

Mrs. Allen Scott, of Arden, called on Mrs. J. H. Quirt on Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Herrington are now occupying their new house, just south of the railway crossing.

Mr. J. H. Quirt had the misfortune of having his car side-swiped on No. 2 Highway, near Odessa, while returning from Kingston, on Sunday.

COLLINS BAY

Collins Bay, November 24.—A number of our local sportsmen have returned home, after a successful hunting trip.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Clark and little daughter, Frances, have returned home, after spending a pleasant week end at Cardinal with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Redden.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Bustard entertained a few friends to dinner recently.

Sydenham talent presented a very entertaining play to a crowded house on Friday evening, called "Here Comes Charlie".

Mrs. Robt. Bustard and son, Billy, are spending some time with her mother, on Wolfe Island.

Mrs. Tom Baker was called to Cataraqui, owing to the illness of her mother, Mrs. Clyde.

ERNESTTOWN

Ernesttown, November 17. — Indian summer has made its appearance, and we hope it will stay for a few days longer.

We are sorry to report Mrs. N. Hamm is ill in the hospital. We hope for her speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Winnie Thompson spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Levi Thompson, Morven.

A large number from here attended the Institute dance in Bath on Friday evening last.

Messrs. Azel Thompson, A. C. Sharp, Sam and Fred Colville, Wm. Hare and Stewart Weese have all returned home from the north, each bringing a deer.

On Tuesday evening, November 27, another euchre and dance will be held in the Institute rooms.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Spring, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Thompson and Melville returned home on Monday from a week end visit with Mr. and Mrs. J. Conroy, Ottawa.

Mrs. Fred Hamm and Mrs. Clarence Thompson spent Thursday afternoon in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Rogers left on Thursday to spend the winter with the latter's sister, in Willet, N.Y.

Madden. The second, a violin and pianoforte theme, representing the scene between Peer Gynt and his mother, Aase, at the latter's death bed, was played by Mrs. Madden and Mrs. Cameron Wilson. The artistry of these two musicians was effective in giving scope and atmosphere to which enlightened the meaning of the spoken words of the play.

The manner in which the oriental dancing girl "Anitra" dances before Peer Gynt, provided the audience with the occasion to witness the skill and grace of Miss Helen Grange in the character of Anitra.

Rev. Harry Pawson, minister of Trinity Church, the chairman of the evening, congratulated the artists on their signal success in doing so supremely well a most exacting piece of work.

Returned Missionary Will be Speaker at St. Andrew's Ch.

On Sunday morning, in St. Andrew's United Church, the Women's Missionary Society will have charge of the programme.

The speaker will be Dr. Reverle, of West China, who is at present on furlough in Canada.

Belleville Presb'y

three conferences, with a public meeting in the church auditorium, at night. Their messages were very simple, sane and straight-forward. Their illustrations were taken from every-day life and were very striking. They pictured the present-day world as one in which the Church is slowly losing ground. They pointed out that Russia has put God out of her country, Germany is becoming, slowly, non-Christian, Italy worships Mussolini instead of Christ. France is peculiarly atheistic and America is becoming peculiarly worldly and materialistic. The question was raised as to the cause of this backward movement. And the answer was that Christians are not living Christianity as they should. These speakers bravely faced the scores of ministers present and pointed out that they with the laymen are equally to blame for the present day situation. At each session, those present were challenged to consecrate their life completely and sacrificially to the service of Christ.

At the evening meeting a splendid congregation gathered to hear these outstanding evangelists sing. Rev. E. W. Rowland presided and the two visiting leaders gave inspiring addresses. Dr. Reverle spoke first. On the basis of his remarks: "a little girl's toy wrist-watch, which didn't tick," he then wondered if the religion of Christians, to-day, ticks. Mr. Fletcher spoke of love as the basis of true Christian thinking and living and serving.

At the noon hour, lunch was served by the ladies of John Street United Church and during the day members of Presbytery were present every assistance by Rev. Robert Hall, minister of the church, as well as the organist, caretaker and officials.

Management Changed Liquor Control Store

Notice of their dismissal from the position of Manager and Assistant of the Napanee Liquor Control Board's liquor store was received on Wednesday, November 21st, by Mr. Albert Reid and Mr. Harry Roney. The new appointees, Mr. James A. Pringle and Mr. Jake Pretta, took over the positions on Thursday morning.

Inspector Nugent, who brought notice of the change in personnel, remained in town for a few days to instruct the new officials in their duties.

Mr. Reid and Mr. Roney have been in charge of the store since its opening six and a half years ago. During that time they have fulfilled their duties to the satisfaction of the community.

Girding The World With Christmas Trees

Each Christmas it is estimated that approximately ten millions trees are cut for the Canadian and American market. An average of about 100 cars of Christmas trees are shipped annually to the cities of Canada and the United States. As each car contains on the neighborhood of 600 trees, the annual cut in the Dominion alone, exclusive of trees hauled by trucks to neighboring towns, amounts to more than 200,000 trees. It is pointed out, however, that this gigantic cut does not devastate the forests, as in all districts where big orders are filled the trees are carefully selected with a view to accomplishing the natural thinning of the growth, so that those left will have an opportunity of attaining a healthy girth. And as each tree is cut, another is usually planted in a different section, so that the reforestation goes on under expert supervision. There are, however, isolated districts where the system reforestration has not penetrated, but such sections are growing smaller and smaller each year. The trees for cutting are usually selected in the late summer and early fall, and the actual cut begins about three weeks before Christmas. Apart from the serving of the Canadian markets, the big Eastern marts for Christmas trees are New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Detroit and Chicago, and the provinces from which the biggest exports are made are the Maritime, Quebec and Ontario. It is computed that were the annual cut of Christmas trees planted of a quarter of a mile apart at the equator, it would girdle the globe four and a half times.

N. C. I. and T. C. I. Break Even in Two League Games

In two league encounters, played at the local "Nappies" Collegiate and Trenton Collegiate divided the games. Trenton Collegiate won the junior series 19-10 and Napanee seniors defeated the visitors 31-11.

Junior Game

Napanee, at the opening half were not able to work together and got their plays clicking. Their passes were easily intercepted by Trenton, or loosely handled by Napanee, thus offering little opposition to the visiting team. T. C. I. by some smart passing and shooting were easily the best team in this half. The score at half time was T.C.I. 22; N.C.I. 8.

In the second half Napanee started to work and were a good a team as Trenton. Napanee fought hard and outscored Trenton 11 to8. The final scores were 30, T. C. I.; 19, N. C. I.

Kathleen Davis scored seventeen of Trenton's thirty points with Doris Chapman tallying 14 on N. C. I.'s 19 points.

The teams were :—

Trenton Juniors — K. Davis, E. Moon, E. Seales, M. Smithrin, V. Pyman, M. Schmeel, I. Vandecar, B. Bonter, E. St. Croix.

Napanee Juniors — D. Chapman, of the winning team, is presented with a cup by Mr. C. MacPherson, Principal of the Napanee Collegiate Institute. The cup was donated by Mr. MacPherson for competition among the classes of the Collegiate. Mr. MacPherson, in his address, congratulated the winning team on their splendid showing in the basketball series and also congratulated the losing team on their sportsmanship in the games played. Mr. MacPherson also congratulated the coach, Miss Dolly Chapman, on the splendid showing made by the team. Mr. MacPherson also presented the cup to the winning team.

Dollie Chapman was leading scorer for Napanee, accounting for twenty of her team's points. Irene Vandecar was scored 7 of T. C. I's points.

The teams were :

Napanee Juniors — C. Garren, E. Sutcliffe, H. Black, A. Galbraith, M. Kinney, P. Fitzpatrick, M. Chapman, D. Chapman, L. Amisteel, L. St. Croix, E. Moon, I. Vandewater.

Napanee Seniors— L. McCullough, D. Chapman, A. Walters, J. Gerow, D. King, M. Hinch, H. Henderson.

N. C. I. LOSE TWO TO P. C. I.

Napanee senior and junior basketball teams travelled to Picton, Friday night, and returned defeated from both Napanee teams.

Junior Game

Napanee Collegiate started out in whirlwind fashion, equally as good a team as Picton, Picton's defense was very strong, making it hard for Napanee to tally points. In the last few minutes of the first half, Picton Collegiate tied up, leaving the score at half-time Picton 18, Napanee 11.

In the second half Picton Collegiate added to their score. Napanee fought hard, but due to poor shooting were unable to make the same close. The final score was P. C. I. 45, N. C. I. 20.

The teams were :

Picton Juniors—M. Reid, N. Rorke, F. Jones, M. Hubbs, M. Hall, E. Hallenworth, M. Sargent, B. Brown, B. McWilliams, G. Sayers.

Napanee Juniors — D. Chapman, J. Clarke, H. Shelior, M. Roney, E. Clark, C. Simmons, V. Huyck, G. Vick, M. Miller.

Senior Game

The Picton team being a much taller team than Napanee their high passes bewildered the shorter Napanee players. In the first half Napanee were kept at their own end of the floor, through their poor passing and inability to work the ball past taller opponents.

Napanee were outclassed in the last half, although they fought hard. For Napanee, Jean Gerow and Marg. Hinch were the best, both working very hard. The final score was P. C. I. 35, N. C. I. 12.

Picton Seniors — J. Grow, May Cooper, M. Minacher, M. Brisbon, E. Williams, M. McMullen, R. Walters, Van Dusen.

Napanee Seniors — L. McCullough, D. Chapman, H. Henderson, A. Walters, D. King, M. Hinch, J. Gerow.

CHEWING GUM FROM CARBIDE

Chewing gum from carbide and a possible substitute for shatterproof glass are some of the magic which Canadian chemists daily are performing. In addition, from this same product, beautifully colored brushes and combs, cups and various decorative containers are turned out. The recovery of hydro-electric energy have helped to bring about this state of affairs and Canada's industrial machinery has grown to such an extent that it is way up among those leading industrial nations of the world. The magic of chemistry has changed what formerly gave rise to some international battles into a valuable by-product. In days gone by the stacks of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, at Trail, B.C., belched forth huge volumes of poisonous smoke, which menaced vegetation in the surrounding country and scattered its noxious fumes over the international boundary, out of which many lawsuits ensued. Chemists now take this smoke and turn it into sulphuric acid, from which fertilisers and many other valuable products are produced.

STOPPING THE FALL CANKERWORM

In the Prairie Provinces most spring, canker worms will probably cause severe injury in many districts to maple, ash, elm, oak, and fruit trees, and in the meantime the Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has given timely warning as to the advisability of at once banding the trees for the control of the pests. Sticky bands, four inches wide, should be placed around the tree trunks at a height of about seven feet above the ground. These bands should be applied during the first week of October to prevent the wingless moths from laying eggs on the branches and during the first week in May the bands should be renewed to prevent hatching caterpillars from climbing up to the foliage. The bands should be kept fresh for about a month either by combing them from time to time or by applying new material. The sticky material for the bands may be made by slowly melting five pints of hot castor oil, or it may be bought ready-made from seed stores. Trees on which caterpillars are noticed should be sprayed with arsenate of lead in a mixture of two pounds of powder to 40 gallons of water. Further information may be obtained from the Dominion Entomological Laboratories at Brandon, Man., Indian Head, Sask., and Lethbridge, Alta.

The Late B. G. Hamm

The many friends of Benjamin George Hamm were surprised to hear that he passed away last Wednesday, very suddenly. Although in poor health for the past eight years, he had been able to be out and to drive his car.

The deceased was a highly respected citizen of Odessa for the past fifteen years and from childhood had lived at the home of his grandfather, the late Robert Aylesworth, about a mile from Odessa. He conducted a grocery store for some time and was also a member of the Township Council.

He leaves to mourn his loss besides his widow, who was before her marriage Miss Minnie Spencer, and three sons, Robert, Odessa; Fraser, New York and Charley, Toronto.

Mr. Hamm was in his 70th year.

CHINESE "OFFICIAL CALENDAR"

Despite spasmodic efforts by the Kuomintang during the past five or six years to spread enlightment among the masses superstition still flourishes in the Chinese countryside. The conviction that the air is peopled by innumerable spirits and demons who must be placated, or else avoided with scrupulous care, continues to influence unreasoned acts of the hard-working but ignorant peasantry.

In the fairs and markets of North China one can purchase for a few coppers, representing a fraction of a penny, the popular and widely circulated "Min Kuo Shih Hsien Shu, or "Official Calendar of the Chinese Republic" for 1934. Actually it is anything but official; indeed, leaders of the Nanking Government would be surprised and pained to find their portraits decorating the preface to this remarkable publication. Next to these photographs is the picture of a rain-bringing dragon in full blast. With the announcement that the present year is to be marked by great floods. There is an additional reason to the effect that the lot of the farmer will be hard and harvests poor. Then follow several closely printed pages, interspersed with quaint woodcuts, giving tables of computation and explaining the way in which the nine-tellers are able to cast the horoscopes of their clients. Lucky and unlucky days for weddings and other important social occasions are clearly indicated, as well as reasons for voting the proposed marriage of two young people who are unfortunate enough to have been born under maleficially hostile influences. One learns that all children born during this year ought to be nursed with dairy tengers and other unfortunate characteristics. There is also a guide to the combination of dreams and an elaborate series of diagrams by which, in the performance of certain ceremonies, the six copperes placed in line upon a table, one's good or ill fortune may be revealed.

When to Refrain

Another feature of this Chinese vade-mecum is a kind of "Polite Letter Writer," showing those unacquainted with the niceties of correspondence how to address wedding and other invitations to prospective guests of various ranks and degrees of consanguinity. The white part of the calendar is, of course, devoted to the days of each month throughout the year, given in parallel columns. At the top of each column, in small characters, is the date according to the foreign calendar. Then, arranged in bolder script by the date according to the lunar reckoning, which controls, generally, all the rural districts despite Nanking's numerous mandates ordering its abolition.

Beneath this date is given an absorbing amount of information for the benefit of the superstitious and superstitious—the birthdays of gods and goddesses, the twenty-four festivals which regulate the life and work of the farmer, and, perhaps most interesting of all, a guide indicating what things are to be avoided of the day is to be free from disaster. Taking the first day of the year as typical from Chinese New Year's Day, the populace are solemnly warned against the following:

1. Irrigation and the repairing of the kitchen stove.
2. Starting on a journey, shaving the head, or hunting.
3. Buying property or building a house.
4. Breaking an agreement or consulting a doctor.
5. and 6. Most unlucky days.
7. Starting on a journey, moving house, or consulting a diviner.
8. Weddings or funerals.
9. Opening your granary or consulting a fortune-teller.
10. Sacrificial rites or repairs to kitchen stove.
11. Making a well or visiting the barber.
12. Hoeing over property, or irrigation.
13. Taking up office, or beginning a new job.
14. Transplanting trees, or shaving the head.
15. The preparation of wine, or making a net.
16. The visiting of patients by a doctor.
27. Lawsuits, or starting on a journey.

"DETAILS OF GROOMING DETERMINE REAL BEAUTY

The women who really are lovely and attract the most attention are those rare exceptions. Most men who pay attention to the little details of good grooming. After all, thick, wavy hair counts for nothing if it's dull and dusty. And perfectly applied lipstick simply cannot make up for stained, yellowish teeth.

Here are a few duties that any girl who wants to be beautiful and popular should follow :

Brush your teeth twice a day and hate them cleaned by a dentist whenever the yellow dark stains on which the brush has no effect. Take a daily bath. Use a deodorant. Remove superfluous hair frequently.

Powder puffs should be spotless. Keep the cover on the box of powder—the caps on lotion bottles tightly screwed down. Give yourself a manicure at least one a week and clean your nails every time you wash your hands. Have a shampoo at least once every two weeks and use a hair-brush daily.

Put on fresh stockings each morning. Make sure that white accessories actually are white. Send clothes to the cleaner and laundry whenever they look the least bit dowdy. Keep everything neatly pressed. Air your party slippers before you put them away. Clean the inside of dark gloves and the inside of your hats.

The list could be longer, of course. And if you're serious about your beauty, why not add a few rules yourself ? Then live up to them !

Farmer Debtors Will Benefit by Act

Debt-burdened farmers throughout the Dominion are being relieved of a good part of their load by the new Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, which is being administered by Hon. M. A. MacPherson, formerly Attorney General of Saskatchewan, and now in Ottawa. He is assisted by official receivers at strategic points throughout the country. Already arrangements have been made whereby some 500 farmers will compromise with their creditors and return to their labors, with new hope.

The immensity of the problem was indicated by the Prime Minister on the eve of his departure for Western Canada last week. "A survey shows there are 49,000 farmers in one section of Saskatchewan alone who were without a crop of any kind this year," said Mr. Bennett. In many cases, prairie farmers have suffered three successive crop failures. The result is they are quite unable to pay anything on their mortgages or bank loans, or to reduce their indebtedness to implement and agricultural machinery companies. In fact they are dependent upon Government assistance for their daily bread.

Nor is the difficulty confined to Western Canada.

A surprisingly large number of farmers in the well-established Provinces of Ontario and Quebec are making application for assistance from Mr. MacPherson and his district officials, in their efforts to extricate themselves from the hopeless financial position in which they find themselves as a result of conditions over which in the majority of cases they had no control. These include farmers who bought live stock and machinery when prices were at the peak; they include men who have got themselves into a financial tangle through mortgages or bank loans, or whose taxes have been allowed to accumulate.

Bay View Orange Lodge Annual Banquet

The Bay View Orange Lodge held their annual banquet in their lodge room last Wednesday evening, at 7:00 p.m. The tables were laid for merry group of Orangemen and their wives and friends who enjoyed the menu of chicken, potatoes, salads, pie, cake and coffee.

The usual list was in charge of Mr. Charles Sills of Napanee, Worshipful Master of Bay View lodge. He proposed the first toast and all stood and drank the toast to the King and joined in the singing of Anthem. The toast to "Our Guests" was proposed by Mr. Frank Correll, of Napanee, and was responded to by Mr. Ed. Roy also of Napanee. The toast to the Grand Lodge was then proposed by William Goodman, Past County Master, and was responded to by Rev. J. E. Beckel, Deputy Grand Chaplain of Eastern Ontario. The toast to the County Lodge was proposed by Mr. Bell of Napanee and responded to by Rev. W. B. Craig, of Roblin. The toast to the Ladies' Lodge was proposed by Mr. William Joyce, Past District Master of Lennox, and was responded to by Mr. Roland Baker, District Master of Lennox.

Addresses were also given by Mr. Walter Higgs of Napanee, and Mr. H. Graham of Kingston, Grand Organizer. The speeches were most brief, witty and helpful and made a good laugh was enjoyed by all present.

The music was supplied by Mr. Adam Scott and Mr. Dafoe, of Forest Mills. Mr. Scott was unusually good in his humorous Scotch songs.

This delightful function was brought to a close by singing the Maple Leaf Forever and the National Anthem.

THE STORM

BY C. A. DAWSON SCOTT

"HERBERT'S engagement is everything we could have wished," said Mrs. Lascelles to her sister, Miss Firmin, who had just arrived on a visit of congratulation. "A good girl, handsome, too, and with money."

Miss Firmin was like her sister, but less optimistic. She looked at the shabby furniture of the beautiful old room and felt heartily glad that money would now be more plentiful. "Business people, I suppose?"

"I think so, yes. They bought Craigatton three years ago, and Hilda is the only child. Very nice people, suscribe to everything, and Mr. Redman is thinking of standing for Parliament."

"You are lucky, Julia," said now I suppose you'll be able to get those new curtains and have things really decent." As she spoke she crossed the room and paused before a piece of tapestry, faded and with a cut running jaggedly across at the bottom. This, for instance, ought to be carefully mended. It's hundreds of years old and very fine work."

Mrs. Lascelles glanced at the tapestry with distaste. "If it were not an heirloom," she said grudgingly, "it would have gone long since. Sir Ezra Browne said he would have given me whatever I liked to ask for it. He wants it for his collection."

"Pity you couldn't sell."

"Yet, I hate the thing."

"It looks very untidy as it is," and under her breath she hummed the verse of an old song:

"Foredoomed, alas, is Lascelles' pride,
By scathe and blood.
By fire and flood.
The first-born son shall lose his bride."

"Still," returned Mrs. Lascelles "you can't expect me to want to see words like those worked along the border of a tapestry that I have to live with. I don't wonder old Sir Harold chopped them off."

"He chopped the words off because they came true. Let's see; the girl was drowned on her way over from Ireland, wasn't she?"

"Don't let's talk about it, Harriet. There are quite enough troubles in life without believing in the curse of an old witch."

Another husband's ancestor should not have burnt her, then. He deserved what he got."

Well, yes, but not his descendants. It would be horrible if we believed it could happen nowadays. Why, it would mean ——"

She stopped, remembering that Herbert was her first-born, and that it was in order to congratulate him on his engagement to Hilda Redman that the family was gathering that day under the old and, alas, somewhat dilapidated roof. If there were truth in the legend she would not be able to look forward happily to her boy's marriage. "Let us talk about something else, Harriet. How hot it has been all day. I feel as if we were due for a thunderstorm to clear the air."

As she spoke, Hilda Redman, followed by her betrothed, came in through the conservatory and introductions were made. Miss Firmin looked with interest from her nephew a very tall, very handsome man, to the girl she was about to marry. Hilda was not tall; indeed she was a distinctly little girl, plump and merry, with crisp hair that grew low on her forehead. But below the wavy, big hair were broad brows, and the grey eyes were frank and steady.

"Just the right person for our bundle of nerves," thought the aunt, whose favourite nephew happened to be the youngest of the boys, and who was perhaps a little prejudiced.

Sounds of arrival reached the drawing room, and colour flushed into Mrs. Lascelles' middle-aged cheek. "I expect that is Hal," she said. "He wasn't sure if he could get leave."

The double doors were thrown open by an impatient hand and a short, broad young man, followed by brothers and sisters of different ages and sizes, made his appearance. This was the sailor son who had been stationed abroad. His little mother greeted him warmly, then made him known to the girl beside her chair, and Hal, turning, looked into eyes which held for him all imaginable beauty. He had meant to claim a brother's rights but instead he shook hands quietly and seemed to forget that he should congratulate Herbert on his good fortune. The words had been at the back of his mind all day, but now he could not get them over his tongue.

"How long can you stay?" asked the mother eagerly.

"Only two nights, I'm afraid."

"Oh, what a little time."

"There's a dance on to-night, old man," scarcely interposed Hugh, the third brother, "and the house is so full that we're all crammed into the top attic. Everybody's coming."

"In the floor all right?" Hal felt a desire for immediate action of the most violent kind. He wanted to do something for those grey eyes, something that would give pleasure.

Mrs. Lascelles turned to her eldest son. "You promised to see to that, Herbert."

The tall languid young man, answered with a lisp, "Thure to be all right."

"I'll just have a look," cried Hal. "I'll be down before the dance begins."

"In the floor all right?" Hal felt a desire for immediate action of the most violent kind. He wanted to do something for those grey eyes, something that would give pleasure.

Mrs. Lascelles turned to her eldest son. "You promised to see to that, Herbert."

The tall languid young man, answered with a lisp, "Thure to be all right."

"I'll just have a look," cried Hal. "I'll be down before the dance begins."

"I suppose," smiled Mrs. Lascelles, "for the usual reason."

As the latter went to her room for a little rest before the festivities of the evening, she nodded to herself. "For what is too often the usual reason. Because she hadn't met the right man."

Hal in the big hall, found himself ably seconded by Hilda and it was owing to their efforts that the floor that night was irreproachable. Herbert, deprecating the necessity for exertion, had stood looking on, for Herbert was like that, as indolent as he was good-looking.

Dinner that night was something hastily eaten. The young people were eager to get to the dancing, and their elders, mostly Lascelles uncles and aunts, proved indulgent. Hilda Redman's parents were also staying at the Manor. Indeed, as Hugh had said, the house was full. The Lascelles were poor for their position, and it was not often that Mrs. Lascelles, most notable of women, felt herself justified in entertaining on any large scale. The betrothal of her eldest son, however, had been an excuse for gathering neighbours as well as relatives under the roof, and she moved among her guests a happy woman. She did not see that Hal was dancing with Hilda very frequently, that their steps suited, and although they had not met until that day they seemed to have a good deal to talk about.

"Really, it is very hot," said Hilda at last.

"Come into the terrace, then."

The Manor had mirrored its charming gables and timberwork for three hundred years in a big pool of water. Between this and the walls some eighteenth century Lascelles had built a stone terrace by which the present owner had planted climbing and flowering plants. On this particular evening the terrace had been illuminated with coloured fairy lights, and in the stillness of the oppressive night; they burned without a flicker, their tiny flames pointing to a low-swung sky on which neither moon nor stars could be seen.

"Shall we sit in the old gondola?" asked Hal, as he followed Hilda down the steps to the water's edge.

"And see the lights reflected in the pool? Yes." But as she spoke her satin-shod foot slipped on the worn stone and if Hal had not been for Hal's sailor adroitness she must have fallen into the water. He caught her back, caught her to him and she heard his startled "Hilda—darling!"

In a moment she had recovered her footing and drawn back, but something had passed that crudist word had been unspoken. Steady grey eyes met long-lashed blue.

"Did I mean it," said Hal doreedly suddenly aware that his brother's fiancee what more to him than any woman had yet been.

Hilda was realising that the momentary contact with him had set her heart beating as it did not beat at that moment how she could ever have agreed to marry him. She stood forward, a dazed expression on her face, and heard Hal recount, half to Herbert. She, too, wondered at in shame, half in exultation, how, at least as far as he was concerned, the Hilda of her dreams had been forged at first sight.

"But I've only known you half a day," she protested. "This is mid-summer madness. You will go back to your ship and we shall both of us forget."

"When we are dead, not before. I shall not forget."

"It's no good, Hal!" She drew a deep breath, unable altogether to believe that there was no truth in what she was not speaking out of some strange and vital dream. She had been so gay and careless, a merry creature sheltered by the walls of a little world; now a hard truth was showing her great and sorrowful things. "I've—promised."

Being so very young, those words were for them the end of the matter. "I volunteer for the China station and stay away years and years," he said, and his voice broke a little, for this was his first real and deep love. They said no more, but went slowly back to the house, and he heard Herbert's voice, the first low mutterings of the approaching storm. The Hilda on her return to the hall-room, it seemed strange that that interview, so short and so momentous, should have been unnoticed by those gathered there. People were still dancing, laughing and talking, and Hilda found Hal leaning against a doorway, and Mrs. Lascelles carried on happy and gay face from group to group. Hilda, sick at heart, saw a fresh partner approaching her, but things came to an end, and she was able at last to slip away to the little panelled room at the end of the hall in the old wing, which had been assigned to her.

By the time the tired inmates of the great house were in bed, the storm, which had been threatening for hours, had passed over the house, had broken in a crack and rattle overhead. The rain had begun to fall in heavy drops that broke up the glassy stillness of the pool and turned the flowers of the terrace from white to sodden brown. The thunderclaps were now so near that they almost continuous, and the lightning flickered bluey through the darkened room. Hilda sat up and seemed to shake the old house to its foundations.

"My dear," said Mr. Redman, sitting up in bed and presenting, in his old-fashioned night-shirt and red nightcap, a quaint figure. "Im sure I can smell burning wood."

"Nonsense, John," returned the firm voice of his spouse; "you are always detecting things."

"I say this time I'm really sure."

"So you were when it was only the gardener banking up the fires in the greenhouses."

This being undeniable, John Redman lay back on his pillow and tried to thing he had been mistaken. A waft of warm air, however, proved the storm to be coming nearer, and the lightning flashed more frequently. Hilda, sick at heart, saw a fresh partner approaching her; she had things to do and see

YOUNG PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATIONS

CAMDEN EAST Y. P. U.

The members of the Camden East Young People's Union met in the hall on Friday evening, November 23rd, with twenty-two members and visitors present.

The meeting opened under the leadership of the president, Mrs. C. Boulton and with the singing of hymn 97, followed by prayer. The scripture reading was read by Miss Hope Sand. After the business meeting, Miss Ruby Simmons took charge and carried out a short missionary programme. Another hymn was sung followed by a reading, "Why do we send Missionaries ?" given by Miss Lillian Wright. The hymn "The whole World was lost in the darkness of sin," was sung by Hope Sault. Ada Baker and Florence Boulton, accompanied by Florence. Boulton. A reading entitled "The Shining Face," was then given by Miss Ruby Simmons.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which a few games were played.

TAMWORTH Y. P. A.

The Young People's Association have started their activities for the winter season, and on Friday night a very enjoyable meeting was held in the R. E. building, with the President, Miss Hazel (illegible) presiding.

The meeting opened with a sing song, led by Mrs. (Rev.) Brown, and Miss Marion Madden at the piano. After the hymn, "Sound the Battle Cry," was sung, the scripture lesson, taken from I. Corinthians, 13th chapter, was read responsively.

After the minutes and business had been dealt with, Miss Crago gave a financial report, which was very gratifying. A solo by Miss Elsie Martyn was then enjoyed by all. A synopsis of the "Life of Pauline Johnson", was read by Freda Wagar, and one of Pauline Johnson's poems was very pleasingly recited by Mrs. Brown, who wore an Indian costume.

The assistant Principal of the Tamworth Continuation School, Mr. Miller, gave a very interesting and enlightening talk on the "Life of the Doukhobor of a Western Colony". Mr. Miller lived among them, as teacher, for seven years. After which an interesting contest was conducted by Elsie Martyn.

If the following meetings are to be as interesting as this one was, there are several good evenings in store for the young people of this village, and the general thought is, with a live wire President, like Miss Crago, at the head of affairs, no one will want to miss a meeting, for if they do they will be the loser.

The next meeting next Monday night will be under the leadership of the Devotional and Missionary leader, Miss Alice Babcock.

APPLES SOURCE OF VITAMINS AND MINERALS

For the housewife who feeds her family on a budget, there is no cheaper source of vitamins and minerals than apples.

Apples are one of the best raw foods and may be served as a breakfast fruit without even paring, provided they've been well washed. They are particularly good for the teeth, counteracting the effect of today's soft diet that dentists complain so much about.

Many good desserts have apples as their basis and a number of salads, fruits, vegetables or meats are more appetizing with this useful fruit added.

Baked or steamed apples are among the first solid foods a baby eats and these same apples are relished by the elders with sugar and cream.

Need Special ualities

Varieties of apples are legion and the way the fruit is to be used determines the kind wanted. For the convenience of marketing, they usually are divided into two classes—cooking apples and eating apples.

Apples for pie or sauce should be tart, well-flavored and of fine texture. This insures quick cooking and good flavor. Those wanted for baking should be evenly formed, firm and of good size. If they are too delicately grained, they will fall apart while baking and be unattractive for serving.

Eating apples should be well-flavored or juicy. Astrakan apples, which are one of the very best varieties of early apples for cooking and jelly making, are a bit tart for eating. The old-fashioned harvest apple and yellow transparent varieties are good both for cooking and eating.

It is economical to buy apples in quantity rather than in pound lots. They are not a perishable fruit and may be used in so many ways that there is little danger of becoming tired of them.

When you make apple sauce, remember to add sugar to the fruit after it is cooked. In this way, less sugar is required to sweeten the sauce and the flavor is more delicate. If you have not carefully trifled out all bruised spots before cooking, the sauce should be rubbed through a colander as this bruised flesh becomes hard and tough when cooking. Also be sure that every particle of core is cut out, especially if the children are to eat the sauce.

SANDWICHES

An original open sandwich for afternoon tea is made with cracknel biscuits. Carefully cut the biscuits in halves by splitting them with a sharp pointed knife; then butter them thickly. Spread with cream cheese and place fragments of lettuce, cucumber and watercress on top. Sprinkle with seasoned lemon juice or vinegar.

A delicious mixture for spreading between slices of brown bread and butter is made by grating some cheese into a bowl. Season with pepper, salt, a little made mustard and some anchovy paste. Add a piece of butter, and pound all together until it is a smooth paste.

Cold meats which are left over, such as chicken, ham, tongue, game, or beef, or a mixture of these, make good sandwiches. The meat should be put twice through a mincer, then beaten to a fine paste with a little butter; salt, pepper, a pinch of mace, and just enough thick gravy or sauce to moisten it. Spread on buttered bread, or pile on small rolls cut in halves.

Cold fish can also be used for sandwiches with excellent results. Mash the fish finely with a fork, and mix with it a little mayonnaise and some finely chopped capers. Double sandwiches are usually much liked, especially by men as they are more substantial than the ordinary kind. Spread one slice of buttered bread with potted or other meat, grate on some salad and add another slice of bread, buttered on both sides. On this place some chopped lettuce, watercress, or mustard and cress, mixed with mayonnaise or some chutney or chopped pickled walnuts, and cover with another slice of buttered bread.

BRASS

Lacquered brass should never be polished with metal-polish, as the acid it contains is likely to destroy the lacquer. Wash the brass in hot soapy water, then rub it well with a dry chamois leather. Treated in this way lacquered brass will retain its brightness for years. Chased and wrought brass also should not be cleaned with polish or powder, as it is difficult to remove the polish from the crevices once it has been used. The articles should first be washed in hot, soapy water, and dried. Then they should be polished with half of a freshly cut lemon, and washed in hot water again. When thoroughly dried, rub well with a chamois leather. Indian brass may also be cleaned in this way.

Brass will not tarnish if it is treated in the following manner. Dissolve half an ounce of sal-ammoniac in half a pint of methylated spirits by leaving the solution in a tightly corked bottle or jar until the next day. Then pour off the clear liquid. Heat the brass slightly, and paint the solution over evenly with a camel-hair brush.

MOSCOW Y. P. U.

A large gathering met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Baker on Tuesday, November 20th, for the regular meeting of the Young People's Union. The meeting opened with religious singing, and then the educational executive took the meeting in hand.

Mrs. Potter gave a very interesting address on "Paint.", and E. Williamson gave an account of Quebec Province. Community singing followed, after which a delightful lunch was served.

The next meeting will be held on November 30th at the rectory, at Yarker, when the Social Committee will have charge.

RICE OMELET

One cup cooked rice, one cup milk, half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, three tablespoons butter, and four eggs.

Heat milk and add cooked rice, two tablespoons butter and salt and pepper. Beat well and add the well beaten yolks of eggs. Be sure the yolks are beaten until thick and lemon colored. Fold in whites, which have been beaten until stiff. Melt remaining butter in a hot iron spider or omelet pan. Turn pan until thoroughly coated with butter and make sizzling hot. Pour in omelet mixture and let cook on top of the stove for two minutes, to brown the bottom. Then cook in a hot oven until well puffed firm to the touch. Fold and turn out on a hot platter. Serve with tomato sauce or fresh tomatoes cut in slices and dipped in melted butter and broiled.

CANDY FRUIT LOAF

Two cups raisins, one cup walnut meats, one-quarter cup sweetened condensed milk. Put raisins and nut meats through food chopper. Add sweetened condensed milk, blending thoroughly. Grease mixture into average-sized buttered fudge pan which has been sprinkled with finely powdered confectioners' sugar, smoothing out. Sprinkle with finely powdered confectioners' sugar. Chill. Cut into squares for serving.

SAUCE FOR DUCK

Half a cup of diced orange added to the stock left in the pan after a duck is roasted makes a good sauce to be poured over duck after it has been arranged on the serving platter.

STEAMED CRANBERRY PUDDING

One and a half cups of cranberries (halved), half cup milk, three and a half cups flour, one tablespoonful of baking powder, three eggs, one cup sugar, half cup butter. Cream butter and sugar and add beaten eggs. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Add cranberries and place in buttered mold. Cover and steam for two hours.

POUND CAKE

One pound butter (two cups), one pound sugar (two cups), ten eggs, one pound flour (four cups), one teaspoon lemon extract, two lemons juice. Cream the butter, add sugar gradually and cream well together. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add lemon juice. Cream the butter, add sugar gradually and cream well together. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add lemon juice, cream and nutmeg, and mix thoroughly. Fold in whites of eggs, beaten until dry, and bake in a slow oven for six hours and a quarter.

RICE AND MINCED MEAT

Baked hash, in addition to being an ideal winter supper dish, gives the home-maker a chance to use left-over meat. For variety, try making it with boiled rice. Simply put one cupful of cold, diced meat into a cup full of one cupful of boiled rice, butter, milk, seasoning, diced onion, and one raw egg. Mix well, place in buttered baking dish and cook in a moderate oven.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

EMBROIDERY

Many people are afraid to tackle drawn thread work at home as the drawing of the threads not only takes a great deal of time, but is frequently not successful. The linen should be specially treated before beginning in order to obtain the best results. Allow the linen to soak in a bowl of cold water overnight. Then fill a large saucepan with cold soapy water. Wring out the linen and place it in the saucepan. Bring slowly to the boil. Then rinse and dry out of doors. The threads can then be drawn easily and in half the usual time.

MEDICINE STAINS

Children's garments frequently become stained with medicine, and if the stains are allowed to remain, they are difficult to remove. The most successful plan is to dab the stains as soon as they are made with a pad of cotton wool dipped in alcohol. Treated in this way, the stains will quickly disappear and the garments may then be washed in the usual way. Iodine stains should be damped and rubbed liberally on both sides with dry bicarbonate of soda. Leave on for several hours and then wash the article.

FURNITURE POLISH

It is a considerable economy to make a furniture polish especially at spring-cleaning time, when so much is required. The following is a simple recipe for a reliable liquid polish which also acts as a splendid preservative to the wood. Mix together in a bottle half-pint of turpentine, half-pint of linseed oil, quarter-pint of methylated spirit, and quarter-pint of vinegar. Always shake the preparation well before using it and be sparing in its application.

SUEDE SHOES

Light-colored suede shoes sometimes become stained and greasy looking while they are otherwise still in good condition. They may be made fit for wear again if they are given two or three coats of black shoe polish, well rubbed in. A little powdered coal should be polished with a soft cloth after it is applied, so as to give the surface of the shoe the appearance of kid. If necessary new laces or buckles may be added as a finishing touch.

MARKING LINEN

It is difficult to obtain good results when marking household linen if the texture is rough or fluffy, but if a smooth glass-stopper is rubbed to and fro over the place which is to be marked, a smooth surface may be prepared. It is also helpful to print the name clearly in pencil first, and then go over it in ink, using down strokes only, so that the pen point does not catch in the threads.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT NEWS OF WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

Mrs. William Waddingham entertained the Tyendinaga East W. I. on Friday, October 12th. There were a large number of members and quite a number of the Melrose branch were present with their husbands. The meeting opened in the usual manner with the singing of the ode. The roll call was responded to by "what country I wish to see, and why." The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Mrs. McCullough favored with a piano solo; Mrs. W. Hudgin gave a demonstration of Christmas gifts; Mrs. B. Gilroy, district president, addressed the meeting, after which several contests were put on by Mrs. Hudgin and Mrs. McCullough. The meeting was brought to a close with the National Anthem. The hostess and her committee served refreshments, and a social half hour was spent.

Mrs. M. P. Husband was hostess to the members of the Tyendinaga East W. I. and a large number of visitors, on Friday evening, November 9th. The meeting opened with the singing of the ode and repeating of the creed. The roll call was responded to by ways of training the family to be tidy." The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Mrs. William Waddingham gave a splendid report of the convention. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Waddingham and a motion was made that the delegates' expenses. Several readings were then given by Mrs. A. Waddingham and Mrs. P. German. Community singing was indulged in for half an hour, after which Mrs. Fred Shannonville, gave a demonstration on the new novelty way of making flowers and holders from tin cans and crepe paper, which was very interesting.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess and her committee.

A vote of thanks was extended to the hostess and all those who helped in the programme, and a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. B. Harvey, on December 14th, when the ticket will be drawn for the Dresden plate quilt.

ERNESTTOWN LADIES' AID

Mr. and Mrs. G. Spring opened their home on Wednesday, Nov. 21st, to the members and their family of the Ladies' Aid. There were thirty-five present. The meeting opened by singing a verse of "Stand up for Jesus." After which all repeated the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. Claude Thompson and Mrs. Joel Kellar had charge of the devotional period. The roll was called and the minutes of the October meeting approved. Several letters were read from those having received flowers while ill. It was moved that we pay Mr. Smart $25.00, and the proceeds of the evening, amounting to $10.00. Rev. Mr. Smart closed the meeting by prayer. A short programme followed. Instrumental numbers by Messrs. Leslie Sharp, Leslie Smith and Geo. Sharp. A solo by Mrs. Claude Thompson. An apple contest, the prize being won by Mrs. Fred Hamm. A solo by Leslie Smith with Geo. Sharp and Leslie Sharp as accompanists. Then Norma Thompson favored all by a recitation. All enjoyed a splendid talk on "Pauline Johnson" by Mrs. Fred Hamm. Miss Vera Chaplin and Mr. Leslie Smith were winners of a contest. A musical number by the boys brought the programme to a close. The "Touch and Take Table" met with great demand every article being sold. Several aprons were sold. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, bringing a pleasant evening to a close by the singing of God Save the King. Mrs. Clarence Thompson moved a vote of thanks to her home for the December meeting on December 19th. As this is the business meeting, a good attendance is requested.

TRINITY CHURCH W. M. S.

On Tuesday, November 20th, the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society, convened in the Sunday School, with Mrs. P. L. Hooper, Peace Secretary for the Prize Winners For Beautiful Maple Leaf

The prize for the most beautiful maple leaf found in Canada this autumn went to Mrs. A. A. Adams, Oak Bay Mills, Que., and second prize to Mrs. Guy H. Humphrey, Hampton, Kings County, New Brunswick, judges being appointed by the Royal Canadian Academy. Over 10,000 leaves were submitted, embracing every Province in Canada, and the judges had a difficult task when awarding prizes. The leaf which took the first prize is described as of extraordinary beauty, showing a flare of brilliant color such as only the Canadian autumn can produce. The level of coloring and general perfection in all of the leaves submitted was extremely high, so much so that some hundreds were selected, mounted in panels and will be exhibited in railway stations from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The competition was sponsored by the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways. Last year, the first prize for the most beautiful leaf went to the City of Fredericton, New Brunswick, so that this province figures in the prize list not only in last year's contest but in this year's also.

QUESTION FOR COURTS: IS AN ESKIMO AN INDIAN?

What is an Eskimo ? This question has been put to the Supreme Court of Canada to decide at its next term. The matter came up in connection with payments of annuities. The Quebec Government demands that they are a separate race and distinct from Indians. Indians are wards of the Dominion Government and if the Supreme Court finds that the Eskimos are Indians then the Dominion must pay for the relief for the Eskimo colonies in the Ungava section of Quebec. The sum of $40,000.00 is involved.

Always keep Douglas' Egyptian Liniment at hand , ready to bring immediate relief to burns, sores and cuts. Stops bleeding at once. Prevents blood poisoning. Splendid for sore throat and quinsy.

Belleville Presbyterial, present, as guest speaker.

Mrs. D. B. Wilson, president of the Auxiliary, was in charge of the meeting, Mrs. R. Gilbert as secretary and Miss Alma Thompson again acted as treasurer in the absence of Mrs. J. E. Robinson.

As is the custom for the November meeting, the programme was arranged to lay stress on the much discussed subject of world peace.

Mrs. H. Pawson contributed as a solo, the hymn, "O God of Love, O King of Peace," and Mrs. Rogers' splendid address, though necessarily disturbing, yet withal contained an element of hope. Those present were indeed grateful for her comprehensive and illuminating talk.

Mrs. W. Bailey read the scripture lesson and Miss Lauder very beautifully elaborated the devotional topic.

The study book chapter on "India" was covered by Miss M. Milling, in her usual competent fashion.

Donations for the missionary bale were brought in at this meeting and were taken charge of by the supply secretary, Mrs. W. J. Trenouth. There is still time for more donations to be sent in.

The President announced that the next meeting will be the last quarterly meeting of the year, at which time outstanding contributions should be in. The programme will be in charge of Mrs. Nicholson and her committee.

SELBY BRANCH W. C. T. U.

With the president presiding, the November meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at the home of Mrs. Hicken. After singing the opening hymn Mrs. Smith led in prayer. Minutes were read and approved. An invitation was extended to Selby Union to attend a meeting to be held at Miss Gandier's, Napanee, on November 22nd, when ladies from Belleville would give addresses on scientific temperance.

Mrs. Pringle led the worship service, choosing as her hymns, Nos. 4th, 1-10 verse and her subject, "Thanksgiving." Her scripture lesson, His Holy Spirit. God can accomplish much if we only let Him. Mrs. Pringle closed with prayer. The roll call sheet, "beer in the public press." Would seem from the amount of space given in the public press that the subject of beer, that it is the drink question, is in the minds of many people at the present hour. But we note twenty places are provided for a vote opposite vote. Items of interest were read by a number of ladies, of conditions under the L. C. A. Mrs. Jones closed with prayer.

A social hour followed, and a dainty lunch was served.

SILLSVILLE LADIES' AID

The November meeting of Sillsville Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. M. McLean, on Friday, Nov. 23rd, with a fair number in attendance. After the opening hymn, the scripture lesson, Psalm 100, was read by Mrs. John Thompson, after which another hymn was sung.

Solos and instrumental numbers were given by Mrs. A. Thompson, Mrs. H. Hough, Miss Mary Mellow, Mrs. B. Robertson, Mrs. Ostrom and Mrs. R. Sharpe. The secretary and treasurer's report were read and approved.

It was moved by Mrs. B. Robertson and seconded by Mrs. W. Young that we pay $25.00 to Mr. Harold Smith, towards the upkeep of our church. Moved by Mrs. W. Young, seconded by Mrs. M. Whyte, that we spend $3.44 for a worthy cause.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. Grace was sung and a most delicious lunch was served by the hostess her two little daughters, Misses Margaret and Myra McLean, and Miss Edna Roberts. A social evening will be held at the home of Mrs. W. Young on Monday, December 3rd.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Manitoulin Island will contribute its share of turkeys again for the Christmas season. A survey indicates that the number of birds for market will be about the same as last year when 50000 pounds were marketed by the co-operative association.

Reduction of one-half per cent. in interest on loans made by the Ontario Agricultural Board has been announced by Premier Hepburn. The interest in future will be only four per cent. compared with the previous rate of four and a half.

Timothy Rust

If the severity of rust attacks on timothy in the grass breeding nurseries, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, is any indication of the amount of damage which may result from this disease throughout the country, then the efforts which are being made to develop rust resistant varieties of timothy, should result in considerable benefit to this crop. More than half of the plants from commercial seed at the Central Farm have been practically destroyed by rust during the past two years and many others have been more or less injured. In marked contrast to this are the plants and strains selected for rust resistance. These show no rust whatsoever, and in consequence have made a strong vigorous growth. Only rust resistant selections are being used as parent plants in breeding new varieties of timothy. At the same time an effort is being made to determine the losses due to rust on timothy as it is grown in farm practice.

Replace Apple Trees

Agricultural Societies in Grey and Bruce are to be commended for giving more thought in the very worthwhile project in replacing apple trees killed last winter, states J. A. Carroll of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

At an Agricultural Society District Meeting in Paisley, November 8th, discussion revealed some Agricultural Societies were not only recommending that apple trees be planted, but were prepared to give advice on suitable stocks and also arrange -club orders from reliable nurseries to take advantage of special rates.

This is another indication how the Agricultural Societies may assume responsibility for agricultural welfare in their respective communities.

New Home Ready For

Chicago Stock Show

Finishing touches are now being made to the mammoth new home for the International Live Stock Exposition which will celebrate its 35th anniversary at the Chicago Stock Yards from December 1 to 8.

When completed, it will be the finest structure in the world devoted to such uses. The central section, or amphitheatre, will seat nearly double the number who could be accommodated in the old building which was destroyed in the fire that swept the Chicago Stock Yards, last May.

The foremost herds and flocks from every state in the Union and provinces of Canada will contest the continental championships of their kind at the 1934 Exposition. According to the management, entries closing on November 1st were the largest in the history of this largest of the continents' agricultural shows, where over 12,000 animals were exhibited last year.

British Apple Market

Only very small quantities of Ontario apples have been arriving in the United Kingdom, according to Andrew Pulton, overseas fruit representative. This is partly due to the short crop, but mainly to the better prices prevailing on the local Canadian markets. The Ontario apples have met with a good reception, some fruit even making 30 shillings and some Jonathans 28 shillings. Buyers are paying very little attention to apples without colour or quality. As November is usually a poor month for apple sales, Mr. Pulton does not expect to see prices, even for attractive dessert barrelled apples change from present prices, which are ranging from 22 to 27 shillings. More satisfactory values will be made, before, for some early maturing coloured barrelled apples of the hard winter varieties as the season progresses. Mr. Pulton also believes that the future demand is going to be for dessert apples rather than for the ordinary run of culinary apple. In ordinary seasons the English orchardist will take care of the cooking apple requirements.

Clover and Grass Seeds

The current report on production of clover and grass seeds in Canada, gives the following information :—

RED CLOVER — It is believed that the total 1934 crop in Canada may be around 1,500,000 lbs. as compared with 3,000,000 lbs. last year. This drop was due to an almost 50% drop in the principal production districts of Southwestern Ontario.

Since the high school days he has suffered torture from rheumatism, but says at the first sign of an attack he nips it in the bud with BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE. He says:- "My experience with this wonderful medicine makes me always keep a bottle in the medicine chest. I never worry about bronchitis now."

Mr. Morrison's experience can be yours. If you are waking at nights, racked to pieces with coughing, choked up until you can hardly breathe, just try BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE. You will be astounded how quickly the cough will stop, how your breathing will instantly become easier.

There's nothing like Buckley's for quick, sure, safe relief. It acts like a flash—A single sip proves it.

ALSIKE — This seed in Ontario was practically a failure this year, the production may not have exceeded 375,000 lbs. as against 1,500,000 lbs. in 1933 and an annual average of 6,500,000 lbs.

ALFALFA — Production will be less than last year due to wet weather and damaging frost in August. The total Canadian crop is estimated at 1,500,000 lbs. as against 2,500,000 lbs. in 1933.

SWEET CLOVER — Total production of this seed in Canada may equal the average for the last five years, 4,000,000 lbs.

TIMOTHY — The total yield in 1934 may approximate 5,000,000 lbs. as against 3,000,000 lbs. last year and an annual average of 2,000,000 lbs.

CANADA BLUE GRASS — This seed was practically a failure this year due to drought in Southwestern Ontario, where its production is largely confined.

To Train Young Farmers

Under the auspices of the Workers' Educational Association of Ontario, University of Toronto, a two-week school for young farmers has been arranged, commencing Monday November 26th in the Department of Economics, University of Toronto.

The object of the school is to develop the latent talent for leadership among young men and women on the farm so that they may fit important places in their respective communities in developing an understanding of the economic position of Agriculture and its relation to the general field of Canadian and International Economics. It is hoped that the success of this school will result in the formation of County schools and also of study circles in each rural community.

The school will meet in two sessions each day — morning and afternoon as the University. At dinner each evening an interesting address will be delivered by prominent educationalists and others. As it is proposed to limit the number of successful applicants, everyone who wishes to attend should send in an application now.

Co-operating with the Workers' Educational Association in the promotion of this Agricultural Year are the New Canada Movement, United Farmers of Ontario, Junior Farmer Associations, and the Co-operative Union.

The cost, apart from living expenses, will be a registration fee of one dollar.

Applications should be mailed to Donald R. McLean, Markham, Chairman of the Organizing Committee, or Drummond Wren, Secretary of the Workers' Educational Association University of Toronto.

Persian Balm invests every woman with subtle charm. Delicately fragrant. Cooling and healing. Dispels all roughness and chapping. Makes skins delightfully soft-textured. Every woman should use this peerless toilet requisite. Dainti ness — beauty — refinement — Persian Balm achieves these in every instance. Softens and whitens the hands. Promotes clear and youthful loveliness. All women who care for additional charm, unhesitatingly choose Persian Balm.

WESTERN CATTLE TO BE FINISHED IN MARITIMES

Western cattle will again be finished on New Brunswick farms this winter. Types will be Hereford, Polled Angus and Shorthorns, the same breeds handled with such great success in previous years. In the spring it is anticipated the cattle will be exported to England, in the event that the Canadian market does not offer better advantages. Four years ago the experience of western cattle on New Brunswick farms was tried out and each season since the operations proved satisfactory and the cattle have been sold to good advantage, providing a means for the profitable use of coarse fall feed as well as furnishing large quantities of manure for fertilizer.

Miller's Worm Powders will eradicate the worm evil that bears so heavily on children and is believed to cause many fatalities. They are an acceptable medicine to children and can be fully relied upon to clear the food channels thoroughly of these destructive parasites and restore the inflamed and painful surfaces to healthfulness. They are an excellent remedy for these evils.

SUGAR FOR STRENGTH

Sugar is acknowledged to be the greatest source of energy for the adrenal glands, which control the body's vitality. Athletes and others who require to put forth energy in any task that requires long physical effort, frequently call on it. Nixon, who is Professor of Medicine at Bristol University, England, the reason for fatigue as a sequence of successes, in the boat race is their coach's insistence on a special sugar diet for each of the contesting crews. Doctor Sorenwell, the Everet climber, singled out sugar as the only food for which climbers have any appetite at high altitudes.

Impressions Of An Ordinary Seaman

BY J. TODD

Ask the majority of seafaring men which is the most inhospitable port they have visited and they will unhesitatingly reply: New York. They have heard the subject discussed time and again by men who have sailed the seven seas, and the reasons for this lack of friendliness have been many and varied.

Perhaps the post-war years of prohibition had something to do with Jack's distaste for a stay in New York. In most other ports the crew, the limited and unessential environment of forecastle or glory-hole, he can find a palliative for his homesickness in the convivial atmosphere of tavern, inn or cafe. But it was hard to rouse his jollimes in the chilly confines of ice-cream parlours and he was far too wary to tamper with the atrocious concoctions of the churches and terse "speak-easies."

Good-Bye Freedom

Be that as it may, in the days of the flinch-talked-of sailoring Jack's affection for New York was no warmer than it is at the present day. Stringent prohibition has been repealed.

Meet him on a ship ready to dock at New York, and he will give you the impression of a chronic "grouser." Why? The Statue of Liberty has just hailed the ship, and, immediately, Jack says good-bye to freedom.

He is handed a landing card, and whether it be his first or his hundredth and first voyage, he must present this card to one of these officials, who ticks off his name on a manifest of aliens, thus sanctioning him to go to a section of another card, permitting leave of absence from the ship.

Having landed after much chasing about and a spot of exasperation, the necessary landing permits obtained, Jack finds the ship invaded and a steady stream of worried-looking officials assailing the gangway: Passenger agents, Customs officers, baggage masters, superintendents, clerks and stevedores; all clothed in a little brief authority—and looking it. Gone is the serenity of strong gales and high seas, and in its place a great deal of commotion and much ado about nothing.

When Money Talks

Down in his quarters Jack is confronted by a squad of tough-looking customers who look like ex-jailbirds but are really customs searchers. Perhaps he is indignant at the suspicious movements of these prying Pauls and gives expression to it.

He should be more discreet. The level of a civilian coat is slowly disturbed and Jack gazes at the metal badge of authority, and, above that, symbol, the ironical, smiling countenance of its owner. Then follows a "systematic" search of his quarters, and dire results if any dutiable is found in locker, cabin or glory-hole, a likely contingency since nearly every article, other than the clothes one stands in, is subject to duty, and should be stored away for sealing purposes, before the ship's arrival in port.However, probably more contraband finds its way ashore in New York than in any port in the world. Money talks.

He has to elude the army of automobile drivers who appear to be in sole possession of the great city of New York. From the unattractive safety of the rating seas to this network of modern enterprise is a nerve-racking experience for the hardiest son of the sea.

The Almighty Dollar

But perhaps the inquiring type of seaman will continue the uneven battle in this vast jungle, with his nerves and passions, and be well chastised for his pains. If he is philosophically minded, and most seamen are, he will feel crushed and baffled in the frenzy of haste and commercialism he will engulfs him. Vague, despairing and fantastic visions of his future will arise from momentarily, but be thrust aside in the all-compelling awareness of his imminent peril.

Straight from the restful indolence of the sea, Jack feels there is somewhere a radio in the vicinity of Camden, in the County of Lennox and Addington, and Lot No. 1, in Block "A" of the Village of Centreville, and a part of Lot No. 23, Concession 6, Township of Camden, in said County.

2. The north-west quarter of Lot No. 24, Concession 4, Township of Camden, in said County.

3. The south-east quarter of Lot No. 24, Concession 4, Township of Camden, in said County.

Being the lands formerly owned by Patrick Evans, deceased.

League of Nations' New Home At Geneva

BY ANTHONY CLYNE

An immense new Peace Palace has been erected on the outskirts of Geneva, to house the League of Nations. The exterior is finished, and the internal installations are well in hand.

The cost of the new building is roughly about $5,000,000, and this does not include the cost of library, for which Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Junior, gave £400,000, nor the large expenditure by the Swiss authorities on a road system connecting the site with the town.

There are three blocks, the Assembly Hall in the middle being flanked by the Secretariat building and the International Research Institute.

The total length of the building is approximately 1,200 feet and the area 192,000 square feet.

The capacity is only slightly less than that of the Palace of Versailles, which in the days of Louis XIV housed 10,000 people. The majestic white facade of the new Palace is relieved by man looms above the trees, looking across the lovely lake at the majestic white facade of Nature's fashioning, that of the highest mountain in Europe.

First Site Too Small

At least a large project, after many initial delays and disputes, approaches completion. For years the indecision of the scheme was the subject of cynical jests among sceptics and painful misgivings among anxious enthusiasts.

That the League would ever have a home truly its own, worthy of the premier it should possess, seemed more than a little doubtful. But muddle and jealousy, mismanagement and dilatoriness, both vanquished, and the dream of the League's supporters has been realised in the solid stone and concrete of an imposing Palace in the Parc Ariana.

Blunders began at the outset, when, in an international competition 377 designs for the new buildings were received in all, from architects in many parts of the world. The building was to be erected on a site of a full little park beside the lake, called Parc Perle du Lac. The jury appointed by the Assembly could not reach agreement to accept any one design so they awarded nine equal prizes, each of which was in fact awarded to the author of the design approved was to be the final choice. A committee settled on the scheme placed in the first of the prizewinners—a French, an Italian, and a Hungarian—were afterwards asked to collaborate in the actual planning.

This method fo producing a composite scheme was obviously risky. Mixtures in architecture are usually unsatisfactory, and the result would be so diamelrical and in other respects successful as it has proved, there are no strikingly original features about the buildings, little suggestive of the Greek ideal of impressiveness depending on the proportion and grouping of masses.

International Touch

In 1929 the foundation stone was laid, and then ensued a long delay. The forlorn, and the late M. Briand, in his usual hungry enthusiasm for the League should at least provide another little stone to keep it company.

At last, in March 1931, work on the foundations was begun, and by the autumn of 1932 there was water on the site. Five times the sum estimated for the first part of the work was expended in draining and obtaining a firm foundation.

The building work has been carried out by a partnership of five companies—three Swiss, one French and one Italian. No British firms tendered for the masonry contract, but a few were received in the competition of the contracts for which they competed.

The Palace is a truly international achievement in planning, erection, and fitting out. For the decorations of the Assembly were invited to contribute in kind towards the decoration of the Assembly Hall and the gifts so far received are panelling from South Africa and New Zealand furniture from Canada, carpets from Persia, the decoration and furnishing of the Secretary-General's office from Holland, the presidential platform in the Assembly Hall from Australia.

The chamber for the Assembly meetings has accommodation for some 600 delegates, experts, and secretaries with about 500 journalists. There are 800 public seats. In order to ensure perfect acoustical efficiency a problem requiring special attention in a hall of this size, the aid of experts from the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research, was enlisted. Under the further side of the chamber give access to committee rooms and lead to the two wings.

Meet the Wife

"Home!" he declares contemptuously. "Go back home! No, sire! Not for me, fold-timer. Blankety-blank dollars last week — blankety-blank dollars the week before. The wife! Gee! Bor ... she wouldn't budde for the King of England! No s'rubbing or cleaning—labour-saving devices for everything! Say! Let's shoot across and see her— she'll be tickled to death!"

Jack is nearly bored to death, but he agrees to the shooting expedition.

Soon Jack is shaking hands with the good lady on the umpteenth floor of a blustmss-like apartment. She is the object of the tickling process, but he devoutly hopes he will not be called on to administer this piece of Chinese torture, and pleasantly ejaculates a quiet hour of home life. But, alas and alack! ... the shooting continues.

A "shot" of synthetic gin, and the loud-speaker is in command.

"XYZ calling ... general news ... Bueben ... Rano, gangster-gunman, racketeer and hijacker ... shot! ... "Baseball scores ... Babe Ruth shoots ... "

"Kalamazoo ... Professor Moonshine predicts his rocket will shoot ... "

Labor-saving devices provide a generous larder of tinned goods, but for a well-nigh unbelievable meal it is proposed to shoot to the Automat. Subsequent shoots; elevator, lift; Broadway, Automat; Bulck, elevator, lift, elevator, Buick, subway.

Good-bye to New York! It is all very well for notabilities or notorieties to expatiate on the wonderful warmth of their welcome; but, to the foreign seaman with neither fame nor fortune, the city affords little scope for his characteristic jollimess, and the Statue of Liberty is only symbolic when fading from view on the starboard quarter of his ship.— Weekly Chronicle, Newcastle, (Eng.)

LEPROSY

MODERN MEDICINE AND THE SCOURGE

Leprosy has been known and feared as at least three thousand years. It used to be prevalent in Europe but it largely died out with the higher standard of living which the same general after the Middle Ages. Today it is endemic throughout the tropics and is particularly severe in warm, damp climates. It is worst in Central and West Africa, in the north of South America, and in a number of the Pacific Islands. But the huge populations of India, China and Japan are heavily infected. Few parts of Africa are entirely free, and there are pockets of infection in Australia, in North America, and in Europe. The high rate in Norway and Iceland is noteworthy.

Until recent year no cure was known. The leper in most countries was a social outcast. The only palliative adopted was compulsory segregation, which at best was, of very doubtful value in checking the spread of infection. Transference to a leper colony meant in practice a sentence of lifelong imprisonment under peculiarly unpleasant conditions. Anyone who has read tales of Molokaia, even after Father Damien's work for the amelioration of local conditions, will realise the dreadful and hopelessness of such a fate. Consequently wherever compulsion was in force, the tendency is inevitable for relatives and friends to hide cases of leprosy and thus promote

FEEDING FOR WINTER MILK PRODUCTION

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The winter feeding of dairy cattle presents the problem of supplying an abundance of feed to maintain reasonable production at a profit. In order to feed cattle economically, the bulk of the feed should be produced on the farm and the quality of the feed is an important consideration.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Fredericton, N.B., the object is to provide the highest quality roughage possible, and thereby make possible a reduction in the protein content of the meal mixture. All hay intended for cattle feeding purposes is cut early in the season when the protein content is high. Provision is also made for an abundant supply of turnips or mangels for winter feeding and coarse grains such as oats, are grown to form the bulk of the meal mixture. An effort is made to prevent the cows from falling off in production too rapidly at any time, as it is often difficult and expensive to bring up production after it has been reduced.

Roughages for dairy cattle should consist largely of good quality legumes or mixed hay and roots or silage. When these feeds are cl...p and plentiful, the cattle are usually fed as much hay as they will clean up and from 30 to 50 pounds of roots per day, the amount of roots depending on the size of the animal and the supply available. When potatoes are fed, as is sometimes the case with mangels, the amount should not exceed 20 pounds per cow per day.

The meal mixture being fed at the Fredericton Experimental Station at the present time consists of 200 pounds crushed oats, 150 pounds bran, 100 pounds oil meal, 100 pounds gluten feed, 5½ pounds salt and 1½ pounds bone char. The amount of oil meal and gluten feed may be increased or decreased according to the quality of the roughage on hand. This mixture contains 16.4 per cent of protein and each 3.to 4 pounds of milk produced, the amount depending on the fat content of the milk.

CANADIAN FARMERS' BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS

Farmers' Business Organizations in Canada is the title of the latest bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture. Since one of the purposes for which the Economics Branch of the Department was established was to study the farmers' co-operative movement, it was felt that the first step to be taken was the acquisition of all the information possible on the activities of such organizations in Canada. To that end arrangements were made for a survey of existing organizations.

Information was sought from all farmer-owned and controlled associations, companies, societies, and clubs actively engaged in business, regardless of their methods of operation or form of organization. The information thus obtained has been summarized and will be found in the 64 pages of the bulletin. It is expected that a similar survey will be undertaken annually or at intervals of a few years, and that the information will form the basis for a permanent record of co-operative activities. The bulletin may be obtained on request from the Publications Branch. Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

VALUE OF CLEAN SEED

Highest Profit in the Best Finished Product

The seed grower who markets his seed cleaned and graded has the same status as the manufacturer who turns out a finished article and thereby realizes the highest return for his product. Further, the farmer who sells a finished product has a definite incentive to produce the best, while on the other hand the low prices obtained by weed infested crops constitute the hard lesson by which the grower learns to improve his methods and produce cleaner crops.

Comparatively few farmers are equipped with the means for properly cleaning the seed they grow. The carefully operated fanning mill will clean grain satisfactorily only when the common impurities are to be taken out, but under the ordinary farm conditions it is almost impossible to accomplish similar results with clover and timothy seed. Fortunately, the central cleaning plant system has been developing steadily during the past ten years and has become a highly specialized business in several areas; particularly in the Ottawa Valley district. These central cleaning plants, equipped with several types of machines for cleaning and grading seeds of cereals, clovers, grasses, and other farm crops, are performing services of inestimable value to the various communities, but more especially to the farmers who have seed as a cash crop. The plants are being operated successfully at moderate rates and have become and have been established either with or without government financial assistance. A three-unit plant, provided with complete machinery and equipment, is equal to the seed cleaning requirements of most farm communities, and costs about $1,200.00.

Added to the advantage of being able to grow bigger and better crops the seed producer, particularly of clover and timothy, owes a further benefit to the central cleaning plant. His seed, well cleaned and brought to the highest grade obtainable by the skilful use of the most up-to-date machinery, can now be marketed at its full value, while growers who are obliged to sell their seed in the rough are realizing returns from 25 to 50 per cent. less. This contrast was fully demonstrated this season. Samples in the Ottawa Valley receiving as much as from 18 to 21 cents per pound for timothy seed, cleaned and graded No. 1, while in other parts of the Province of Ontario farmers are reported as receiving 10 cents per pound for seed of similar quality, but uncleaned.

Raising the standard of the seed used of both grain and forage crops, is a result directly attributable to the central cleaning plant in every community in which one has been established, and in the Ottawa Valley alone from the fact that the 24 central cleaning plants in 1933 turned out 75,000 pounds of grass and clover seed, sealed as Certified No. 1 grade, and 8,000 bushels of cereal seed of Registered grades, the improvement in yield and quality through the cleaning plants was extended to barley growers as well. Large quantities of hitch class barley are now being produced in that area and are now finding a ready and profitable market with malting companies in Canada. The malting companies insist on the grain without cleaning before shipping, over 200 carloads of malting barley being shipped out of the Ottawa Valley in 1933, and more than 250 from this year's crop.

Relieves Asthma at Little Expense. Thousands of dollars have been saving by relying upon remedies for asthma and seldom, if ever, with any relief. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy, despite its assurance of benefit, costs so little that it is within reach of all. It is the national remedy for asthma far removed from the class of doubtful and experimental preparations. Your dealer can supply it.

A Corrector of Pulmonary Troubles. Many testimonials could be presented showing the great efficacy of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in correcting disorders of the respiratory processes. The best testimonial is experience and the Oil is recommended by those who suffer from these disorders with the certainty that they will find relief. It will allay inflammation in the bronchial tubes.

MILK IN THE SCHOOL LUNCH

If a child must carry his or her lunch to school, it should be carefully planned for, after all, it is one day's school lunch box. Wherever possible, particularly during the winter months, arrangements should be made to provide one hot dish at school to supplement the cold foods brought from home. Many milk dishes such as cream soups, cocoa, cream vegetables, cereals, eggs or cheese are easily prepared, cost little, and will add materially to the nourishment and satisfaction derived from the school lunch.

An Interesting Barley Test

Lennox and Addington farmers in the vicinity of Napanee, were much interested during the past summer, in a fertility test which was being conducted on the farm of Mr. J. B. Elliott, R. R. No. 2, Napanee. Here the Department of Chemistry, Ontario Department of Agricultural College, and the local branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, co-operated in laying down half-acre blocks treated with 0-12-6, and an unfertilized block for check. Throughout the summer the fertilized grain showed a considerable increase in vigor over the unfertilized. It was darker in color and seemed to make better growth.

When the neighbours gathered on July 20th to examine the blocks, they were quqitpe impressed with the difference in growth, especially the hastening ripening which resulted on the fertilized blocks. The heads of barley were more mature than on the unfertilized and were heavier. At harvest time, too, there was a difference in yield. The following yields were obtained :—

0-12-6 at 250 lbs. per acre, yielded 53.3 bushels per acre.

2-12-6 at 250 lbs per acre, yielded 69.9 bushels per acre.

-0- at 250 lbs. per acre, yielded 46.6 bushels per acre.

Comparing the yields from the different fertilizers, it is apparent that the added nitrogen in 2-12-6 was of advantage, since there was a difference of 6.7 bushels between the yield of these two fertilizers in favor of the 2-12-6.

If Mr. Elliott continued his field with clover he will see th advantage of the fertilizing next spring. If he did not seed, it, he and his neighbors will do well to watch the same blocks for residual effects in 1935.

PETITION FOR 'EQUALITY OF SEXES IN' FRANCE

Paris, France. — Women, recently added a fifth point to the proposed program for constitutional reform in France.

"Equality of the sexes," was the slogan raised up to further Premier Gaston Doumergue by a delegation of the French League for Women's rights.

"In the new constitution, women should be declared equal from civil, political, economic and social points of view." The petition ran: "In this way France will be able to append her signature to those of the four countries which signed the Montevideo treaty on Dec. 26, 1933."

The signatories of that document pledged themselves to accord men and women equal rights in territories under their respective jurisdictions.

Exports to Scotland Show Big Increase

There has been an increase of 53 per cent. in the amount of bacon imported from Canada into Scotland for the quarter July to September, 1934, as compared with the same period last year, according to the Agricultural Department of the Canadian National Railways. Canada now occupies third on the list, with Denmark occupying first place; the Netherlands second, Irish Free State third, the Netherlands fourth.

THE CHEESE SMUGGLERS

The inauguration of National Cheese Week in Canada, which is being held this week, is meant to create the greater consumption of the finest cheese in the world, calls attention to the fact that, while the subject of cheese may leave the average Canadian somewhat indifferent, it evidently arouses in other nationalities a desire to battle for their own special variety of that commodity. The idea that the smuggling of cheese could never figure as a dangerous and exciting undertaking, may well bring a smile to the face of the Canadian who is surrounded by the pick of the best of his own making, but what kind of smuggling goes on along the coast of the glamorous Riviera? It is not smuggling of diamonds or pearls or perfumes, but of the more practical beauties who throng that glorious strip of southern France, neither is it for other contraband goods. It is cheese, just good, plain Italian cheese. But the Italians, it seems, are patriotics.

The thousands of Italians in Nice and Cannes demand genuine Italian cheese, although they have at hand rather good domestic varieties of French cheese. There is a duty in France on foreign cheese, and consequently, the French and Monaco Customs officials have to cope with a number of professional cheese smugglers. Their methods are original. On one occasion they made a clever capture recently at Garavan on the St. Louis Bridge frontier. The roof of a tradesman's van looked rather bulky. The officials on the French side of the bridge did some sniffing and tapping, took a measurement or two, pried up a few strips of panelling, and found 270 pounds of flat cheese snugly stowed away. On another occasion there was no necessity for such sniffing. A boatload of Gorgonzola, far out at sea between itself and the coast off Cap Martin by the Monaho customs. On still another occasion there was an exciting chase and capture of a smart motor-yacht which brought a ton of cheese from Italy to the rocky isle off Cannes. The agents of the gang smilingly paid a $3,000 fine and were released. Later on, another boatload of cheese was captured at sea, but as the smugglers managed to escape they have transferred their activities to the mountains on the French-Italian frontier.

MELROSE

Melrose, November 23.—The W. M. S. social evening, which was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Badgley on Wednesday evening, was a fine success. About seventy persons were present, who enjoyed the splendid programme of music, readings and contests. At the close of the programme, dainty refreshments were served.

The many friends of Mrs. Samuel Rollins were sorry to learn of her death, which occurred on Saturday evening, after a brief illness, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Weese, with whom she has resided for several years. The funeral was held on Monday from her late residence to Ivanhoe United Church, and was largely attended. The many floral tributes bore testimony to the high esteem in which the deceased was held. The service was conducted by Rev. W. H. Clarke, of Shannonville. Interment was made in White Lake cemetery.

Mrs. G. McLaren, Mrs. F. Bennett, Miss L. Weese and Mr. and Mrs. O. Snider attended the O. R. E. C. convention at Mount Pleasant United Church on Tuesday.

Mr. S. Anderson has been re-engaged as the cheesemaker for Melrose Cheese Factory for the 1935 season. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and daughter left on Thursday for Napanee, where they will reside during the winter months.

Several from here, including Mr. and Mrs. W. Snider and Mr. and Mrs. O. Snider, attended the funeral of the late Digby Denike, at Belleville, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. MacFarlane and Francis were Sunday guests of Mrs. F. McKinney, Belleville.

Mrs. C. A. Knapp returned home on Sunday, after spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. E. Badgley.

MORVEN

Morven, November 26 — Those who attended the Sunday evening service were delighted with the splendid programme put on by the members of the Ladies' Aid. Solos were sung by Mrs. Clarence Baird and Mrs. Will Close, short readings by Mrs. Oliver, Mrs. Fraser and Mrs. Raycraft, while the speaker of the evening, Mrs. A. Lewis, of Camden East, an old and much respected resident of this place for years, was listened to with much interest. The subject of her discourse was "Service," and it was splendidly and ably given.

Miss Jean Withers, of Oshawa, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Withers.

Miss Marguerite Street is visiting friends at Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Sharp spent the week end at Hamilton.

Mrs. E. M. Smith, of Napanee, called at Mrs. Robert Fisher's recently.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pralick and Harold returned on Saturday from visiting friends in Toronto and attending the Royal Winter Fair.

Mrs. Leo. Powers, who has gone to Toronto for an operation, is reported to be doing nicely. Her husband visits up for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Heehan (nee Agnes O'Neil), of Rochester, are spending a few days with the latter's mother, Mrs. John O'Neil.

Mr. John McGrath, who has been ill, is able to be out again.

Miss M. O'Hearn, teacher in the Separate School, spent the week end at her home near Canadogue.

TAMWORTH

Tamworth, November 24.—The remains of the late Mr. Benjamin Lovet were brought to Tamworth for interment. For several years Mr. Loyst resided at Point Anne, formerly he lived at Marlbank.

Mr. David Rodger and Mr. John Anderson, his brother-in-law, both of Toronto, are visiting the former's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Rodger.

Mr. Stanley Williams, of Kingston, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williams, over the week end.

Messrs. Wm. Johnston and Ernest Johnston, of Picton, attended the funeral of their uncle, Mr. John Johnston, of Arden. Mr. Ernest Johnston visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. White, his father-in-law, before returning to Picton.

Mr. Gerald Warner and family, of Yarker, have moved into the village. Mr. Warner has the appointment of assistant vendor.

Rev. M. R. Brown spent a week at White Lake, where he enjoyed a few days' hunting, and was lucky; he brought home a fine deer.

Mr. Henry Lott has returned home from the hospital, seemingly no worse, after the accident of being shot while hunting. The bullet is still lodged in his body, the doctors thinking that as long as it did not bother him it would be as well to give him no further trouble.

Mr. Fred Brown, Mr. Ronald Brown all of Centreville, and Mr. Robert Gilmore, of Tamworth, motored to Toronto and took in the Royal Winter Fair, finding it not only a fine exhibition, but also of much value to the agriculturist.

SILLSVILLE

Sillsville, November 26.—The Sillsville-Conway November meeting of the W. M. S. was held at the Robertson home on Thursday, November 1st, with a fair crowd in attendance.

The sum of $8.40 was realized for the Sillsville Ladies' Aid at a Hallowe'en party held at the home of Miss Lulu Thompson the latter part of October.

Dinner guests with Mr. and Mrs. Herb. White on Sunday last were Mr. Russell Hunter and Miss Hazel Ellis, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Leone Spencer and Jack, and Mr. Geo. Ellis, of Napanee.

ERINSVILLE

Erinsville, November 26. — The frequent rains and open fall have produced an abundance of pasture, and been a great saving on feed, which is none too plentiful in many sections.

There is an unusual amount of poultry of a very fine quality, both turkeys and chickens, some of the latter weighing eight and nine pounds. A ready market is found for this class of fowl.

The road from the village to Mellen's has been treated with a coat of crushed stone, filling up the holes and ruts, which had been made with heavy traffic during the rainy season.

The crusher is still in operation, and the crushed stone is being banked for future use.

The road over the mountain is making rapid progress, under the Campbell Construction Co., who have several hundred men at work.

Engineers are busy surveying the Napanee - Kaladar highway from Sharp's Corners to Mellen's, and it is expected work will soon begin on this portion.

IT'S LIVER THAT MAKES YOU FEEL SO WRETCHED

Wake up your Liver Bile

—No Calomel necessary

For you to feel healthy and happy, your liver must pour two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels, every day. Without that bile, trouble starts. Poor digestion. Slow elimination. Poisons in the body. General wretchedness.

How can you expect to clear up a situation like this with mere laxatives? Laxatives are habits, oil, mineral water, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage? They don't wake up your liver.

You need Carter's Little Liver Pills. Purely vegetable. Safe. Quick and sure results. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c at all druggists. 64

Important Speakers Address County People At Warden's Banquet

Warden G. L. Hawley Host to 250

Warden Gordon L. Hawley was host on Friday evening at a dinner attended by about two hundred representative citizens of the county and the town. Tables were laid in the Town Hall, where Warden and Mrs. Hawley received their guests as they entered the dining room. During the serving of the dinner, music was provided by an orchestra, and before the program started, Mr. MacGregor, the orchestra leader, conducted community singing. During the program Mr. Ralph Sexsmith, of Bath, sang a solo. After the program, dancing was enjoyed for several hours.

County Clerk W. S. Wilson acted as chairman. After making a few remarks he called on the Warden for an address. Mr. Hawley briefly outlined some of the early history of the county, which, he said, was separated from Prontenac in 1969. He referred to the expenditure on roads in years past and the fact that during the last few years no new roads had been constructed, but only maintenance had been carried out. He also spoke of the welfare work done in the county, which costs a lot of money, but which insures the unfortunate citizens of proper care and comforts.

The chairman explained it would be impossible to have each member of the Council make an address, so called on them to stand as he introduced them to the gathering and told their constituency.

Toasts Proposed

Major George J. Tustin, in an appropriate address, proposed a toast to the ladies, which was replied to by Mrs. D. F. Aylsworth. Mrs. Aylsworth reviewed briefly the change in social status among women and referred to the interest of women in reforms, and the prospects for even a higher place for women in the future.

The chairman read a telegram of regret from Hon. W. D. Black, Provincial member for Addington-Frontenac, who with Mr. T. C. Leavens, member-elect for Prince Edward-Lennox to the Ontario Legislature, was to propose the toast to the county.

Mr. Bowerman, in his address, referred to his experience as a County Councillor, which, he felt, was an excellent training for a man entering public life. He said a good County Councillor is one who is willing to go after what he wants for the constituency. If he wins, well and good, but if he loses, he should carry no grudge.

In replying to the toast to the County, Mr. J. M. Simpson, K.C., County Solicitor, spoke humorously of all the municipalities which make up the County. He corrected the impression that the County of Lennox and Addington was ever two separate Counties. It had always been the County, not Counties, of Lennox and Addington since its separation from Frontenac.

Bay of Quinte Executive Make Plans For Conference

Rev. R. T. Richards and Rev. J. E. Beckel were in Belleville last Tuesday attending a meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference Executive. There were represented on the Executive in every Presbytery in the Conference.

During the day, arrangements were made for the holding of the annual conference in St. Andrews United Church, Peterborough, beginning on Tuesday, May 28th. Special speakers are expected from United States and Canada.

A discussion followed re the Albert Street United Church, Oshawa and a special committee, consisting of the Rev. G. C. R. McQuade, Rev. L. McTavish and Rev. P. L. Juli, was appointed to negotiate with the Home Mission Board, and issue the matter.

Mrs. W. H. Vannest Injured Arm At Napanee

Mrs. W. H. Vannest of Enterprise met with a serious accident, Thursday, at Napanee, when she fell while attending the Ontario Temperance Federation meeting. After the session she was descending the stairs at the north door, she made a misstep and fell. Her son was in company with her and assisted her up and took her to Dr. Galbraith's office. Upon examination it was thought that a bone was broken and under the X ray at the office of Dr. Hall the fracture was located just below the shoulder joint. After being treated Mrs. Vannest was permitted to go home with the understanding that it would be at least six weeks before she would be able to assume any responsibility of her household duties.

Mrs. Vannest has been an enthusiastic supported of the temperance movement and much sympathy is extended to her in her suffering.

A Throat Like A Giraffe

The small boy at the Zoo, when he saw a giraffe for the first time, wished he had a throat like that when he swallowed candy, so that he could taste it all the way down. In giving a Christmas present you can make it last as long as a giraffe's throat, by subscribing to The Napanee Beaver. Fifty-two issues for a dollar and a half.

Bring in your subscription and we will send a lovely card to reach its destination the day before Christmas.

St. Andrew's Church Tea and Bazaar Great Success

On Friday afternoon the ladies of St. Andrew's United Church held a most successful bazaar and tea, in the school room of the church. In spite of unpleasant weather, a large number of women of the church and the town were present, and the financial results were very gratifying.

The supper room presented an attractive appearance with its decorations arranged under the direction of Mrs. Ross Archer. Mrs. George Howitt, the president of the Aid, and Mrs. E. J. Corkill, received the guests, who were served tea by Miss Minnie Smith, Mrs. J. H. Madden and Miss Georgie Daly.

During the afternoon a short program of music was presented. Vocal solos were sung by Miss Mary Daly, accompanied by Mrs. Morse, and Mrs. Harry Pawson and Mrs. R. Valkman, with Miss Bessie Baughan as accompanist. Master Billy Goons played a cornet solo, with his mother, Mrs. M. A. Eppleti in the role of accompanist.

The tea table was in charge of Mrs. Eppleti. The cooked food table was under the supervision of Mrs. Vandeboart; fancy-work table, Mrs. Elaine Richardson; candy table, Mrs. W. T. Mackenzie, Mrs. C. B. Creighton, Mrs. R. Humphries; country table, Mrs. Webster; vegetable table, Mrs. James Thomson and Mrs. Haycock.

At all the tables other members of the Aid assisted the conveners in charge after the guests.

The success of the event reflects much credit on the President, Mrs. Howitt, and all the ladies who cooperated so heartily with her.

Napanee Young Man Has Thumb Cut Off Operating Wood Saw

While operating a wood sawing outfit, last Wednesday, Bert McCutcheon had the misfortune to cut off his left thumb. The accident occurred while work was being done at the home of Authmire Pybus, on Thomas Street. While pushing a stick of wood against the saw, the outside bark loosened allowing Mr. McCutcheon's hand to come in contact with the saw. The thumb was completely severed and the first finger was quite badly cut.

Bert McCutcheon is the son of Mr and Mrs. P. H. McCutcheon, of Napanee.

Drama Group Will Present Christmas Programme

The next open meeting of the Napanee Drama Group will be held at the Superior Tea Room Banquet Hall, on the evening of Thursday December 13th, at 8:00 o'clock.

As this will be the nearest meeting to Christmas, the program will be in accord with the season, a dramatised version of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" will be read by Rev. Harry Pawson. Three Christmas carols will be sung by Mrs. J. F. Madden's ladies' trio, composed of Mrs. H. Denison, Mrs. W. A. Templeton, Mrs. V. Zender, Miss B. Baughan, Miss R. Graham, Miss E. Taylor, Miss M. Nolan, Miss O. McMillan, Miss Muriel Wilson, Miss P. Hall, Miss M. Garrison, and Elizabeth and Harriet Madden. Mr. Harold Zender will also sing one number. Rev. R. T. Richards will be chairman.

Following the entertainment there will be a social hour when light refreshments will be served. A silver collection will be taken to defray expenses.

The meeting is open to all who are interested, whether members of the group or not.

G. A. Reid, Belleville Elected, Acclamation Hydro Commission

Mr. George A. Reid, formerly a resident of Tamworth, but for some years a citizen of the City of Belleville, has again been elected as a commissioner of the Belleville Hydro Board.

Mr. Reid's election, this year, was by acclamation. During the year 1933 Mr. Reid was chairman of the Board. At the recent nominations meeting, Mr. Reid gave a very comprehensive accounting of the board's business for the year.

Special Committee Favors Establishing House of Refuge

Report Presented County Council

At the final session of the County Council the special committee appointed to deal with the establishment of a House of Refuge in the County brought in its report.

The committee recommended that the County Council authorize the committee to proceed to negotiate with the executors of the Scherman and Wright estates for the selection of a site for a County House of Refuge under the terms of the donation as accepted by the County, and that the committee be empowered to take any legal steps necessary to secure the trust funds from the estates.

The recommendation was adopted by the Council.

The committee, before making the recommendations, reported that advertisements had been put in the local papers for suitable properties for a House of Refuge. Many applications had been received and considered. Together with the Inspector of Houses of Refuge of the Department of Public Works, Toronto, the committee had visited several properties. They found some of these unsuitable, after necessary alterations were made in the buildings.

It was estimated that to provide a House of Refuge for twenty patients, with the required land, buildings and equipment, an outlay of $50,000.00 would be necessary. Under the House of Refuge Act, the Government would pay $4,000.00 of this amount.

The amount of the Scherman estate and Wright estates being held in trust for this purpose is, schedule given $35,000.00.

The committee, after examining the records of existing Houses of Refuge in other Counties, believe that the County would receive $2,000.00 per year by caring for the indigents in an institution within the County.

County Council met again in session on Wednesday afternoon, the Court House on Tuesday afternoon, Warden, G. L. Hawley, presiding.

All the members were present.

A report re the inspection of the Court House and Jail was read and fyled.

A letter from the Children's Aid Society, Kingston, re a child returned to them. On motion, the Warden, Mr. Kaylor and the Department of Clerk, were appointed a committee to consult with the Children's Aid Society to have all children being kept outside the County, brought into the county.

A resolution from Perth County re indigent patients in hospitals, asking for an amendment to the Hospitals Act. Resolution approved and ordered endorsed.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas of Ernestown Township, appeared before the Council in reference to aid for the keep of Miss Winnie, an indigent girl staying at their home. Referred to Finance Committee to report.

A notice from the Department of Highways, assuming the road known as the Bay Shore Road as a provincial highway, was read, and a by-law will be introduced accordingly.

A report from the County Solicitor re Shermerthorn estate, and the account of the solicitor was read. Account ordered paid and report fyled.

Jubilee Singers Delight Large Audiences At Trinity Church

The Virginia Jubilee Singers, who appeared at Trinity United Church Sunday and Monday evenings, gave all who heard them a musical treat of rare quality.

On Monday evening at the regular church service, they sang two numbers, which clearly demonstrated the lovely quality of their voices and the high order of their ensemble work.

Monday evening's program was one of interesting variety, which made an appeal to all tastes. The negro spirituals, in which the singers were particularly at home, were perhaps the most appreciated of all the numbers sung. In them there was shown, by the shading and expression, the true artistry of the talented singers. The rendering of the favorite "Golden Slippers" was one of the high lights of the program. Each member of the group, as they appeared in solo work, was accorded well merited applause. The plantation songs, rendered with abandon, typical of the negro race, were keenly enjoyed by the program. The effect of volume produced by the singers was truly remarkable, but no more effective than the soft melodious tones in the quieter numbers. The accompanist throughout, gave sympathetic support and leadership to the singers.

Although weather conditions kept some away from the Monday evening concert, nevertheless a really fine audience greeted the singers. They may be assured of a warm welcome if they return to Napanee, at some future date.

The Beaver Santa Claus Fund

The need for contributions to The Beaver Santa Claus Fund is just as great this year as ever before. Every day word is coming in of new families who will need the help of the fund, if they are to be provided for at Christmas time.

Subscriptions are not coming in very fast, so far. If you intend sending a donation, please do so early, so that the committee in charge will know just how far to go in purchasing supplies. Every cent will be spent carefully. Your donation will help make Christmas brighter for some unfortunate family.

After coming to Canada, he practiced law at Belleville.

Local Option Vote Pending in Score Of Municipalities

Local option balloting on various beer and liquor sale questions will take place in over a score of Ontario municipalities prior to the end of January. In eleven additional centres, ballots have already been taken since Renfrew conducted the first beer sale vote on September 27th.

Five municipalities have voted "no" to the question of permitting an authority to be issued to standard hotels. These are: Renfrew, Maxville Glengarry County, South Grimsby, Lincoln County; Tilbury West, Essex County, and Rodney, Elgin County.

In the municipalities of Cardinal, Grenville County; Essex, Essex County, and Almonte, Lanark County local option was thrown over by an affirmative vote. Kingsville balloting resulted in a tie vote, and Beamsville, Lincoln County; Blenheim, Kent County and Chapleau, returned a negative to an amended question.

Votes in various forms are pending in the following municipalities and townships: Harrow, Petrolia, Strathroy, West Lorne, Aldboro', Raleigh, Oliver, Thorndal, Hawboro; Tweed, Marmora, Madoc, Bruce Mines, Southampton, Sandwich South, North Grimsby, Saltfleet, Markham, Mount Forest, Edwardsburg add Collingwood.

Temperance Workers Endorse Resolution To Close Beer Parlors

Neighbors Present Mr. Mrs. G. Vankoughnet With Address - Gift

On Thursday evening, about sixty friends and neighbors from Big Creek, Hawley and Napanee, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George VanKoughnet to spend a pleasant evening before their departure to Napanee. The evening was spent in playing games, after which a bountiful lunch was served.

After lunch, on behalf of those present, Mrs. Carman Day read the address and Mrs. Bert Pretts and Mrs. Biehl presented Mr. and Mrs. VanKoughnet with a beautiful occasional chair and floor lamp, as a token of friendship and genuine goodwill.

Mr. and Mrs. VanKoughnet thanked their friends for the gifts and all sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows," and dancing was enjoyed for a few hours which brought an enjoyable evening to a close.

The address was as follows :—

Dear Friends— It is with much regret that we have learned of your departure from our community, where all your life has been spent, but since this opportunity has come to you and you feel that it will be an advantage, we send with you our sincerest wishes for success in your new home. You and your children have been a part of our community for years, and have taken an active interest in all that pertains to its welfare, and we shall miss your friendly greeting and helping hand; but what is our loss will be someone else's gain, as you carry those qualities of kindness, fair dealing and neighborliness which have endeared you to your friends. We know that it is hard, especially with older people, to break the associations and ties that link one to memories of the past, but perhaps you will return to us again after a few years.

We have met here tonight as your friends, neighbors and, in many cases, as old schoolmates, to bid you farewell, and we take this opportunity to present you with these gifts as a token of our friendship, and of our good wishes for your future success. It is the earnest wish of your many friends that you, Mr. and Mrs. VanKoughnet, Miss Mabel and Mrs. Garrison, may be spared to enjoy many years of good health and happiness together.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors : Mrs. V. Biehl, Mrs. B. Pretts and Mrs. C. Day.

Will See Co-operation Churches and Public Organizations

In spite of the heavy downpour of rain there was a good attendance at both sessions of the annual convention of the Lennox and Addington County Temperance Federation.

The afternoon session began at promptly 2 o'clock with Rev. Harry Pawson conducting the worship period. The President, Mr. H. E. Vannest, then took charge of the meeting, and in a very well chosen words pointed out the position in which temperance people found themselves today. The Secretary, Rev. James E. Beckel, presented his report, followed by the Treasurer's report. Committees were also appointed.

Rev. G. R. Turk, of Toronto, the guest speaker of the day, sang a temperance solo, and following it launched into his afternoon address on the subject, "Standard of Value." Mr. Turk pointed out that there are four standards of value : Commercial, Political, Social, and Spiritual. He stated that both Premiers in Ontario had sold out to the liquor "that the present law is not a temperance measure, and our Premier knows it." He said that even though the whole of North America is wet today, it is no time to whine, scream, quit, or be discouraged, for our "strength is in God." He made a stirring attack on church people. He said "that the membership of the church is not clean of drink. What we need is a campaign to dry up the church. Can't have a revival in the church with beer and wine in the cellar. Can't have a family altar with wine and beer on the table. A man can't be a force or value to the church who drinks booze." He closed his afternoon message with a challenge to intensify the work of all these standards.

Following Mr. Turk's address, Mr. H. E. Vannest, the retiring President, sang a very inspiring solo. Rev. R. A. Whattam, Organizer of the Federation, then took the platform and discussed ways and means by which the Federation can function in behalf of our County. Much that Mr. Whattam said was of value to publication, but as a guide to those who are conducting the fight against the liquor forces of this County, and Ontario.

Evening Session

The evening session opened at 7.30, with congregational singing, led by Mr. J. A. Mallory.

The evening worship period was conducted by Rev. R. T. Richards, Rev. G. R. Turk sang another of his timely temperance songs, which was received by the audience in a manner as is unique. Then followed the committee's report.

The Essay Contest, which is becoming a special feature of these conventions, followed. There were contestants : Miss Mabel Miller, of Wilton ; Mr. Walter Burrard, of Wilton, and Mr. J. Yeomans, of Odessa. These three young people presented temperance orations which were both educative and inspirational. The judges were Rev. R. T. Richards, Mr. Trenouth and Miss Elsie Parks. After careful consideration, the judges decided that Miss Marion Miller was the winner and Mr. Richards presented the cup.

At this time Mr. Earl Bell, of Enterprise, sang most effectively, "The Ninety and Nine."

The closing address was given by Rev. G. R. Turk in a most humorous and effective manner challenged ministers and lay folk to courageously face up to the evils of strong drink. The convention was closed by the benediction.

Good Quality Poultry Sold at Annual Fair

About 40 Tons Bought in 2 Days

The first of the annual Napanee Poultry Fairs for this season was held on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. About forty tons of poultry were bought in the two days. Of this amount a little over fourteen tons went to the Lennox and Addington Poultry Pool. The balance was purchased by three independent buyers, Canada Packers, Gatehouse, and the T. Eaton Co. The amount bought last week about equals the total procured last year in the first two fairs, that of November 8 and November 29 and 30. The later fair in 1933, about the middle of December, brought a comparatively small quantity.

There were slight variations in the prices paid this year and last year. In 1933, chickens went at from 12 to 17 cents, and turkeys 12 to 15 cents. This year a few choice lots of chickens and turkeys sold at 18 cents. The top price for both was generally 16 cents, with fowl at 11 and 12 cents.

The Pool paid an advance of 10 cents per pound for chickens and turkeys and 5 cents for fowl. A very small quantity of geese and ducks was offered. Evidently the later pool, on December 14, will bring in the bulk of the geese, ducks, and more turkeys.

The quality of the produce offered was especially good this year. At the Pool headquarters, in the Armouries, where five graders and an inspector received the fowl, well over half of the quantity bought graded milk fed A and B.

The weights in the different grades purchased by the Pool are given below :

Chicken
Milk Fed A—	4404½ lbs.
Milk Fed B—11108	lbs.
Select Special—
A—	344½ lbs.
B—	3388½ lbs.
Fowl
Select Special—
A—	1303 lbs.
B—	1682 lbs.
C—	397 lbs.
Roosters—	25 lbs.
Pullets—	2464½ lbs.
Total Chicken and Fowl,	24,934½ lbs.

Turkeys
Young Hens—
A—	371 lbs.
B—	4744 lbs.
C—	133 lbs.
D—	28 lbs.
Young Toms—
A—	6444½ lbs.
B—	1402 lbs.
C—	384 lbs.
Old Hens—
A—	75½ lbs.
B—	9 lbs.
Old Toms—
A—	21 lbs.

Total Turkey,	3,500½ lbs.

1,561,825 Ballots Cast In Ontario

Toronto — Exactly 1,561,825 of the 2,130,420 Ontario citizens eligible to vote cast ballots in the provincial general election last June, according to an official statement issued last week by Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck.

This is the first official compilation of election figures.

British Public Opinion Decidedly Pacifist

London. — British public opinion is overwhelmingly internationalist-minded and pacifistic, judging by the results of the popular referendum of the League of Nations Union, released last week.

On the first question, "Should Great Britain remain in the League of Nations?" the vote was yes, 53,302 and no, 1,230.

On the second question, "Are you in favor of a general reduction of armaments by international agreements?" the vote was, yes 57,569; no, 2,782.

On the third question, "Are you in favor of the general abolition of military aviation by land and sea through an international agreement?" the vote was, yes, 54,074; no, 4,660.

Bright Spots In Canadian Trade

Following are the bright spots in Canadian business for the week just ended, as compiled by The Canadian Press :

Montreal—Port of Montreal customs collections for November about $7,000,000, an increase of three per cent over returns for same month, 1933.

Montreal—C. P. R. net earnings for October $4,100,679, up $42,252 from October, 1933 net, and C. N. R. $2,809,429, up $266,844.

Hamilton, Ont. — Sherwood Porcelain Company plans to open here, manufacturing low-tension insulators, employing about 25 people at start.

Kentville, N.S. — Over $200,000 canning plant to be erected here which will employ about 100 people.

Hull, Que. — Negotiations opened for establishment of woolen factory in Hull by U. S. concern, to cost about $600,000.

Windsor, Ont. — Canadian Postum Company, Limited, started this week construction of$417,000 addition to their plant here.

Windsor, Ont.—Sealed Power Piston Ring Corporation of Muskegon, Michigan, will open a plant here and expect to be in operation by January 1st.

Port Arthur, Ont. — Abitibi Pulp and Paper Company mill here, long in idleness, will be reopened at once, the Company announces.

Beaver Santa Claus Dance Well Supported

Largest Crowd Attend Since Inauguration

The widespread interest shown in the Beaver Santa Claus Fund was well evidenced on Wednesday evening by the tremendous crowd of people who patronized the benefit dance for the fund. The Town Hall was filled to capacity. The guests included not only townspeople, but a large number from the country for miles round, and also citizens of Kingston and Belleville. The total proceeds amounted to nearly $170.00, practically all of which is clear, as very little expense was incurred.

The response for assistance in preparing for the event was very generous. Under the capable management of Miss Josephine Laing, an efficient organization of helpers looked after all the details. Chief Ernest Vatis rendered most valuable assistance by taking charge of the distribution of tickets to ticket sellers and in preparing the hall. During the early part of Wednesday a group of interested ladies came to the hall and made sandwiches and helped arrange the tables for the card players. Delicious home made cakes, cream, coffee, and materials for the sandwiches were all donated in generous quantities. When the lunch was served after the card game, there was sufficient to look after the needs of even the unlooked for large crowd.

The hall presented a most attractive appearance, for the platform was artistically decorated, under the direction of Mrs. Wallace, with colored crepe paper and evergreens. Sixty-five tables, all the hall would accommodate, were placed for the card players. At least fifteen tables more could have been used if space had permitted.

All the prizes for the evening were donated by citizens of the town. The prizes for euchre for ladies went to Mrs. Authmire Pybus, 1st ; Mrs. Louis Vanvolkenburg, 2nd ; Mrs. Edith Williams, consolation. For men, Harry Ohlman, 1st ; Arthur Young, 2nd ; Bert Seymour, consolation.

Mr. Geo. Greer Resigns Position of Bailiff For County

On Monday, Mr. George Greer of Napanee, resigned his position of bailiff of the First and Second Division Courts for the County of Lennox and Addington. Mr. Greer has held the position for nearly thirty years, having been appointed by the Whitney Government on May 5th, 1904.

He has served continuously under the Whitney, Hearst, Drury, Ferguson and Henry Governments. He succeeded Mr. Wesley Huff in the position. Mr. Huff, though past ninety years, has continued in public service, as court constable.

During his thirty years of office Mr. Greer has given most efficient service, in a position which calls for rather unpleasant duties at times.

While lunch was being served, the drawing for the cake, on which tickets had been sold, was held. Mrs. Joseph Sager held the lucky number and Mrs. Thomas Randall won the prize for holding the lucky tea cup. The door prize was won by John O'Connor.

After the tables were cleared from the floor, music was provided for the dancing by a local orchestra, and dancing continued for several hours after midnight. The spot dances were won by Don Scott and Mrs. Hicks, of Deseronto.

While it is impossible to extend thanks to all the individual helpers, special mention should be made of George Griffin, a local carter, who generously collected and returned all the card tables, free of charge.

Miss Leaney, and the committee in charge of the disbursement of 'The Beaver Santa Claus Fund donations, extend most hearty thanks to all who in any way helped to make this year's dance the greatest success since its inauguration.

SORSOLEIL ON THE JOB AGAIN

The Deputy-Minister of Social Welfare has been reinstated in his position. Thus we hope, ends a very unpleasant incident. It is hoped that the whole matter will now be dropped and the Deputy-Minister enabled to go on with his work unhampered by the storm of the past week. Both Mr. Sorsoleil and Hon. David Croll, the Minister of Social Welfare, have gone up in the estimation of the public. They have maintained their poise and their dignity during the whole of this unpleasant episode.

In view of the storm of protest which greeted the newspaper accounts of his speech, Mr. Croll suspended the Deputy-Minister until he should receive from him an adequate explanation. This explanation has been made. Mr. Sorsoleil, in his report to the Minister, pointed out that when he spoke of immoral conditions, he was referring to the conditions in the problem schools which come under his department and not to the school system as a whole. He further stated that he was sorry if his comments had seemed, in any way, to cast reflection on the children of the province. This was a dignified and statesmanlike way of settling the matter.

Those who have lost somewhat, in the storm, are the Premier and Rev. George Little. The latter forgot himself so far as to let his race prejudice get the better of him, and the Premier, who made several mistatements in answering Mr. Little, in seeking to cover them with his, too frequent, rude wisecracks. The newspapers who distorted the address and caused the unpleasant situation, will now have to look for some new sensation to exploit.

OFF TO A GOOD START

The dance at the Town Hall, last Wednesday, was a splendid evidence of the increasing interest which is being shown in the children of the Town. Six hundred people bought tickets for the dance and euchre and, in spite of the heavy downpour of rain, the Town Hall was crowded to suffocation. Everybody had an enjoyable time. A good spirit pervaded the whole evening. Even though dancing was difficult because of the large crowd, yet nobody grumbled, and everybody was happy.

It took a great deal of preparation to ensure the success of this entertainment — tables had to be secured, lunches prepared, and a thousand and one details foreseen and attended to. We are very grateful to all who so cheerly and willingly assisted. Their combined efforts, as well as providing a splendid evening's entertainment, netted a goodly sum, which will go to The Beaver Santa Claus Fund for the purpose of providing a Christmas for the underprivileged of the community.

CHINESE WALLS AND ROMAN "LIMES"

If the Great Wall of China was begun in 221 B.S. to say that it is "contemporary" with the "Limes" or boundaries of the Roman Empire is perhaps misleading. It was in one sense contemporary; but it was also much older. The term "Limes of the Roman Empire" is occasionally applied to the Wall of Hadrian, stretching from Bowness-on-Solway to Wallsend-on-Tyne. That was the "Limes Britannicus"; and is held by modern scholars to have been substantially built by Hadrian, who was Emperor from A.D. 117 to A.D. 138. The frontier of the province of Arabia, which faced the desert, was protected by the "Limes Arabicus." But Arabia did not become a Roman province till the reign of Trajan (A.D. 98 to A.D. 117).

The term "Limes," however, is usually applied to the "Limes Germanicus," which protected the frontier between the Rhine and the Danube. The line from the Main across the Upper Odenwald to the Upper Neckar was fixed with a wooden paling, probably by Hadrian. Pius Antoninus, his successor, pushed forward and built a parallel fortification. This is visited to-day by the connoisseur and consists of the Pfahlgraben, an earthen mound and ditch, best seen near the Saalburg, and the Teufelsmauer, a stone wall, which begins where the mound ceases. Those remained for 100 years, until the district was lost about A.D. 250. But the Roman "Limes" was thus long subsequent to the Wall of China.

Besides the Wall of China and the "Limes" other great walls strew the records of antiquity. The student of Greek history is repeatedly coming across them. When the "Ten Thousand" advanced with Cyrus to the Battle of Cunaxa in 401 B.C. they struck the defenses of Babylon, which joined the Tigris and the Euphrates. Here was the Wall of Media, 100 feet high and 20 feet broad, built of bricks cemented with bitumen. A trench 40 miles long joined the wall to the Euphrates; but, though Artaxerxes had 400,000 men, he let Cyrus pass without opposition through the space of seven yards which divided the wall from the trench.

The Persians built a narrow wall built across the Pass of Thermopylae, the gate of Greece. This was rebuilt by the Spartans against Xerxes. Then there were the Long Walls of Athens, which joined the city to the harbour and which the Spartans pulled down to the sound of flute-players after they had crushed the Athenians. At Syracuse, too, where the Athenians incurred their signal disaster, were walls and counter-walls. And there were the walls of Thebes, the stones of which, by the legend, moved into position of their own accord at the sound of Amphion's lyre. — Manchester Guardian.

TIM BUCK COMES HOME

Last week, five thousand people crowded the Toronto Union Station to greet Tim Buck on his return from the Kingston Penitentiary. He had served three and a half years of a five years' sentence for being a Communist. Five thousand people is a goodly number — almost twice as many as there are citizens in Napanee. That this many people should crowd to welcome one of their number, should provide food for thought for all of us. Evidently, the method of trying to crush a movement by imprisoning its leader, has failed. For, in the meantime, the number of Communists in Toronto, has grown and other leaders have carried on in his absence.

On Monday, we listened to a Toronto clergyman giving an address on Communism. He read a press despatch from Spain, which described how six Christians had been shot by some Communists, in the revolution. He then took this as a text from which to denounce Communism as a brutal and barbarous thing.

Now, we have absolutely no brief for Communism, but a little thought and a little knowledge of history is all that is needed to show how futile, both the methods described above, are, to combat the growing menace of Communism. In the first instance, history is replete with illustrations of failure, by force, to crush ideas. In the early Christian Church that method was used with terrible abandon, but without any permanent effect. And in the struggle for Democracy, the same was true. Indeed, it is now possible to kill ideas by locking up those who hold them.

In the second instance, denouncing Communists as blood-thirsty and murderous people, will not get very far either. For on the same count there are other groups against which the same charges might be levelled with equal force. Hitler, a so-called Christian, in cold blood murdered or ordered murdered, last June, many of his closest friends because of his fear of them. And the Christian Church has many pages which are a blot in its history. Tens of thousands of noble men have been persecuted, tortured and burned by the Christian Church for no other reason than that they held ideas contrary to the prevailing rulers. But for the crimes of Hitler we cannot hold Germany guilty, nor we can we indict a whole Church for the brutality of its one-time fanatical leaders.

There is only one way to destroy the growing menace of Communism, and that it to do away with the conditions in which it grows and flourishes. It is true that one of the wonders of history has been the benefits which our present capitalist system have conferred on humanity. The world has enjoyed more material benefits during the past three hundred years than ever before in its history. And yet, in its last stages, the system which gave these benefits their birth, is strangling them to death. It is nobody's fault. It is the natural development of a good thing allowed to run wild. It is nobody's deliberate plan that tens of thousands in our country are out of work, that there is poverty in the midst of plenty, and that men and women are robbed of their self-respect and have to go on relief. This is nobody's fault — all the same it is these conditions which make it possible for Communism to grow. In order to defeat Communism, our present system must be modified, changed, and controlled so that the great benefits it is capable of bestowing, may be enjoyed by all. The flood gates of credit must be pried open; goods must begin to flow, work must be provided and the decencies of life made available for all. Our present economic system must be made to provide better conditions than Communism promises—if Communism is to be destroyed.

There is plenty of brain power to do this, if only it were tackled in a big way, by those who, at the present time, are in control.

"MORE BEASTS FOR WORSE CHILDREN"

We harbour a suspicion that if our learned visitors of the American Library Association were to be left alone with their own exhibits—undisturbed by duty and the thought that someone is looking—a motley crew of them would spend their time in the Children's section. It is one of the wonders of English literature that so large a proportion of the very best that has been written is about children or is addressed, at least ostensibly, to them.

Instances leap to mind—Lewis Carroll, Edward Lear, Stevenson, Milne, with a host of others, not forgetting the Americans, Joel Chandler Harris ("Uncle Remus") and Mark Twain in his "Huckleberry Finn" mood. Even if the serious poetry and prose of Kipling were lost, "The Jungle Books" "Puck of Pooks Hill" and "Just So Stories" would assure him of immortality. Some of the best English of our time was turned out by Kenneth Grahame in a handful of "children's books." "Dream Days," "The Wind in the Willows" and "The Golden Age."

Our visitors are concerned, naturally, no less with the satisfaction than with the entertainment of children. Americans may well boast of their fine literature for children—the histories and geographies, for example, of Robert Hillyer for the very young and of Van Loon for somewhat older children.

The general public recognizes that much so-called children's literature is double-faced, is chiefly read by grown-ups for their own amusement. "Alice in Wonderland" entertained little Alice Liddel, and her sisters is quite "a different way than it has since appealed to generations of sophisticated elders. Belloc's "Bad Child's Book of Beasts" (with B.T.B.'s inimitable illustrations) is best read at the age of sixty. And so with many others.

What, then, is the reason for this outpouring of genius into children's book? The English, certainly, are a shy race, fearing to wear their hearts even upon their literary sleeves. There are secret springs in the English heart, and, we suspect, in the American, which cannot openly be revealed to "Olympian" grown-ups. But disguise their pure outpourings as "just for children," and the shyness may be overcome. In point of fact, often enough the children are not allowed near the new "kid's books" until the parents have read them from cover to cover, for their own delight.—Montreal Daily Star.

ANOTHER ARMS ENQUIRY

Great Britain, it now develops, will after all investigate her own manufacturers of arms and munitions. A royal commission, vested with powers of subpoena almost identical with those of the Nye committee, will probably be the medium through which light will be directed into dark corners of what has long been a most profitable British industry. Sir John Simon, the foreign secretary in a speech which has been called "a remarkable example of stating error in public" has revealed his earlier policy. Swayed by the weight of domestic opinion, he has now made it clear that his government will do what, a short time ago, he found a subject for very ineffective sarcasm. Washington Post.

FREEDOM FOR INDIA

An experiment unprecedented in the history of the world is brought to the point of initiation with the completion of the report of the British parliamentary committee that for eighteen months has been at work in London upon constitutional reforms for India. This experiment aims at handing over the reins of self-government to elected representatives of 350,000,000 heterogeneous people split into fragments by age-old antagonisms of creed, civilisation, race, language and caste, besides being so illiterate that only 156 men and 29 women in a thousand are able to read and write. British officials for a hundred years, have been preparing this vast human canvas for such a consummation.—Boston Christian Science Monitor.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor of The Napanee Beaver

Dear Sir:—

The writer's attention has been drawn to an article of C. H. Carlisle in a recent issue of the Financial Post, in which it was brought forward, the alarming increase of our national debt, through the Canadian National Railway deficit.

Mr. Carlisle, a leading Canadian industrialist, tells us, that Canada's total dollars of railway deficits since 1919, is equal to the total value of gold production in Canada since records began in 1858. It is as much as the entire assessed value of property and income in the City of Toronto.

The writer asks the pertinent question: "how long can any business continue to run behind at the rate of $100,000,000 a year — $300,000 a day — $12,500 a minute — $200 a second?"

I have not checked these figures, but coming from as reliable a source of information as the Financial Post, we may assume they are fairly accurate.

The tax payers' question is, "How long are we going to be asked to put up with this tremendous loss?" apparently a sacrifice to political expediency. The mandate issued by the powers thands off the Canadian National Railways to the Government which has indeed been a costly experience and now it appears that as the back-seat driver has spoken the burden, it is only fair he should be allowed the privilege of expressing his disapproval of being made a bankrupt.

It is admitted that in order to put the road on a solid financial foundation, the water must be squeezed out of it, and the sooner it is done, the quicker the road will be on the way to recover.

Then the revenue must be increased. How? May I answer this question first. Have passenger trains served the people and the people will or can be educated to use train service again, from which they have been forced. Second, modernize your freight service to meet present day requirements. Modern business today demands modern services—if the railway will not give it, and others grasp the opportunity — who's fault is it?

The shipper and merchant will only be too glad to patronize the railroad, in place of trucks, if the railroad will give them service.

Have express-freight trains run on schedule, same as passenger and through freight trains, leaving off and taking on shipments at stations, same as passengers. Merchants receiving, will know when to expect, and shippers when to ship. Arrangements may be made in small cities for delivery, and pick up freight, by local carters or truckmen, and in larger centres, where it was found that it would pay, railroad-owned trucks could be used. In failing to prominent shippers and merchants, who are now shipping by both rail and truck, if a satisfactory delivery by the rail route could be provided, it will not be long before most of trucks on the highway, now competing with the railroad, would be forced out of business, for lack of freight. Decrease truck service, increase volume of railway freight.

GENERAL SMUTS' SPEECH

The British Commonwealth has its feet in both worlds, the Old and the New, and the Dominions have even stronger affiliations than Great Britain with the United States. The U. S. A. and the Dominions would alike be estranged from a League of Nations which had been transformed into a fighting machine, designed to carry out its decisions by force of arms. The League was designed first and foremost to be the Round Table of the Nations. In that capacity it represents the framework of the collective system which must be regionally built up. In spite of all its shortcomings, General Smuts believes that more and more the recognition is dawning upon us that there really is a society, and not merely a collection of nations. Not in stark nationalism, political or economic, lies the way out of present troubles, but in "our steadily increasing sociality, in the widening of interests, in the open door and the removal of barriers and restrictions, in the dominance of large human principles transcending national boundaries." It is the recognition that in mankind we are members of one another." Many of these things General Smuts has said but seldom with so deep a conviction with so restrained an eloquence, and with so close an eye to the practical difficulties of the moment.—London Times.

THE COST OF AMERICAN BEAUTY

The (American) Department of Commerce reports that the wholesale value of cosmetics manufactured in 1929 was more than $360,000,000—an increase of 16 per cent over 1927. The retail value of these preparations has been estimated at $775,000,000, to which must be added the cost of personal service in beauty parlors and barber shops, amounting to about $400,000,000. The national outlay for cosmetics in the first half of 1934 is probably smaller than in 1929, but the slump is estimated to be less than in many other lines. Women, and increasing numbers of men, too, have learned that beauty is not only the most beautiful, especially in times of depression.— Literary Digest, New York.

THE ROYAL WEDDING

If anyone doubted the attachment of English people to the Royal Family, or their love of domesticity, they have only to look at the photographs of the crowds that stood to welcome Prince George's fiancee, Princess Marina, on her arrival in England. The delight with which the news of the royal marriage was received,

SPEEDS PAST AND PRESENT

Rather less than 53 hours from England to Melbourne is one of those things that are best realised by relating them to other times. The achievement has been linked with the centenary of Melbourne, and if we think back 100 years we do get some interesting comparisons. When George Stephenson was being examined by counsel as to the evidence he intended to give before the Parliamentary Committee on the Liverpool and Manchester railway scheme he said that he had a confident expectation of propelling his locomotive engine at the rate of twenty miles an hour. Thereupon counsel for the scheme told him that if he did not exceed that he would not bring his engine within a reasonable pace he would probably damn the whole thing and be himself regarded as a maniac fit only for Bedlam.

Before the Select Committee of the House of Commons, Stephenson was told that someone had said that a speed of 10 miles an hour by road would be practicable; he then declared his own view to be that railway ought to exceed forty miles an hour on the most favourable gradient."— Miscellany.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 9TH, 1934

"THE CHRISTIAN AS TEACHER"

MATTHEW 7: 24-29; ACTS 18: 24-28

Teaching religion is a definite and pressing obligation resting on men and women of Christian training, experience and character. For not only do boys and girls need to be taught the way of life, but men and women of mature years are often perplexed, disturbed and worried about the affairs of the Kingdom.

The first requisite of the teacher is that he should, himself, be master of his subject matter. The subject matter of Christianity is "the good life." To be in a position to teach that, one has, himself, to know the secret of successful living. To achieve that, one must have an intimate and accurate knowledge of the means by which, through all the ages, men and women have found that peace and comfort, and satisfaction which are the hall marks of successful living. He must, as well, have achieved, by personal experience, that fulness of life which is the aim of all human endeavour.

There are those who attempt to teach religion who, when tested by these two standards, have no qualification for the task; who know little of "the good life" either from a study of God's dealings with man, or from personal experience. There has been an increasing tendency, during the past decade, for men and women who have achieved prominence in any sphere of life, to speak with assurance and authority on religion. It may be a movie actor, it may be a baseball player, it may be a newly elected or appointed public man invariably, when interviewed, they will be asked about religion, and their views are quoted as though they possessed some special significance because of the prominence of the man in some totally different area. It is, of course, true that everyone has some views on religion. But to be in a position to teach or to speak authoritatively, one must, himself, have learned the secret of the abounding life as it comes from personal contact with God.

Today, when we are in the midst of a changing civilization, and our ideas are in a state of transition and flux, it is increasingly important that men and women should seek to inform themselves thoroughly with respect to the Bible, to religion and its implications for the new and modern society. There are a few, in every church, who have done that, and on them rests the responsibility of leading them into an intelligent understanding of the deeper things of our faith. But information is not enough. Unless the information reflects itself in life, it is only an intellectual exercise.

In today's passages, two instances are given of the effectiveness of the teaching ministry. After Jesus had told the story of the man who built his house on the rock and the man who built his house on the sand, those who heard Him, marvelled because he taught with authority and not as the scribes. The authority He possessed came from His own intimate relationship with God. It is not to be supposed we may have the same authority, and yet we may have an experience of God, so real and personal, that none to whom we tell it can for a moment doubt its reality.

In the other selection, we have a very splendid example of how two mature and experienced Christians, kindly and gently instructed another. With Christian —charity and love Aquilla and Priscilla took Apollo aside and set him right on some matters of doctrine, and enabled him to speak with greater influence and confidence, to those to whom he ministered.

This is never an easy thing to do and yet Christian grace and love will overcome all diffidence, and enable the teacher to offer help, advice, and instruction, without offence. The great world, with all its perplexities, and heart breaks, is waiting the effective ministry of the word of which Christian men and women are the custodians.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Degroff, of Moreve, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hartman.

Mrs. Bruce Graham, of Syracuse, visited with friends last week.

Miss Audrey Leaman, of Kingston, spent the week end with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Heath.

Mr. and Mrs. John Brown spent Saturday with the former's sister, Mrs. Vanderwater.

Mrs. Harrison, of Kingston; Mrs. Frank Walker, of Harrowsmith, and Mrs. Hartman, of Perth, spent a few days the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wright.

Mr. Daniel Murphy, of Marysville, formerly of Bath, called on friends last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Manuel, of Oshawa, are spending a few days as guests of the former's sister, Mrs. Fletcher, and Rev. Dr. Fletcher.

Mr. Blacklock attended graduation at Stevenaville, and spent the week end the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Beam, Buffalo. Mr. Blacklock taught at this school before coming to Odessa.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Montgomery were called to Buffalo, owing to the illness of their daughter, Mrs. Chas. Dean. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. James Boyce.

Mr. J. L. Swift received the sad word that his father had passed away at his home in Cobourg. The deceased had been in poor health for some time, and was in his eightieth year. Mr. Swift, accompanied by Mrs. Swift, left on Friday to attend the funeral, which was held on Saturday, and they returned on Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Heath and Mr. and Mrs. Dorland Laird and son Johnny, motored to Toronto and spent the week end the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Heath.

The C. G. I. T. are arranging to hold a concert in the Sunday School rooms of the United Church on Friday night, December 7th.

Last Wednesday, Miss Ruby Grant, daughter of Mr. Harold Grant, and the late Mrs. Grant, and Mr. Nelson Kennedy, of Westbrook, were married by Rev. S. B. Griffith, Pastor of the Free Methodist Church. After the ceremony the happy couple left for Buffalo and other points of interest for their wedding trip. On their return they will reside at Westbrook. Their many friends wish them health, prosperity and happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Merchant delightfully entertained the Young People's Club at their home, near Ernestown, last Monday night. A very enjoyable time was spent and delicious refreshments served by the hostess.

The St. Alban's Guild held a euchre and dance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Milsap last Tuesday night. There were thirteen tables in play for euchre, and the prizes were won as follows: Lady's, prize, Miss J. Smith, Kingston; gent's, Mr. Geo. Waken, Glenvale; traveller's prize, Mrs. Charley Mooney, Westbrook; consolation, Miss Jackson. Refreshments were served by the members of the Guild, and dancing continued until the small morning hours. The music was furnished by Mr. Joseph Lawlor, Mr. D. Babcock and Mr. W. Milsap.

The Violet-Switzerville Women's Institute held a concert and dance in the Town Hall, and it was largely attended. The Aces' orchestra, of Deseronto, furnished the music for the dance.

BAY CIRCUIT

Bay Circuit, December 3. — The Township road work is nearly completed, and many of the roads are greatly improved. The plan of allowing the taxpayers to do their own road work has been a very satisfactory plan, and has been most acceptable to most of the farmers. Mr. Walter Sills has been in charge of the work.

Mr. James Graham, who lives on the River Road, had the misfortune last week of falling from a beam in his barn. The doctor was called and discovered that his arm was broken and he was badly shaken up. He will be forced to remain in bed for some weeks.

Remember the Gretna Ladies' Aid meeting this Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. John Mellow. This is the annual meeting, with election of officers, etc. Everyone especially urged to attend.

The play, "Little Things," was presented by the Young People of Bethany in their church last evening, Monday, December 3rd. In spite of the sleet and snow there was a good crowd present. The play is most amusing at times, and then again very serious, with a splendid moral attached. The household trouble grew out of modern problem, buying a car and trying to pay for it on the instalment plan. Those who thought that life's riotous actions are but little things lived to see differently. Every member of the cast played their parts well. Those who took part in the play were: Mrs. J. Clark, Mrs. Miss Florence Goodman, Miss Ruth Miller, Miss E. Clark, Miss G. Clark, Messrs. Bruce Hueck, J. Clark, Ronnie Miller, James Miller, Vernon Joyce. Miss Martin and Mr. George Burtch also assisted in the preparation of the play. Musical numbers were given between acts by Claude Harnden, Donalia Robertson and Ronnie Miller. The group would be very glad to present the play at other centres, and anyone wishing to secure this helpful play are asked to communicate with Mrs. J. Clark, R.M.D No. 3, Napanee.

Mrs. Lowery, of Prince Edward County, has been spending a week with her sister, Mrs. W. Goodman Sr.

The Bethany Ladies' Aid are holding their annual meeting at the home of the President, Mrs. Geo. Harris, this Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Pot luck suppers are quite a common affair on this circuit these days. The Bethany Ladies' Aid are having such a supper in the Orange Hall on Wednesday evening, December 12, at 7 o'clock. Good entertainment following. Come and enjoy a good meal with your friends.

The Bay View Orange Association held their annual meeting in the lodge room on Monday last, with a good attendance. The following are the officers for 1935: W.M., Mr. Chas. Sills; D.M., Mr. Walter Rankin; Chaplain, Mr. Frank Clarke; Secretary, Mr. William Joyce; Treasurer, Mr. William Goodman; Marshall, Mr. Walter Joyce; Lecturers, Messrs. George Hawley and Victor Martin; Committeemen, Messrs. B. Edgar, Herb. Martin, W. Miller, Jas. Keech and J. E. Beckel.

Mr. Joseph Smith was taken to Kingston Hospital on Sunday and was operated upon for appendicitis. At time of writing he is doing very well. His wife is staying with him for a few days.

The third in our series of Sunday School banquets was held in Bay Church on Friday evening last, with an attendance of one hundred. Supper was served at 7 p.m., and everyone seemed to enjoy the good things to eat. The entertainment followed, with solos by Miss Verna Hueck; reading by Mrs. Williams, chorus by the senior Sunday School children, and an address by the minister. The winners of the conquest, under the direction of Mr. Everett Lennox, provided the programme, while Mr. Kenneth Sexsmith and his group supplied the eatables. The evening's function was a success in every sense of the word.

Mr. Clare Sexsmith, Mr. Karl Sexsmith and Kenneth were in Napanee on Thursday evening, attending the annual meeting of the Ontario Temperance Federation.

The Bay West Women's Missionary Society are holding their monthly meeting at the home of the President, Mrs. W. Dillebpeck, on Tuesday afternoon, December 11, at 2.30 o'clock.

The Hay Bay Ladies' Aid are having a special quilting at the home of Mrs. Peter Huyck this Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hambly was the scene of the November meeting of the Sand Hill Ladies' Aid. It was a special birthday meeting, and the birthday cake was won by Mr. William McCabe. The program was an excellent one and consisted of duets, readings, and an address. The attendance was unusually good, and all who were present enjoyed the program, the lunch and the social time. Through the special efforts of the evening the Sand Hill congregation were able to meet all their obligations for the year, with a tidy balance on hand to begin the year 1935. Arrangements were made to have the next meeting on Wednesday, December 19, with a special Christmas program.

A very unique and successful evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Baldwin on Tuesday last, when the Ladies' Aid of Anderson held one of those special suppers prepared and served by the Aluminum Goods, Limited, of Toronto. Mr. A. H. Cullen, the representative, not only catered to the supper, but gave a very interesting and profitable address on food values, methods of cooking, etc., during the latter part of the evening, games were enjoyed, under the direction of the Young People's Union. The thanks of the organization were extended to Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin for their kind hospitality.

The Young People's Union will hold their semi-monthly meeting in the church on Tuesday evening, December 11, at 8 o'clock. Good program, refreshments, etc.

Rev. J. E. and Mrs. Beckel were in Kingston on Tuesday, looking up the sick folk in hospital.

Week end visitors at the parsonage were: Mrs. J. Vickery, Oshawa; Mrs. C. Ellis and Mrs. C. Grills, of Colebrook; Mrs. Robinson, of Toronto; Mrs. A. Cook, of Brooklin, and Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Beckel, of Kingston.

MILLHAVEN

Millhaven, November 26. — The weather has taken a sudden change for the colder.

A number from the surrounding districts attended the shower held at Mr. Ray Carr's last Friday evening, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hunter. Many useful gifts were received by the young couple, showing the esteem in which they are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Young and family spent Sunday at Mr. and Mrs. William Doyle's, Ernestown.

Mr. and Mrs. Miran Young and son, Leonard, of Sharbot Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Venton, of Odessa, also Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Young, of Ernestown, took dinner on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Almon Young.

Messrs. James Milligan and Ross MacDonald, of Kingston, were recent callers in this neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Payne and Mr. Gordon, of Kingston, took tea on Sunday at Almon Young's.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wemp were recent visitors in Kingston.

INGLE

Ingle, December 3. — Mrs. Fred York is convalescing in Kingston General Hospital, having had the misfortune to have a badly sprained shoulder.

A large number from this street attended the Poultry Fair in Napanee on Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Nellie Allen, of Pine Grove, spent Sunday at Mr. Robert McLaughlin's.

Quite a few from here took in the bazaar at Tamworth on Saturday afternoon.

We regret to hear of the serious illness of a former resident of our neighborhood, in the person of Mrs. Leo Powers, who is at present in a Toronto Hospital.

CAMDEN EAST

Camden East, December 1.—Everyone is enjoying the mild weather. Let us hope it continues.

Several from here attended the Poultry Fair in Napanee on Wednesday last. There is an abundance of poultry throughout the district.

The Young People's Union meeting was well attended on Friday night last.

School closed here on Thursday, on the occasion of the Royal wedding in London, England.

Members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church motored to Newburgh and attended the annual thankofferting meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. George Black have returned, after spending a few days at the home of the former's daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Bash. Close, Croydon.

Miss Clarke and Rupert Storms, of Verona, were recent guests of the latter's sister, Mrs. Roy Butterill, and Mr. Butterill.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Walsworth spent the week end with his mother, Mrs. Walsworth, at Sydenham, who is in ill health.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Spafford motored to Toronto on Saturday to spend a few days and to attend the Royal Winter Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Shane, of Desmond, and Mr. and Mrs. Burgoyne, of Camden East, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Shane, at Odessa.

Mr. and Mrs. LaRue, of Belleville, were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Alkenbrack.

Rev. A. L. McTear and Mrs. McTear, of Cataraqui, were the recent guests of Rev. Canon R. W. Spencer and Mrs. Spencer, at the Rectory.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Barr moved from Mrs. E. Martin's house to the house vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Henderson.

Miss Helen Williams spent a few days in Kingston recently.

Mr. and Mrs. B. McGarvey spent Thursday afternoon in Newburgh.

Mr. George Jeffrey returned to his home here, after spending three weeks at Selby, with Mr. and Mrs. John Barry and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Williams spent Saturday in Napanee.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the United Church, under the leadership of the President, Mrs. John Fairbairn, will hold their December meeting in the United Hall parlor on Thursday, December 6th, at 2 p.m. The President requests that all those who have the Nickel Calendar please be kind enough to bring them or send them in to this meeting, as this is the last meeting in 1934. There will be election of officers for the ensuing year also. All the members are cordially invited to attend.

The W. M. S. of the United Church under the leadership of the President, Mrs. R. Lewis, will hold their December meeting on Wednesday, December 12th, at 2 p.m., at the home of Mrs. Fred Snider. Do not forget to bring the Sunshine Bag, as this is the last meeting of 1934. There will be election of officers for the ensuing year. All members are cordially invited to attend.

FOURTH LINE

Fourth Line, December 1.—Poultry Days passed off with the same bustle and excitement as in previous years. Mrs. S. Clarke, of Wilton, was a recent visitor at the home of Amson Hagerman.

Miss Marjorie Sharpe, of Kingston General Hospital, was the week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Craig.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Hagerman and family visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fenton Reid on Thursday last.

The funeral of the late Mr. Geo. Dawson was held in Bethany Line Church on Thursday afternoon last. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. James Robson and daughter, Betty, also Mr. and Mrs. Karl Denyes, of Napanee, motored to Sydney on Sunday last and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Ketcheson.

Mr. Arthur Parrott, of Toronto, spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Craig.

Preparations are well under way for our Christmas entertainment, which is being held on Thursday evening, December 20th. Please remember the date.

Wardens Banquet

The toast to Canada was proposed by John A. Wesse, M.P. for Prince Edward-Lennox, and by Colin Campbell, member-elect for Addington-Frontenac to the Federal House. Mr. Wesse talked of the splendid way in which Canada is coming out of the depression. He said, it is an evidence of the faith of the people in the future of the country, a faith similar to that of statesmen like W. L. Mackenzie, Hon. Geo. Brown, D'Arcy Magee, Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He cautioned the people to continue to think sanely and deeply, if they would help bring Canada out of its present difficulties.

In his address on Canada, Mr. Campbell dwelt on the sameness of the people of the country and the fusing of the peoples who were the pioneers into a great race of steady people. He expressed great confidence in the future of the land with such a background as Canadian people have.

Mr. Herrington's Address

Mr. W. S. Herrington, the last speaker on the program, replied to the toast to Canada. The theme of his address was "Canada, an Object Lesson for Peace." In part, he said, not many years ago we had a great war that was supposed to end war. Since that time there had been many ferences without number. The League of Nations was formed to promote peace. But still there is the fear in all nations of another war.

Nearly all wars in the last fifty years have been of racial origin. Wars have been started in Europe because of the efforts to segregate the races within the various countries. The same difficulty presented itself in Canada, where we have the French and English races. But Canada has solved this problem and shows that two races can live peacefully together.

Canada is in the unique position of having only one neighbor, and has been saved complications which often result in countries surrounded by other nations. For many years past, legislation that would foster peace has been passed by Canada and the United States. In 1817 a treaty was entered into that provided that no armed ships should be on the Great Lakes. In 1871 a treaty allowing the free use of the canals by the two countries on the boundary waters was passed. In 1894-1898 a conference concerning the lake levels and the question of pollution of the waters was held. And in 1902 the International Waterways Commission was formed to deal with the question of lake levels and disputes concerning the boundary waters, with full power to act.

In 1909 the International Joint Commission was appointed, which is really a League of Nations, comprising Canada and the United States. Any difficulty arising between the two countries may be referred to this commission, who have power to report, but not to decree. It is incontrovertible that war between the two countries may ever occur, so long as this tribunal exists.

While the rest of the world is wrangling and building armaments Canada and the United States set an example of peaceful relations, based on common sense.

TOWN COUNCIL

The Town Council met in regular session on Monday evening. Mayor Tustin presided and all members were present.

After the reading and accepting of the minutes of the last meeting, the Clerk read a letter from J. A. Ellis, Provincial Secretary for Relief defining the meaning of a single person, and outlining the relief to be extended to such a person.

Deputy-Reeve Wilson gave the treasurer's statement of receipts and disbursements, to date. The report showed the year's taxes collected up to November 30th, to be $80,000. On motion the treasurer was granted a voucher for $4,765.56, expenditures made by him during November.

Mr. Wilson also reported that the request of the local Chautauqua Committee, for rebate of rental of Town Hall, was not favored by the Finance Committee. On motion of Messrs. Wilson and Morden, the recommendation was adopted by the Council.

Councillor Morden reporting for the Streets Committee, showed an expenditure of $1123.88 since last meeting and an unexpended balance of $225.00.

Councillor Cowling reporting for the Fire, Water and Light Committee, recommended that no change in the town's lighting be made except at the rear of the Town Hall on the market square. The recommendation was adopted, but after a motion was passed to reconsider the question. It was decided to also change the light cluster at the corner of Simcoe and Bridge Streets, placing one light at the intersection and another on Simcoe St., above Bridge St., about fifteen feet.

Reeve Hughson presented the Chief of Police's report. It showed convictions 54, unfastened doors, 8; unfastened pumps, 3; accidents, 6; arrests, 9; transients detained, 334; fines and fees collected, $44.50.

Councillor Exley gave the Social and Welfare report for November. Expenditures were: food, $56.14; clothing, $14.02; medical attention, $46.62; shelter, $1.13; fuel, $43.49 total $160.40.

Councillor Morden requested the Clerk to prepare for the next meeting a by-law for the appointment of auditors for the town's books.

A motion was moved by Councillor Luffman, seconded by Councillor Cowling, that the Fire, Water and Light Committee be instructed to install a light at the rear of the Council Chamber on Mill Street. When put to a vote, the motion was lost and Councillor Cowling asked for the yeas and nays.

Yeas — Messrs. Cowling, Luffman, Masters, Tustin, Wilson.

Nays — Messrs. Exley, Hughson, Morden and Topping.

Motion carried.

Details of Bank Canada Notes Announced by Hon. E. N. Rhodes

Ottawa — Members of the Royal Family and two famous Canadian Prime Ministers are portrayed, on the new currency to be issued by the Bank of Canada. Details of the new money were made public through Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Finance Minister. The denominations so far contracted for are 1's, 2's, 5's, 10's, 20's, 50's, 100's, 500's and 1000's.

Sir John A. Macdonald, Confederation Prime Minister, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the great Liberal, who was Prime Minister from 1896 to 1911, are the two Canadians whose likenesses will be perpetuated in the new money. Sir John A. Macdonald's likeness will be engraved on the $500 bills and that of Sir Wilfrid on the $1,000 notes, the reverse sides bearing allegorical engravings representative of agriculture and "protection" respectively.

The new bills will be six inches long by 2¾ inches wide, fractionally shorter and wider than the United States bills and much smaller than the existing Canadian notes. They are countersigned by the governor and deputy governor of the Bank of Canada and a certain proportion of each series is printed in the French language.

Exceptionally fine specimens of the engravers art, the new bills are to be distinguished in a selection of delicate predominating colorings. The 1's will be green, 2's blue, 5's orange and 10's purple. Colors for the other denominations have not been definitely decided.

The new dollar bills carry the likeness of King George on the reverse. Queen Mary's likeness appears on the 2's, with an allegorical figure symbolic of transportation on the reverse.

On the 5's there is the likeness of the Prince of Wales with an allegorical representation of "power" on the reverse, while the 10's bears the likeness of Princess Mary with an agricultural scene on the reverse.

On the 20's, 50's and 100's there will appear respectively the likeness of the Princess Elizabeth, the Duke of York and Duke of Gloucester.

Lieut.-Col. F. Towers will take delivery of the new currency as fast as it is printed and have it "run through the signature machines in readiness for circulation immediately the bank commences operations, probably late in January.

All the engravings and printing are being carried out in Ottawa.

the minister and officials of Trinity for the convention.

2. We express to Rev. A. J. Wilson our sympathy in his illness, and a hope for a speedy recovery.

3. We express our appreciation to Mr. Vanness, retiring President, and to Rev. J. E. Bechel, Secretary-Treasury, for their untiring services during the last five years.

4. We express our appreciation to Rev. G. R. Turk, of Toronto, for his solos and addresses, and to Rev. R. A. Whattam for his services to the convention.

5. That we suggest that in the Oratorical Contest, in the future, contestants' age limit should be from 16 to 24.

6. That we put ourselves on record as deprecating the policy of this province in placing in many municipalities, beer parlors, and we urge upon each municipality in our county, where such beer parlors have been placed, to take such measures as they deem wise to remove this evil from our area.

The Napanee group, after discussing what steps ought to be taken in Napanee, came to the following decision: "That the churches in the town of all denominations separately discuss the question of the beverage rooms, and appoint representatives from each church, who shall seek the co-operation of the Presidents of the Rotary Club, and all other groups who are interested in the moral welfare of the community, and that all these groups together proceed to do what is necessary to close up the beverage rooms."

All women should be interested in humanitarian work and social welfare—Mrs. Thomas Edison.

EVERY SPECK OF THE ROAST MAY BE USED

The last of a roast always seems to taste better than the first slice. Perhaps it's because these tasty bits of brown outside slices that fall off in slicing and those juicy bites that one has to dig out from around the bones, are actually the choicest part of the meat. It seems ankind to slight these juicy bits by treating them as scraps. In reality these so called "left-overs" make the foundation for many a delicious dish.

Cut all the meat from the bones just as soon as the roast is taken from the dinner table. Don't let the meat dry out. Place the cut meat in a bowl and cover it closely with a lid or waxed paper. The bones go into the soup kettle. Cover them with cold water, add salt and simmer them gently for an hour or more. This delicious broth or meat stock may be used as the basis for soups, gravies or sauces. Place it in a glass jar in the refrigerator, for tomorrow's use.

"But why don't you yawn when he stays so long? He'll take the hint and go."

"I did yawn—but all he did was to tell me what beautiful teeth I had."

U. S. Devaluation Act Of Benefit in Canada

Toronto, — Dr. Sumer H. Slichter, professor of business economics at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., told the Liberal Conservative Men's Club in Toronto, recently, that part of Canada's economic recovery was due to President Franklin D. Roosevelt's move in depreciating the United States dollar. The professor said that action had allowed Canadian funds to "relish to the sterling area on the exchanges.

"I think," he said, "we have been a very useful laboratory to you. You have been able to take the things we have done that were right, and abstain from those which were wrong."

He remarked that prices and purchasing power rose faster in the United States than in Canada, but that raised wages and production rose faster in Canada.

"I think you have been helped in some instance which does not affect us," he said.

Napanee Has Two Entries in Eastern O. A. B'ketball Asso

Napanee will be represented in the Eastern O.A.B.A. by junior and intermediate squads, who are preparing for the opening of the league, after the Christmas holidays.

The local junior squad, under the coaching of M. A. Epplett, are rapidly rounding into shape. Losing most of last seasons regulars, the team is composed largely of juveniles who are quite capable of filling the shoes of those who graduated in the spring. Napanee Juniors won their section honors last year and hope to make it two straight, this year. It is not certain, as yet, who their opponents will be; possibly K.C.V.I. and Y.M. C.A. In the other section, Queen's, R.M.C. and Deacon A.C. of Belleville.

After an absence of a few years, Napanee will again have an entry in the Intermediate O.A.B.A. The Napanee team will be known as the "Grads" as the team is composed of former members of N. C. I. teams. The Grads are under the management of Joe Thomson, former star of N. C. I. teams. Although against strong opposition in this league, the "Grads" hope to make a favorable showing. The personnel of the team is Claude McDonald, Joe Thomson, Jack Callaghan, Arthur Prink, Ollie Howitt, Fred Oliver, Hank Robinson and H. Webster. The "Grads" are self-supporting and hope that the basketball fans will show their appreciation of their efforts to bring smart eastern teams here to play, by turning out and helping them in a successful season.

QUEEN'S DEFEAT GRADS IN EXHIBITION GAME

Napanee's new Intermediate basketball team received a setback in the opening encounter played against a fast Queen's team. Although beaten by the score of 18-14, the Grads showed that before the end of the season they will make the grade as an Intermediate squad.

Although the game was the first of the year, both teams travelled at a fast pace, with both basketed being threatened at all times. In the opening half, the play was very even, with neither team showing much superiority. The score seesawed back and forth, ending at half time, 9 to 8 in favor of Queen's.

Queen's team opened up and began to make a run-away of the game, scoring basket after basket in the second half. With the score 18-8 for Queen's, Napanee took possession of the play and forced the Queen's team on the defensive for the remaining part of the game. Two beautiful baskets by Thomson brought Napanee back into the running, but try as they did, were unsuccessful in tying the score, Queen's were victors by the score of 18-14.

The Queen's team was composed of a fast travelling outfit, led by Simmons, who, it is expected, will make the grade as a member of Queen's Senior Intercollegiate basketball team. Simmons held the scoring honors for the night, scoring eight of his team's eighteen points. For Napanee, Oliver was the standout, accounting for six of Napanee's 14 points.

The teams were:—

Queen's — Simmons 8, Thomson 4, Stevens 4, Carmichael, Crawford, Rodgers 3.

Napanee — Prink 2, Oliver 6, Thomson 4, Callaghan, McDonald, Howitt, Webster 2.

OBITUARY

BENJAMIN GEORGE HAMM

The funeral of Benjamin George Hamm, who passed away last Wednesday evening, was held from his residence on Ferguson Avenue, last Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. The casket was banked with beautiful floral offerings, silent tributes of esteem, and the service was in charge of Rev. Dr. Fletcher. During the service congregational singing that favorite hymn of Mr. Hamm's, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." S. Holmes and Mrs. Stanley Sprowle sang very sweetly Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar."

The pall-bearers were Messrs. J. A. Bell, B. L. King, Fred Vrooman, W. E. Thrift, McDonald and Overton Powley. To mourn his loss besides the widow, are three sons, Robert of Odessa, Fraser of New York and Charley of Toronto.

Interment was made in the family plot in Violet cemetery.

Card of Thanks

Mr. and Mrs. George VanKoughnet, Miss Mabel, and Mrs. Garrison wish to thank their many friends and neighbors for the kindness shown them on Thursday evening, November 22nd. 59ap

Wedding Bells

MOONEY — BENN

A quiet wedding took place at the United Church parsonage at Roblin, on Saturday evening, November 24, when Carrie Gladys Benn, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Benn, of Sharp's Corners, became the bride of Charles Augustine Mooney, son of Mrs. E. Mooney and the late Mr. Mooney, of Napanee.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Asselstine of Roblin were present and acted as witnesses. Rev. W. D. Craig, of Roblin, officiated.

"We had fewer mishaps on the road in my day," said grandfather.

"Well, we have high-powered cars nowadays," said Alice.

"Yes, there is a difference between witnesses and home-sense."

"What is a finishing school?"

"A place where girls who have any lingering respect for their parents go to have it removed."

ONTARIO DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Lennox and Addington County Branch

C. W. BUCHANAN, B.S.A.,
(Agricultural Representative)

Practically all of the past two weeks have been spent attending the Winter Fairs.

The judging teams representing the County of Lennox and Addington, were as follows:—

Ottawa Winter Fair—Francis Way, Tamworth; Clifford Hozeboom, of Odessa; Garnet Dupre, R. R. No. 4, Napanee.

Royal Winter Fair—Donald Paul, O. A. C., Guelph; Godfrey Barr, R. R. No. 4, Napanee; Robert McFarlane, R. R. No. 1, Odessa.

The judging team at the Ottawa Winter Fair stood tenth in the judging of live stock, and eleventh in the judging of weeds and weed seeds. Individual prizes were won as follows: Class 518, (Sheep), Francis Way, fourth; Class 519, (Swine), Garnet Dupre, fifth; Class 2042 (Oats), Garnet Dupre, fourth; Class 2043, (Weeds and Weed Seeds), Clifford Hogeboom, third.

The team at the Royal Winter Fair stood eighteenth in the live stock judging competition. Thirty teams took part in this keenly contested competition and this was the best standing a team from this county has ever made at the Royal. Donald Paul stood eighteenth in the individual score competition and won a generous cash prize donated by the Royal Winter Fair. Donald is attending the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, this year after having successfully completed the two-year course at the Kemptville Agricultural School.

The Boys' and Girls' Club exhibit was another feature of the junior section at the Ottawa Winter Fair. The following members of the Napanee Boys' Potato Club were successful in winning cash prizes in this section: Arthur Perry, R. R. No. 1, Napanee; Bruce Outhill, R. R. No. 2, Bath; Willard VanSkiver, R. R. No. 1, Napanee; Ernest Penn, R. R. No. 2, Napanee; Howard Henderson, R. R. No. 3, Bath.

Another feature of the Junior section at Ottawa was the classes provided for winners of first prize in the wheat, oats, barley and potato classes at the 1934 Rural School Fairs. Quite a number of the pupils took advantage of this opportunity to exhibit a sample of the grain or potatoes which won first prize at their school fair. Of the nineteen samples forwarded from this county twelve received cash prizes. They were:

Oats — Jack Huffman, Moscow; Benedict Modewell, R. R. No. 4, Napanee; Addie Switzer, Wilton. Gerald F. Miller, R. R. No. 3, Napanee. Douglas Embury, Newburgh.

Wheat — Ruth Babcock, Harrowsmith, Claude Weese, Selby, Harold Wagg, R. R. No. 6, Napanee.

Rural New Yorker Potatoes—Cecil King, Moscow; Douglas Embury, Newburgh.

Irish Cobbler Potatoes — Lorne York, R. R. No. 1, Tamworth, Leon Close, R. R. No. 1, Odessa.

Next year we hope to have every winner of first prize in these classes prepare a sample to be sent to Ottawa.

Arrangements are being made for the Annual Short Course in Agriculture, for boys and Short Course in Home Economics, for girls, to be held during the month of February. It is expected these courses will be held at Odessa. Watch this column for definite announcement later on.

The Provincial Public Speaking Contest usually held in Toronto, at the Easter convention of the Ontario Short Horn Breeders and Feeders, has been postponed for a year, at least. However, the local contest will be held as usual in the assembly hall of the Napanee Collegiate Institute, on Thursday evening, December 6th, commencing at 8:00 o'clock. All first prize winners in the public speaking contests held in 1934 Rural School Fairs will compete for a trophy emblematic of the county championship. In addition to the trophy there are books donated by the T. Eaton Company to winners at the School Fairs, will be presented by a representative of that company. The public is cordially invited to be present at this contest and we hope for a good attendance. We need to give Lennox and Addington a representation of our county every, encouragement and a good attendance at this contest will go a long way in doing this.

KELLOGG'S ACHIEVE SCOOP WITH AN HISTORIC PICTURE

London, Ontario (Special from London, England), November 30th.—The Kellogg Company of Great Britain, Limited, in conjunction with the London, England, Daily Mail, has secured special permission to feature an exclusive photograph of the actual wedding ceremony of Prince George and Princess Marina, taken inside Westminster Abbey.

For the first time in the history of the Daily Mail, the front page will be devoted to news purposes. The photograph will occupy almost the entire front page, and an offer will be made of 8 beautiful photogravure reproduction of the wedding scene in size 15 inches by 12 inches. This will be sent free to anyone in Great Britain, Ireland, in two package tops from any of the Kellogg cereals.

The Daily Mail will rush pictures direct from the wedding scene back to their offices for Kellogg's approval, and will then rush prints, by aeroplane, to Manchester, England, for the northern edition.

The Kellogg Company's unique offer will reach the breakfast tables of over two million British families —the daily circulation of the Daily Mail. Kellogg's products are located in London, Ontario, Sydney, Australia, and Battle Creek, Michigan.

ROBLIN

Roblin, December 3—On Tuesday evening, November 27, Roblin Ladies' Aid Society held a banner and social evening at the home of Mrs. John Benn. A pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present, an interesting programme being supplied by the following: Solo by Miss Hazel Baker, recitation by Miss Florence Smith, accordion music by Sherman Arnold, and orchestra music by Messrs. Adam Scott, Nellis Dafoe and Garnett Brooks. A nice sum was realized from the sale of goods by the Roblin ladies, while the Forest Mills ladies received the proceeds for the bountiful lunch which they served.

At the request of the members of Roblin L. O. L. a special service was held in Roblin United Church on Sunday afternoon, November 25. The weather being favorable, the church was filled to capacity. A large number of members from other lodges were present. The united choirs of Roblin and Forest Mills rendered two selections, which were very suitable for the occasion and added much to the service. Rev. W. D. Craig, who is minister of Roblin United Church was the speaker, and gave an address of interest to both members and others.

Mr. and Mrs. George Booth called at Mr. Frank McConnell's, Sr., on Sunday.

"Sunnyex, Bobbie, that another bee would strike your right cheek," asked the Sunday School teacher; "what would you do?"

"Give him the other cheek to sting," answered Bobbie.

"That's right," said the teacher.

"Yessum," added Bobbie, "and then if he struck me I'd paralyze him."

PEARSON'S GENUINE CREOLIN

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

BABY PICTURES

No doubt about it, the babies themselves "directed" these snapshots. In other words, they did as they pleased and the camera was clicked at the right instant.

THERE aren't any official statistics that we know of, so we're perfectly safe in saying that babies constitute the largest single group of snapshot subjects.

It's perfectly reasonable that this should be so; for we snapshoot those things in which we are most interested. For another thing, babies make ideal subjects, because they don't pose. They're always natural.

There are baby pictures and baby pictures, of course. Some arouse spontaneous enthusiasm; others are merely records, without much appeal.

What's the essential difference between the good and the merely so-so baby pictures. Usually you'll find, the good pictures show infants doing something—crawling, chewing a doll, wrestling with toes, or even indulging in a real good cry. The merely so-so pictures give us only recognizable glimpses of babies doing nothing much at all.

Of course, it's possible to take a picture of a sleeping baby and get a charming result. But to do this, the camera work must be unusual. Very well, what about the technic of baby pictures?

First, you'll need to have light enough for action pictures. Few babies stay still long enough for time exposures. Out-of-doors, you'll have no trouble at all working in open shade or out in the full light, providing it's not so bright that it casts unpleasantly sharp shadows or causes the baby to squint. Use the regular snapshot time and lens opening.

This time of year, of course, it may be more convenient to work indoors. And indoors you'll have to take baby pictures indoors, during the daytime, is to get the subject fairly close to a big window (not necessarily a sunny one) and then use a photoflood-type lamp to light up the side of your subject that's away from the window. A photoflood bulb in one of those inexpensive reflectors will be found very handy for this and other indoor shots. If there's a lot of light coming from the window, you'll be able to use a regular snapshot exposure. For surety's sake, better work with the lens at its widest opening. Wait until your subject strikes an interesting pose; then click the shutter and the picture's yours.

Don't forget that you can use supersensitive film to get beautiful action shots with much less light than other films require.

And let your baby subject "direct" his own picture. Let him do as he pleases, with only slight suggestions from you. So doing, you'll get real looking, satisfying pictures. And you'll always treasure them.

Influenza Left Her With Kidney Trouble

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Soon Made Her Well Again

Ontario Lady Recommends Dodd's For All Kidney Ailments

Acton, Ont., Dec. 14. (Special)—"I had been troubled with my Kidneys ever since I had the 'Flu,' writes Mrs. R. Davidson, who lives at this place. "I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after taking two boxes I found my trouble had vanished. I keep a box on hand all the time, and if I get the least pain I take a couple of Pills, which soon sets me all right again. I am over forty years of age, and recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for all ailments arising from faulty kidneys."

When even slight kidney derangement is neglected there is the risk that Rheumatism, Backache, Lumbago, etc., will eventually result. These disorders are the penalty of neglecting the kidneys. However, no need to be a martyr to these complaints, if you take Dodd's Kidney Pills.

SELBY

Selby, December 3.—Dr. Smith delivered a very fine sermon on Sunday evening on the subject of "The Leading of God," showing clearly that sometimes it is necessary for God to defeat our plans to bring us to his purposes.

The Circuit Board is called to meet at the church on Monday, December 10, at 2 p.m.

The ladies are reminded that the annual meeting of the W. M. S. will be held on Thursday, at 2 p.m., in the Sunday School hall. All the members and friends are urged to attend.

The Mission Band will meet on Friday, at 4 p.m., at the parsonage.

Christmas is on the way. Already we hear of preparations for the annual school concerts.

The entertainment, held on Friday evening, under the auspices of the Y. P. S., was a decided success. The programme was in the form of three one-act plays, put on by different members of the society. Each play was splendidly acted, and the efforts of the cast greatly appreciated. Such evenings as these speak well for the talents of Selby young people. At the invitation of Empey Hill the programme will be presented again at Empey Hill, on Friday, December 8. For those who have not heard it, here's your second chance. The proceeds are for the Y. P. S. Missionary Fund.

Mrs. Harry Johnston, of Arden, was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Rikley, during the past week.

Rev. and Mrs. Hall, of Belleville were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Smith at the parsonage on Tuesday.

HAYBURN LADIES' AID

The Ladies' Aid held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Walter Platt on Tuesday afternoon November 20.

About twenty members and visitors were present. The devotional period was in charge of the President. The roll call was responded to by a verse from the Bible.

Mrs. Howitzon gave the minutes of the previous meeting, and the Treasurer's report was given by Mrs. John Dickson, and showed a balance of nearly one hundred dollars in the treasury.

A lively discussion followed regarding the removal of the sheds at the church. The matter was laid over until a later date.

Mrs. Roy Wagar read the 117th Psalm, and the meeting was brought to a close. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess, and the ladies do heartily thank Mrs. Platt for her kind hospitality.

On Friday night, November 30, another of Hay Bay's successful pot luck suppers was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Loyst. Regardless of stormy weather about sixty-five people were in attendance, and were served with an abundance of good things. A sale of numerous articles was held, and a special feature of the evening was the drawing of the lucky ticket for the quilt. Mrs. Ed. Pacey, of London, Ont., held the lucky number. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $18.50.

NEWBURGH W. I.

The Women's Institute of Newburgh met at the home of Miss Margaret Cameron on Thursday, November 22nd. A large attendance of members were present. The president, Mrs. George Walker, conducted the meeting and the minutes and correspondence were read by the secretary, Miss May Johnson. The roll call, "Name of a famous Man, and Why" was responded to with much interest.

Plans for a Christmas treat for the needy children were discussed. It was decided that at our December meeting, each member bring a Christmas gift for another member not exceeding fifteen cents.

Mrs. Halden gave two excellent meat-loaf recipes. Mrs. Moffat read the current events. Mrs. Markle gave a paper on legislation.

The meeting closed with the National anthem, after which refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Markle, on Thursday, December 13th.

TRINITY MISSION CIRCLE

The monthly meeting of Trinity United Church Mission Circle, was held on November 29th, at the supper hour. After supper was served the meeting came to order with the hymn 633. Mrs. F. Mills, in a very fine way took the devotional exercises. She chose Matthew 25, the fourth chapter for the scripture reading, and in her talk urged each of the girls to be faithful in her part of the church work.

Miss Wilson read some very fine selections from W. Skitch's book, "Silver Lining." Miss Aylsworth read the missionary story from "The People of the Land of the Midnight Sun."

After considerable business was discussed the meeting was closed with the Mispah benediction.

CAMDEN EAST Y. P. U.

The meeting of Camden East Y. P. U. was held in the hall on Friday evening, November 30th, with the president, Mrs. C. Boulton, presiding.

The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call was answered by each member naming the flower he liked best. There were thirty-one members present. The collection was taken by Irene Switzer. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. A short business period followed. As it was social and literary night, the social hour was in charge of Miss Josie Allenbach. An instrumental, "The March of the Fairies" was played by Billy Edgar. An address by Mrs. Albert Lewis, entitled "A Previous Engagement," was greatly enjoyed and this was followed by a solo by Mrs. Joseph Lewis, "The Little Church in the Valley." A recitation by Hope Saul delighted those present and a duet by Florence Boulton and Ada Baker closed the musical program, after which a hymn was sung followed by the National Anthem. Games were then indulged in and three interesting contests proved very entertaining for those present. Lunch was served.

The next meeting will be held on December 7th, when Miss Leah Scott will be in charge.

To be seventy years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be forty years old.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

When a rule interferes with common sense it is generally best to follow sense and let the rule go.—Emily Post.

"...So that Our Visitors will be Sorry to Leave"

"If we are going to invite people to this country, we must be honest with them . . . Courtesy costs nothing and is one of our greatest tourist assets : : : Let us so treat strangers within our gates that it will be easy for them to come, pleasant for them to stay, and difficult for them to leave."

Rt. Hon. R. B. BENNETT, Prime Minister of Canada, to the Canadian Association of Tourist and Publicity Bureaus, November 6, 1934.

Canada's tourist activities represent more than a great industry from which everybody benefits. They provide an opportunity to create what the Prime Minister has described as "that feeling of neighbourliness" which is such a vital factor in building up cordial relations within the family of nations.

For both these reasons, may I urge upon the people of Canada the importance of showing consideration, courtesy and honesty to guests of our country? Let us all do those little acts of kindness which count for so much when one travels in a strange land.

We have a beautiful country. We must keep it so. We want our visitors to travel highways free from disfigurement, walk the streets of cities that are orderly and clean, and find at the end of every day's travel an inviting spot to rest. Canadians should turn their attention now to the important work of preparing for next year's tourist season.

As a nation, we are advertising abroad the attractions of Canada as a holiday land. We must see to it that our guests return home with only the happiest recollections—and the determination to come back again and again.

Nor should we forget, in planning our own vacations, that there are beauties to discover and friendships to be made in our neighbouring provinces. We live in one of the world's most glorious playgrounds—let us learn to know better the rich variety of its travel attractions.

The enduring basis of family life will never be abandoned because—it cannot.—Ignace Paderewski

"Did you inform father you intended to marry me?" asked the girl.

"Yes," answered the young man. "All he said was that he wasn't very well acquainted with me and he didn't see why I should tell him my troubles."

A Londoner took a visiting New York friend to see "Hamlet." When it was over and they were moving out the host asked:

"Well, did you like it?"

"Oh, yeh, it's pretty good. But you're way behind the times here. I saw it in New York four years ago."

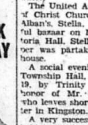
BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE BANISHED COLD, BACK AT WORK NEXT DAY



No wonder Mrs. Withershaw, Port Arthur, Ont. says BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE is the best cough medicine she ever used. She writes:— "Just this week my husband caught a very severe cold. I gave him two doses of Buckley's and in the morning he was regreatly improved that he was up and about his work as usual."

It is this quick, sure relief that makes BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE the largest selling cough and cold remedy in Canada. If you have a cough, cold, 'flu or bronchitis, take Buckley's.

It acts like a flash—A single sip proves it.

READ

Read, November 24. — The funeral was held on Tuesday of an aged and esteemed resident of Read, in the person of Mr. Frank Larkin. Deceased, who was eighty years of age, had spent most of his life in this locality, and is survived by one sister, Mrs. Peter O'Neill, of Belleville.

The W. L. euchre on Wednesday evening was a splendid success. A large crowd was in attendance and the prize winners were as follows: Ladies', first, Miss Kay Byrnes; second, Mrs. J. Powers; consolation, Mrs. James Hanley. Gents', first, Jr. J. norrigan; second, Mr. Pat Cronin; consolation, Mr. Heffernan.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Hunt and Mr. Joe Daley spent Sunday in Stoco, as guests of Mrs. Wm. Healy.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Mulroney, of Stoco, were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James McAvoy.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Kane spent Sunday with friends here.

Mrs. A. Daley and son, Edmund and Miss Madeline Kennelley spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Garland.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert and family, of Northbrook, were week end visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Kennelley.

Mr. Tim Cronin has purchased a new Chevrolet truck.

Read, December 1. — It was with feelings of deepest regret that the people of this community learned of the death of a former resident, in the person of Mrs. Phillip Bennett, who passed away at her home in Point Anne on Monday morning. Born in Read, Mrs. Bennett spent all of her young life here. She was a daughter of the late Bernard McDermott, and besides her sorrowing husband and family, leaves a number of relatives in Read, as well as in Belleville and Point Anne, to mourn her passing.

Mr. Joseph Bennett and mother, as well as, Miss Julia, attended the funeral on Wednesday of Mrs. Phillip Bennett.

A number from here disposed of their fowl at the poultry market in Napanee on Wednesday and Thursday.

The dance in Marysville was the centre of attraction for a number of our young folks on Friday evening.

The last of the agricultural meetings for this season was held on Wednesday evening, and in spite of the rainy downpour of rain there was a good attendance.

A new baby boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hunt on Wednesday.

Miss Mary Hunt, of Deseronto, is spending the week with her brother, Mr. Leo Hunt.

NEWBURGH

Newburgh, December 3.—The United Sunday School Christmas concert will be held in the school room on Wednesday, December 19th. A good programme is being prepared by the children. Everybody invited.

Miss E. E. Parks, of Napanee, was a recent caller on Mrs. Willard Embury.

Mrs. E. L. Kulpeck has returned home to Kingston, after spending a week with her mother, Mrs. A. Rogers.

Mr. F. H. Ford, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, spent the week end in Belleville.

Mrs. S. Shier went to Coboure last week to visit her daughter, Mrs. C. Tetford, for a few days.

Reeve C. G. Walker and Mrs. Walker, of Newburgh, and Reeve T. I. Cook and Mrs. Cook attended the Warden's banquet in Napanee on Friday evening last, and report an enjoyable evening.

Rev. Mr. Anderson attended the meeting of the Ministerial Association on Monday morning in Grace Church Napanee.

The Young People's League convened regularly last Tuesday evening. A good programme, under the direction of Miss Hazel Winter, was presented to a large number of young people.

Rev. R. T. Richards exchanged pulpits with Rev. Anderson last Sunday. Rev. Richards gave a good discourse on "Stewardship." Next Sunday the Rev. Ian Revelle Kingston, on furlough from China, will be the speaker at the evening service.

Rev. Mr. Anderson closed a three-week's series of meetings at Wesley last Friday night. The attendance and results were most gratifying. There is, as a result, a membership class of sixteen.

STELLA

Stella, December 3. — The abundant rain of the last week has been much appreciated by those of our community who depend on wells and cisterns for their winter supply of water.

The United Anglican congregations of Christ Church, Emerald, and St. Alban's, Stella, held a very successful bazaar on November 21, in Victoria Hall, Stella. A bountiful supper was partaken of by a crowded house.

A social evening was spent in the Township Hall, Stella, on November 19, by Trinity United Church, in honor of Mr. Bennett Nightingale, who leaves shortly to attend the altar in Kingston.

A very successful poultry pool was held in Stella Township Hall, Tuesday, November 27. A great number of poultry growers took advantage of the home market.

Mr. John McMullen still continues taking treatment at Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. Hugh Pilson is still on the sick list, but is a little improved.

All hope for the full restoration to health of these respected members of our community.

Under the sponsorship of the local School Board, Mr. C. W. Buchanan, of Napanee, showed a much enjoyed line of pictures.

Mr. and Mrs. McCormick and daughter, Lois, R.N., have moved into the home formerly owned by Mr. Chas. Gibson. Their son, Wilfred, and wife, are working their farm on the south shore.

FOREST MILLS

Forest Mills, December 1.—Roblin Ladies' Aid held their monthly meeting at Mr. John Benn's, Forest Mills, on Tuesday evening, November 27th. A bazaar and refreshments netted the Aid over seven dollars. An interesting programme was given also. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Moore (nee Gladys Benn) returned to her parents' home, after a short honeymoon, following their marriage, at Roblin United Church parsonage, by Rev. W. D. Craig, on Saturday evening, November 24. The young couple were loudly applauded by the large gathering and congratulations were many. Forest Mills people wish them much happiness.

On Sunday, November 25, Roblin L.O.L., and sister lodges, met at Roblin United Church for divine worship. Rev. Mr. Craig preached a forceful sermon on "Fear God, Love the Brotherhood, Honor the King." Special music, augmented by several Forest Mills choir members, with Miss Hazel Baker at the organ, furnished two choir numbers. There was a large attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Gerow, of Tamworth, spent a few days with the latter's parents here, and with her sister, Mrs. Francis McCullough, at Kingsford.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brown, of Port Colborne, spent a few days of their honeymoon at the former's sister's home here.

Mrs. Walter Scott and Mr. Scott, Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Yorke, Mr. and Mrs. Brenton Garlow spent the dinner hour at Mr. D. Richmond's, Roblin, recently.

Mr. Lewis Fox, who spent several weeks in the hospital, seriously ill, is able to be out again, and his many friends were glad of his presence at F. M. Church on Sunday, November 25, and also that he is able to assume his duties as secretary-treasurer of the F. M. Cheese Co. for the closing of the season's activities. Mr. Wesley Davis, foreman of the Factory, was patient in the hospital at the same time as Mr. Fox, and he is able to be about again also.

Mrs. Chas. Walroth spent a week at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. Hiram Ramsay, and Mr. Ramsay, Newburgh.

The Crossman Male Choir members are kindly asked to accompany the choir on their return engagement in Stirling on Monday evening.

ENTERPRISE

A very pleasing comedy drama, "Mammy's Lil' Wild Rose," was presented in the Enterprise Community Hall on Friday evening, under the auspices of the W. A. of St. John's Anglican Church. The cast of characters was exceedingly good, and seemed particularly adapted to the parts for which they had been chosen. Those assisting were: Freda Wagar, Anna Sorait, Marguerite Wagar, Evelyn Wagar, Beryl Wilson, Verna Rock, Mrs. Guy Peawick, Walter Keech, Milo Jackson, Gerald Loucks, Earl Wagar and Ford Perwick. During the evening three novelty choruses, "Sweetheart Medley," "Moonlight and Roses," "I Want My Mammy," and "Harvest Moon." Following the presentation of the play, a very enjoyable lunch was served by the ladies of the Auxiliary in the basement of the church. In spite of the unfavorable weather the attendance was very good.

On Friday evening, under the auspices of the Liberal Association, a very enjoyable dance and oyster supper was staged in the Community Hall. In spite of the inclemency of the weather it was estimated that about three hundred were served to supper. A very splendid programme was given in the auditorium of the hall in the earlier part of the evening, with W. A. Martin, of Yarker, officiating as chairman. Colin Campbell, newly elected M.P., was present and delivered an address, touching on the issues from Ottawa. Following the supper, dancing was enjoyed until an early hour. The Enterprise orchestra furnished splendid music.

Mrs. W. H. Vannest, a resident of the village, was the unfortunate victim of an accident in Napanee on Thursday afternoon, when she slipped and fell while coming down the steps of Trinity Church, where she had been attending a meeting of the Ontario Temperance Federation, breaking her arm just below the shoulder.

Mrs. Kirkham, who suffered some weeks ago from an attack of infantile paralysis, is still unable to use her left arm, while he can move the fingers of his hand to some extent, he has no use of the arm whatever.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. John Finn, a baby boy.

On Wednesday evening a wedding was very quietly solemnized, when Miss Noreen Bell, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cephas Bell, became the bride of Thomas Dillon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dillon, of Chippewa.

Service in St. John's Anglican Church was cancelled on Sunday evening, owing to the illness of Mrs. (Rev.) Redding, who, suffering from an attack of appendicitis, was taken to the Kingston General Hospital for an operation.

Persian Balm — there is nothing like it for creating and preserving the lovely complexion—cooling, caressing—it soothes and dispels all roughness or chafe caused by weather conditions. Delicately fragrant. It adds exquisite charm to the most finished appearance. Dainty women inevitably choose Persian Balm. A velvety smooth lotion, it makes the skin rose-leaf in texture. Recommended also to soften and whiten the hands. Truly a peerless toilet requisite for every woman.

AFTER OPERATION SHE GREW FAT

And Became Short - Winded

After just received from a woman states that she is writing in thanks for the benefit she has received. Her letter goes on :—

"About 12 months ago everybody remarked how fat I was getting. I turned the scale at 196 lbs. I was fed up at getting so fat, and it made me short-winded. Why they noticed it more was because I was getting fat slowly since I had had an operation for appendix. I went back to the hospital and the doctor said most women get fat after that operation. I had tried everything I knew of to try and get slim, so I thought I would give Kruschen Salts a trial. I started at first to take half the does prescribed, in my first cup of tea. Nine months ago, I turned the scale at 196 lbs. Now at the time of writing I go 178 lbs. I feel better than I have felt for a long time."—(Mrs.) H.

The formula of Kruschen represents the ingredient salts of the mineral waters of those European Spas which have been used by generations of overstout people to reduce weight. Gently, but surely, Kruschen rids the system of all fat-forming food refuse, of all poisons and harmful acids which give rise to rheumatism, headaches, and many other ills.

NORTHBROOK

Northbrook, December 1.—The Bey Mines Limited are about to resume operations, under the management of L. M. Edwards, late of Kirkland Lake district. This mine has now been taken in charge by a private syndicate in Warren, Penna., with a definitely arranged expenditure of $20,000.00 per month for the constructive months. Mr. Paul Baker and son are in charge of the boarding house, while new furnishings are being delivered by trucks at this time. The new executive of this mining company has been arranged as follows: A. E. Cumuffings resigns as President in favor of L. J. Jamison, Warren, Penna.; F. J. McCoy resigns as Vice President in favor of A. E. Cumming; F. J. McCoy remains as Treasurer; A. H. Robertson, Toronto, remains as Secretary. L. J. Jamieson, of Warren, Penna., has now been appointed Director. These American friends have had successful oil operations in the south, and are also very familiar with mining on this continent, which assures this district a successful development in mining where limitless oil bearing strata remains untouched.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Thompson attended the Wardens' banquet at Napanee on Friday night, where our County officials, Reeves, and many other friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey were very generously entertained.

Several new crannages are assisting with the special meetins now being conducted in the Penticostal Tabernacle this week.

Mr. A. E. Fletcher is in Toronto negotiating a sale of the "Star of the East" mining property, which is said to be under development at an early date.

C. A. Campbell, M.P., at week ends is assailed by people from nearly every village of the county, but the street has a panoramic atmosphere of Dr. Locke's residence in Williamsburg, which, we hope, is curing all the depressional ills that people complain of.

Hillier Thompson is taking a load of Christmas trees to Toronto this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Vogan have just returned from Ottawa, where they made a purchase of very modern house furnishings.

Wm. O. Both has moved in the newly constructed house of C. C. Thompson's, on Main street.

Mrs. A. Northrup, of Northbrook, is spending a week with her mother, Mrs. H. Lloyd.

Externally or Internally, It is Good — When applied externally by brisk rubbing, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil opens the pores and penetrates the tissue, touching the seat of the trouble and immediately affording relief. Administered internally, it will still the irritation in the throat which induces coughing and will relieve affections of the bronchial tubes and respiratory organs. Try it and be convinced.

WILTON

Wilton, December 3. — The Wilton dairy ceased operations on Thursday last for this season. Mr. M. J. White has been re-engaged as cheesemaker for the coming season of 1935.

Miss Madeline Young spent the week end at the home of her brother, Mr. Fred Young, and Mrs. Young.

Mrs. Rose Storms and Miss Dorothy Neilson, of Kingston, were week end guests at the home of Mrs. Will Forsyth.

This community was shocked on Friday evening last, when the sudden passing of Mrs. Bert Babcock, of Verona, was learned. Mrs. Babcock resided near Wilton before moving to Verona, and was very well and favorably known here. Several from here attended her funeral on Sunday afternoon at the Free Methodist Church, Verona.

Pupils and teacher are busily preparing for the annual Christmas school concert, to be held in the Grange Hall on Tuesday evening, December 18.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Babcock spent Friday evening last with friends at Colebrook.

The many friends of Mrs. Stuart Simmons are pleased to learn that she is convalescing very favorably at the Kingston General Hospital.

Miller's Worm Powders will purge the stomach and intestines of worms so effectively and so easily and painlessly, that the most delicate stomach will not feel any inconvenience from their action. They recommend themselves to mothers as a preparation that will restore strength and vigor to their children and protect them from the debilitating effects which result from the depredations of worms.

DESERONTO

Deseronto, November 24. — On Thursday afternoon, November 22nd, Mrs. Robert Miller, Mill street, was hostess at a delightful afternoon tea, given under the auspices of the United Church Ladies' Aid. Mrs. A. D. Waite assisted Mrs. Miller in receiving the guests in the drawing room. Mrs. Howard VanDusen invited them to the dining room, where tea was poured by Mrs. P. M. Shiver. Assisting in the tea room were Mrs. J. B. Houch, Mrs. Ross Perry, Mrs. Clinton Rendell and Miss Jean Davis.

Rev. T. H. P. Anderson, of Newburgh, was the supply preacher at the United Church in the continued absence of Rev. A. D. Waite. Next Sunday, Rev. J. P. Knox, of Belleville, will occupy the pulpit at 3 p.m. As the winter season approaches the Women's Citizens' League are again very active. Already they have sponsored several entertainments in the effort to replenish funds, which have met with heavy calls upon them and will bring much comfort to the needy ones of the town throughout the whole winter season.

COLEBROOK

Colebrook, December 3. — A large number attended the social evening, which was held at the home of Mrs. Kilborne. There was a good programme, and the quilt was won by Mrs. Everton Shangraw. A very enjoyable evening was spent.

Mr. Gerald Cline is visiting his mother, Mrs. Harry Woodruff, for a few days.

Mrs. Watson is staying at her daughter's, Mrs. Ray Gowdy. Mrs. Watson has been ill, but is being taken care of by her daughter.

Mr. Marshall Milsap, who has been ill and confined to his bed, is getting along nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Burgess have gone to Toronto to spend the winter with their daughter, Miss Laura Burgess.

The Sunday School are planning on having a Christmas concert which will be held in the church.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Keyes entertained Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wagar and Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Purcell to dinner on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Denison are visiting her grandfather, Mr. James Gowdy.

Mr. Harry Millar is going up to Belleville Hospital this week for an examination.

Several from here were in Napanee for Poultry Days.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Babcock were in the village on Friday evening, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Reid, and attended the social evening at Mrs. Kilborne's.

Mrs. Ira Salsbury was away on Friday last.

The water in the river is very high now, and Mr. Harry Woodruff is able to put on his lights again.

County Conservatives Attend Convention at Brockville Last Week

J. M. Simpson K. C. Re-elected Secretary

On Wednesday of last week a number of conservatives from Napanee attended the annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Liberal-Conservative Association at Brockville. Mr. J. M. Simpson, K.C., of Napanee, was again elected as secretary of the association. The other officers are:

President — John F. Sowards, of Kingston.

Vice - Presidents — Mrs. G. H. Lockett, Portsmouth; Mrs. W. H. Rowley, Ottawa; Nellie Hanley, Brockville; Frank and H. McKeown, Belleville; E. J. Labelle, Ottawa; W. H.; Williams, K.C., Pembroke R. E. Snetsinger, Cornwall; W. B. Reynolds, Brockville; J. W. York, K.C., Ottawa.

Henry and Bennett Attend

The meeting was attended by Hon. Geo. S. Henry, former Premier of Ontario, and Hon. R. H. Bennett, Premier of Canada.

Mr. Henry was cheered when he rose to speak. He said he was not going to debate the pros and cons of what happened at the election of last June. "While we haven't been saying much in the last four or five months, we will hear from us at the proper time," he said.

Just an Incident

It was only "an incident in the life of a party" that it should go into Opposition at times. The Conservative Party was strong and virile and would assert itself when necessary. "Turn your minds to problems of a Federal character," advised Mr. Henry, in commenting on the fact that an election was coming next year. "Mr. Bennett is the man of the hour." Conservatives had a cause to fight for and Mr. Bennett's Government had conferred benefits upon the country."

The meeting went on record as endorsing the actions of Ontario Conservatives in retaining Mr. Henry as leader of the Conservative Party in the Province.

Bennett Will Remain As Leader

Hon. R. B. Bennett, in addressing the meeting in the evening, announced his intention to remain as leader of the Conservative Party in the Dominion House. In his address he described the beneficial results to Canada from the Empire Trade Agreements and expressed his willingness to establish reciprocity with the United States on "any fair basis."

Scoring the Liberals for their opposition to the trade pacts, he said:

"That is one of the reasons why it shall not seek reinstatement. It is one of the reasons why I shall seek another election contest (cheers), and one of the reasons why I tell the nations of the world that Canadians are not forgets; that Canadians are not going to forget the sheltered markets they have in Great Britain."

Prolonged cheers.)

Price Spread Probe To Continue

Commenting on the Stevens' price probe, Mr. Bennett said: "It is going on with its work and when its report is made the Government will take such action as is within its competence to do."

"The Liberals,' he continued, "have circulated the report that the Government has sought to prevent the work of the Commission being carried on. That is not so. The Government has provided the means for the Commission to pursue its investigation—about $250,000 thus far —nobody else could do it, and I will repeated) the Government will take such action as is within its competence to take. Nobody else can initiate anything that involves the expenditure of public money." This obviously was a reference to the Montreal speech of Hon. H. H. Stevens recently, in which the former Minister intimated he would introduce remedial legislation to correct the ills revealed by the inquiry.

"And when they tell you that I am the voice of the great interests," exclaimed the Prime Minister in his concluding remarks, "look about you and you will see the great interests on the other side." This Conservative Party, he added, was without funds, but their opponents seemed not to be without the sinews of war, "and I am not unmindful of the fact that we know where the money came from last time. We have not forgotten Beauharnois."

Death at Oshawa Former Napanean Peter T. Duncan

Mr. C. E. Duncan, of Deseronto, received word, last week, of the death of his brother, P. T. Duncan of Oshawa, who passed away on Sunday, December 2nd, at the age of 62 years.

He was for a number of years a finisher at the Gibbard Furniture Factory, Napanee.

Mrs. James Hicks, a sister, accompanied Mr. Duncan to Oshawa, on Sunday, to attend the funeral.

"How Do They Know?"

How do they know when they're away from home what is going on. You may write a letter once a week and four pages is a long letter. Even at that, there are lots of events you'll never think of and plenty of news they would like to know, you haven't time to tell them.

Why not send your friends or your children, away from home, "The Beaver" for Christmas. Sixty-four columns every week for the cost of a postage stamp. Fifty-two weekly visits with your friends.

Send or bring a Dollar and Fifty cents and we will send "The Beaver" to any address in Canada, for a year. A gift card will be sent to reach your friend the day before Christmas.

Gibbard Employees Hold Banquet And Dance

The members of the staff of Gibbard's Workshops, met together on Friday evening at an employees' banquet in the Town Hall. About 250 employees and their wives and friends sat down to the dinner. Later a short musical program was presented and following the program the "Aces" Orchestra, of Belleville, provided music for dancing.

The programme started with community singing, led by Mr. Dan Good which was followed by a short address by the chairman, Mr. J. H. Gibbard, president of the company. The musical programme included a novelty number on the mouth - organ and zither - harp by Lott McNabb; vocal solo by Bert. Lewis, saxophone solo, R. Smith, vocal duet by D. Owen and W. Owen, mouth organ solo by George Blaezitch and a vocal solo by Gene Switzer.

A feature of the evening was two presentations made by the members of the baseball teams. On their behalf Chas. Caine presented Arnie Gibbard with a travelling case, and Bill Sweet made a presentation of an upholstered leather chair to "Walt" Gerow, sr., the coach of the teams.

Picton Taxes Promptly Paid

The Picton tax collector, Mr. H. A. Anderson is reported as saying, last Wednesday, that over $75,000 of the 1934 Picton Taxes have been collected to that time. The total taxes are approximately $88,300. The amount collected, so far, is about $6,000 more than at the same time last year.

Frontier College Doing Important Work In Canadian Camps

Probably 32,000 men and more are being cared for in the relief camps at the present time. These men constitute no inconsiderable stratum of Canadian life. It is not enough that such men, unfortunate in life, receiving housing, necessary clothes, and subsistence. Opportunity should be had for reasonable forms of recreation and improvement.

The Frontier College, which for twenty-five years has been working among campmen, has, at the invitation of the Department of National Defence at Ottawa, made a particular effort in the past two years to provide for men in the relief camps some opportunity for study. Its representatives, usually university graduates, some trained as high school teachers, men of broad human sympathies, go to the camps, not in any clerical capacity but as manual workers, taking their places with the men. During the past year, 46 isolated camps have been manned by a laborer-teacher. Drawbacks there are always in a work of this kind, but it is a tribute to the human worth latent among men, who for the time at least, have been forced into relief camps, that 5,000 have enrolled for study of some kind under laborer-teachers of the Frontier College. Daily newspapers in both French and English have been provided by this organization and 36,000 magazines, many of them used, but in good condition have been placed at the disposal of the campmen.

Representatives of the Frontier College have been at the Valcartier Camp practically since its inception as a relief work. The laborer-teachers, drawn from the student bodies of Laval, the University of Montreal, McGill and Queen's University, have received fine co-operation from Colonel Dupuis, and latterly Major Flynn, officers in command at the camp. Mr. Pagnuelo and A. Graham, B.Sc., are at present acting as laborer-teachers at this important camp.

Frontier College is doing a necessary and important work in the camps of Canada. Its laborer-teachers in their dual capacity, have no easy task, their endeavor is to project healthy thought and life where men so often are prone toward discouragement and defeat.

Farm Loan Board Helps County Farmers

Now Operating in Every Province

Ottawa — The Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act passed at the last Session of Parliament has now been effective in the three Prairie Provinces since September 1. in Ontario and Quebec since October 1, and in the rest of Canada since November 1, says a "progress report" by Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance.

Official receivers are functioning in every county in Canada. It naturally takes considerable time to have the Act properly understood, and particularly there has been a misunderstanding apparently to the effect that the scheme was that every farmer in financial difficulties would first come under the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act and then have a loan advanced by the Farm Loan Board.

Debt Too Big

The Farm Loan Board' cab do a very great deal towards relieving the difficulties of the farmer throughout Canada, but when it is realized that the farm debt of Canada exceeds a billion dollars, it can be seen that the Farm Loan Board cannot possibly take care of the total farm indebtedness, and that the great majority of claims will have to be arranged and extended under the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act.

To date, 900 applications have actually been received at Ottawa, and it is estimated that throughout Canada more than 2,000 applications have now been filed. To indicate the success which has quietly been worked out, it is interesting to take a series of settlements reported in the one morning from various parts of Canada, and these will indicate what is being accomplished.

Among the cases received at Ottawa on Monday, November 26th, was one from Prince Edward Lennox, which is given below:

Case No. 1.— Counties Prince Edward and Lennox, Ontario.

When this man went into the official receiver's office his total liabilities were $4,121. When he came out his total liabilities were $3,203.40, and there was an acceptance by the creditors on this basis.

School Children Sell Seals in Aid Muskoka Hospital

The pupils of the Napanee Public School sold $43.30 worth of Christmas seals in aid of the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives.

Drama Group Open Meeting On Thursday

The executive and members of the Napanee Drama Group expect a large number of the citizens of the town to attend the December open meeting of the organization. It is being held on Thursday evening, December 13th (this week) at 8:00 o'clock, in the banquet hall at the Superior Restaurant.

The program will consist of the reading of "Dickens' Christmas Carol" by Rev. Harry Paxton, and the singing of several Christmas carols by Mrs. J. E. Madden's ladies' class.

Mrs. F. Cameron Wilson will play a violin solo and a pianoforte duet will be played by Mrs. J. E. Madden and Mrs. Myers. Master Harold Switzer will also sing a solo.

Following the program, light refreshments will be served and a silver collection will be taken to defray expenses.

All who are interested in good literature and the drama are invited to attend.

His mortgage, which was $3,800, part of the purchase price of the farm, was reduced to $2,000. The interest rate on the mortgage was 6 per cent., which was reduced to 4. The unpaid mortgage was reduced and the interest reduced to 4 per cent.

The original proposal as made by the farmer was accepted by his creditors.

Other cases showing equally satisfactory results were cited from Vellgreville, Alta., County Kent, Ont., and Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Diplomas, Prizes, Cups Presented to Pupils Napanee Collegiate

Annual Commencement Exercises

On Friday afternoon, the assembly hall at the Napanee Collegiate Institute, the annual commencement exercises of the school were held. The hall was well filled by students, their parents and other friends.

Warden Gordon L. Hawley presided. With him on the platform were Mr. J. H. Jamieson, principal, and the members of the staff, and Mr. Wilson Macdonald, Rev. Harry Paxton, Rev. Father O'Reilly, Mr. M. R. Reid, Dr. J. B. Willoughby, Mr. J. G. Fennell, Mr. Ernest Gibbard and Mayor Tustin.

The opening number, following God Save the King, was a selection by the Boys' Band, under the leadership of Mr. M. A. Eppiett. Warden Hawley briefly expressed his pleasure at being asked to preside. He spoke appreciatively of the fine work for the schools of his own and for other institutions concerned with child welfare, which had been done by many years by Mr. Alpine Woods, the chairman of the school board. Mr. Hawley commended both pupils and teachers for the high standing attained by the students.

Mr. Jamieson's Remarks

Mr. M. R. Reid, M.A., I.P.S., made the first presentation of the afternoon, the memorial scholarship and the C. B. Fox medals. The memorial scholarship, provided by subscription of pupils and ex-pupils, is in memory of pupils of the school who fell in the Great War. It is awarded to the graduating pupil holding the highest standing. This year it went to James Garratt, who had to his credit 22 honors in departmental exams, in middle and upper school's. The C. B. Fox medal, given to the student by Mr. Fox, now president of the Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd., was formerly part of the school, went to Miss Constance Lalley, with 21 firsts in middle and upper schools, three seconds and one credit, and to Herbert Coone with seven firsts, four seconds and one credit.

The special speaker for the afternoon was Mr. Wilson Macdonald, who was introduced by Rev. Harry Paxton. Mr. Paxson presented Mr. MacDonald as one of the most outstanding poets of Canada. He was born at Summerside, Prince Edward Island, graduated at Port Dover, Woodstock College and McMaster University. For a short while he had been engaged as lecturer in all parts of the United States and Canada, in schools and colleges. After describing Mr. MacDonald, Mr. Paxson said: "He is a man of the mind and of authentic expression. One who is interested in the finer things. He awakens in us a deeper appreciation of beauty, of splendor and of loveliness."

Mr. MacDonald's Address

In his address, Mr. MacDonald spoke of the revival of interest in poetry in the United States, because of a new ideal in poetry. "The old idea," he said, "is all wrong. We must listen with humility and never object to a new idea." He said it was his purpose to bring one or two new ideas to his audience, which possibly some might not wish to accept.

It was his opinion that a new method in teaching poetry should be adopted. No pupils should be asked to memorize a poem he does not like. "It is a horrible thing," he said, "to parse and analyse a poem." If the pupils be allowed to choose the poems he likes best, he will learn them properly.

In the discussion which Mr. MacDonald made which met with instant approval on the part of the pupils, was that there should be no home work. He said he had taught without himself and company to the wishes of his school board had used this method and had attained 100 per cent. results in examinations. Pupils who are not given homework come to school fresh in body, in mind, with an ability to concentrate and work harder during the day.

Before concluding his address, Mr. MacDonald read two of his own poems, clearly demonstrating his own ability as a reader and as an interpreter of beautiful language in verse.

Mayor George J. Tustin expressed the pleasure of himself and the audience in Mr. MacDonald, for a really fine address.

Cups and Diplomas Presented

Presentations of the athletic cups were made by Rev. Harry Paxton, chairman. The boys' senior cup went to Douglas Graham; intermediate, to Reginald Kayler; and junior to Gilbert Coons. The girls' senior went to Jean Gerow; intermediate to Peggy Heathcote and Junior to Effie Moore.

Miss Janet Healy was present to award the graduation and commercial diplomas. Before doing so he gave an inspirational address, filled with worth while advice, to the graduating class. The graduating class for 1934, were the following:—

Elizabeth Allison, Phyllis Becker (Gwendolyn Becker), Ela Chapman, Murray C. Dimmell, Martin Doyle, Wilma Furrs, Alexandria Gilmour, Kenneth V. Harrold, Helen M. Harvey, Helen Henderson, Doris Knapp, Matilda Laverture, Enid A. MacGregor, M. Francis McDonald, Harriett Madden, Grace Magee, Louise Ramsay, Beverley Richmond, Eldon Richmond, Eva Robinson, Nelson Roddick, Mildred Sampson, Kenneth Sharp, Grace Street, Robert K. Templeton, Dorothy Vanderburgh, Ivy VanDusen, Louise VanLuven, Grace Walker, Grace Walters, Margaret Wright.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT — (General Diplomas and Certificates) — Marion Blake, (hon.); Thorold Dupre, Kitchener Fraser, (hon.); Florence Goslin, Elwyn Gray, Elsie Henderson, (hon.); Lottie Miller, B. A. (hon.); Evelyn Mills, B.A. (hon.);

Getting Close!

It won't be long now! And frankly we're disturbed. Money for the children of Napanee is needed badly. Only those who are in touch with the conditions in the town realize what a brave and heroic effort many Mothers are making to keep children clothed and fed. With the utmost economy, only the barest necessities can be provided. Christmas would be no different from any other day were it not for the kindness of our readers. There are more needy children in Napanee than ever before and the need is greater. Every cent contributed to the Beaver Santa Claus Fund goes to make some child happy on Christmas Morning. Please don't delay. Bring or send your contribution to the Beaver Office. Make cheques payable to "The Beaver Santa Claus Fund."

Letter of Appreciation From the Western Dried-out Area

Chamberlain, Sask.,
November 26, 1934.

Dear Mr. Vannest:

Please accept our hearty thanks for the car-load of vegetables, etc. which reached here from your district.

Last year, in spite of the drought and grasshoppers, which ruined our gardens, our potato crop was good, but this year the grasshoppers were considerably checked by poison and in spite of the drought which, in many localities, left us nothing but feed from our field crops; our gardens promised well until the early part of August when a series of heavy frosts killed all but the hardiest vegetables.

The potatoes yielded less than the seed sown and these about the size of eggs, so you can see what a God-send your gift of vegetables was to the community.

Again thanking you and all other members of your locality who so kindly contributed to the car.

Yours very truly,
MRS. G. W. WALLACE

Falls Into Boiling Tank While Working at Strathcona

Losing his balance while repairing a water reservoir roof at the Strathcona Paper Company plant, William McKeown, aged 25, unmarried, of Camden East, plunged into the large tank of boiling water. He was rescued by nearby workmen and taken to the plant office. Dr. Maurice Cole, Newburgh was summoned and the man was removed to his home.

St. Mary Magdalene Bazaar and Euchre A Decided Success

Splendid financial results rewarded the ladies of the Church Woman's Guild of St. Mary Magdalene Church for their efforts in arranging the annual bazaar and euchre, last Thursday. The arrangements for the event were under the direction of the president of the Guild, Mrs. Geo. J. Tustin, who was ably assisted by the executive and a large number of the women of the church.

During the afternoon many of the citizens, both women and men, of the town, patronised the various booths, where goods were offered for sale. The candy table was in charge of Mrs. L. H. Douglas; fancy work, Mrs. J. W. Robinson; aprons, Mrs. Joseph Sager, mystery table, Mrs. C. A. Walters and Mrs. George Walters; cooked food, Mrs. Ray Moore; rummage sale, Mrs. A. E. Cook and Mrs. H. M. Scott.

The ladies supervising the tea-table were kept busy most of the afternoon. The table which was supervised by Mrs. William Wright was attractively arranged with gleaming silver and on a lace cloth and with an artistic centrepiece. During the afternoon, Mrs. T. M. Chilman, Mrs. C. J. Tustin, Mrs. W. A. Grange and Mrs. H. B. Williams poured tea. They were assisted by a group of young ladies of the church.

A large number attended the euchre in the evening and many remained for the dance which followed. The euchre was arranged by Mrs. Tustin and Mrs. Dr. Hall. The music was supplied by the Aces orchestra.

Prizes for euchre were won by Mrs. Hartwick and Mrs. E. H. Embury, Mr. C. A. Walters and Mr. Joseph Kent. The door prize went to Mrs. W. J. Webster.

Drawings for the various articles, on which tickets had been sold, were made in the evening. The lucky ticket holders were: Home - made fudge, Mrs. J. E. Allison; Christmas cake, Mrs. Hamilton; Tea-cloth, Mrs. C. E. Jamieson; The Quintuplets, W. S. Herrington, A. E. Mackintosh, Mrs. Hamnett, H. M. Scott and Peter Ganas; Turkey, Mrs. A. E. Cook; home-made rug, Miss Ciara Johnston; bridge set, Mr. W. S. Herrington.

Aged Marlbank Man Found Dead at Home

Leslie Davis, an aged resident of Marlbank, was found dead at his home, with a recent gun wound. Authorities said he had fired a single shot through his head and had died instantly.

He had been ill for a considerable time. No inquest will be held.

When the chariot of humanity gets stuck, as it has done now, nothing will lift it except great preaching that shall grasp it to the mind and heart.—David Lloyd George.

Napanee Audience Hears Noted Canadian Poet

Wilson MacDonald Reads His Poems

A new conception of poetry and a poet was given many people who heard the Canadian poet, Wilson MacDonald, for the first time, on Friday evening. Mr. MacDonald spent the day at the Napanee Collegiate. In the morning he spoke to the pupils. In the afternoon he addressed a large audience at the commencement exercises, and in the evening gave a reading of his own poems to an appreciative audience.

Mr. C. J. Jamieson the principal of the school introduced Mr. MacDonald. He referred to him as the most outstanding Canadian poet, one who holds a high place in literary circles of the continent and Europe.

The lack of interest in poetry, so evident in most people, he undertook, is due to the wrong method of teaching literature in schools, which Mr. MacDonald deplores. It is a method, he claims, which forces on students the study of poetry in which they have no interest. Given the opportunity to make their own choice they will readily learn to appreciate and love poetry.

Canadian People Unappreciative

Mr. MacDonald charged the Canadian people with being unappreciative of their own Canadian poets. Bliss Carman was forced to make his home in the United States. Charles G.D. Roberts has only recently been recognized by the Canadian Government, which has granted him a pension. As for himself, Mr. MacDonald said he had been told by publishers in the United States, where people are showing a growing appreciation of poetry, six lectures for universities and schools, before audiences of thousands and is doing a great service in leading people to know the beauty of poetry.

He claims that one reason why poetry is coming back to its own place, is the depression. People too much ease in the world for the best appreciation of finer things.

A Versatile Man

As a man, Mr. MacDonald reveals himself to be a citizen of the world, with a wide experience and a keen knowledge of life. He has not been sheltered, pampered experience of some of the long-haired, flowing tied poets of the past. He has known adversity and has gained his knowledge by knocking about the world. His poetry has a lyrical quality which is truly beautiful. It shows as well a sympathetic element and an understanding of human nature, in all its moods.

Mr. MacDonald's readings of his own poems were delightful in their versatility, and in his remarkable ability for interpretation. Before reading them, he gave a descriptive background, which added much to their interest. His first reading "Roses" depicted the beauty of Victoria, the city Mr. MacDonald loves best of all. In "Whist - Whee," an appealing, touching story is revealed, which shows the poet's intense love for little children.

"The Song of the Ski" showed vividly the poet's power of description. It was read with such abandon as only one intimately acquainted

Town Council Rejected Advertising Scheme At Special Session

Representative of English Firm Addresses Council

On Wednesday afternoon, December 5th, the Town Council met in special session to hear a proposition from E. N. Levitt, representing Thomas Skinner Company, of London, England, publishers of trade journals. Members of the Industrial Committee of the Napanee Chamber of Commerce and other business men of the town, were also present.

After hearing Mr. Levitt and others who were present, a motion was moved by Reeve Hughson, and seconded by Councillor Luffman, and carried, that the proposition of Mr. Levitt be left on the table until the first meeting of the new year.

Mr. Levitt, in addressing the Council, said that he represented Thomas Skinner Company, of London, Eng. The company is the publisher of the Stock Exchange Gazette and fifteen other trade papers, representing every industry in the British Empire. The firm also published "Canada's Weekly," a bulletin which they have issued for over fifty years.

Mr. Levitt said he was in Canada at present, gathering information concerning various towns, including Napanee regarding industries, shipping facilities and other matters. His pronoution was to include the information he gathered concerning Napanee in the "Canada's Weekly" which would be distributed to British industries, many of whom are looking for sites in Canada from which to distribute their products to Canada and the United States.

Mr. Levitt suggested the Council of Napanee pay two cents per copy for 5,000 copies of the "Gazette" to be distributed throughout the Old Country.

Mr. A. MacGregor and Mr. J. Marshall, representing the Chamber of Commerce, spoke in favor of Mr. Levitt's proposition, as a means of advertising the town and inducing new industries to locate here.

Mr. J. E. Robinson, when asked to speak, referred to the way in which the Ross Miller Biscuit factory had been secured for Napanee. It had been brought here by the active interest of the Chamber of Commerce and not by advertising, and he referred to the expenditure of the Council, some years ago, of $400 in advertising for which no return had been received.

Reeve Hughson, while concurring with the idea of getting publicity for the town, regretted there was no surplus in any of the committees appropriations for such a purpose.

Mayor Tustin and Councillor Morden also expressed regret there were no funds available at the present time, for the use of advertising the town.

Drys Are Upheld In Seven Centres

Seven municipalities in Ontario voted on local option last week and in every case the local option by-law was upheld. Three contests in eastern Ontario, Carleton Place, Osnabruck township and Kenyon township, all returned dry majorities.

In western Ontario, Strathroy and Chesley gave clear dry majorities while in Harrow and Petrolia the beverage rooms failed to obtain the required majority.

Monthly Meeting Of U.E.L. Chapter I. O. D. E.

The regular monthly meeting of the United Empire Loyalist Chapter I. O. D. E. was held on Monday afternoon, December 3rd in the officers' mess at the armouries, with the regent, Mrs. D. R. Hall, in the chair.

Seventeen members were present, including one new member.

In acquiescence with the wishes of the Provincial Educational Secretary, the Order's calenders are to be placed in ten isolated schools in Lennox and Addington. One calender will be presented to the Napanee schools and other centres.

Donations were made to The Beaver Santa Claus Fund and to the Navy League of Canada, for sailors' Christmas cheer.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Second Poultry Fair To Be Held on Friday

The second poultry fair for the season is being held this week, on Friday, December 14th. The same arrangements for handling fowl are being made by the Lennox and Addington Poultry Pool. It is expected that the independent buyers will also be present.

Last year, a little over ten tons of poultry of all kinds was purchased in the town hall fair, there is likely to be a greater tonnage this year.

At the recent fair, a large quantity of the fowl brought was chicken. It is expected that this week, geese, ducks and turkeys will make up the most of the fowl offered for sale.

Boys' Welfare Hockey League To Organize

A meeting wil lbe held, next Tuesday, December 18th, at 4:30 p.m., to organize the Rotary Boys' Welfare Hockey League. All boys of the town between the ages of 7 and 17 are eligible to join the league. In past years splendid work has been done with the boys of the town, through the medium of the Rotary Welfare, which is one of the Rotary Club's projects.

This year it is expected ten teams will lbe organized. Ten shields have been donated by the following:—Anderson's Grocery, Wallace's Drug Store, Boot and Shoe Hospital, Boyle and Son, Bridge Street Central Garage, Superior Restaurant, A. M. Mackinnon, Dr. D. R. Hall, Haines Shoe House.

High Per Capita Use of Water In Napanee

An editorial in last week's Toronto Star Weekly, reveals the fact that Napanee is among the towns of the province with the largest per capita water consumption. The figure quoted is 220 gals. per person. The highest listed is Elmira with 240 gallons, and the lowest, York township with 37. Toronto's consumption of water is 112 gallons per capita.

St. Andrew's Church Sunday Services

During the absence, the last few Sundays, of Rev. A. J. Wilson, minister of St. Andrew's United Church, the services have been in charge of various organizations of the church, and the Rev. P. A. Scott, Mr. Scott preached at the two morning services. The Women's Missionary Society secured Dr. Ian Ravelle, a returned missionary from China, for a week ago last Sunday, and last weeks morning service was in charge of the Men's Club. The evening services have been taken by the Young People's Society, and were in the form of song services.

Last Sunday morning, Dr. G. W. Mortch was the speaker. He was assisted by Mr. W. T. Mackenzie.

Appointed Director Beekeepers' Ass'n.

THE OPENING SHOT

What was probably the first shot in the Federal Election Campaign, was fired by Premier Bennett at the meeting of Eastern Ontario Conservatives, in Brockville, last week. In the course of that address, he gave the cue as to the lines on which he intends to conduct the election campaign. The Prime Minister indicated that the success of the Ottawa agreements justifies the appeal to the country on the record of the Government in the field of Empire trade. And it is a notable achievement. While Prime Minister Bennett is credited, in Britain, with driving a hard bargain, yet so far as Canada is concerned there has been a steady and marked increase in the external trade, since Ottawa.

Since the overthrow of the Henry Government, last summer, there has been noticeably lacking in the Conservative Party of that fighting spirit which marked the Premier's speech at Brockville. It has been accepted in many quarters that the tide is running against governments and that the Federal Government will meet the same fate at the hands of the electorate as the Henry Government. But that is a totally unwarranted deduction from the events of last summer, for several reasons. In the first place, the situation in the Province before the last election was totally different from the situation in the federal arena to-day. In the Province, except for a brief period when the Drury Government was in power, the Conservatives had held office for nearly thirty years. During that time they had made mistakes, the provincial debt had increased by leaps and bounds and extravagances of one sort and another marked the life of the government during its final years, particularly. For two years, Mr. Hepburn went up and down the province harping away on the one string — extravagance. He put the Government on the defensive. Mr. Henry tried to draw the red herring of free beer across the trail, but the Liberals kept on with their story of extravagance. The result of the election justified the Liberal strategy.

But in the federal arena, the situation is different. The Bennett Government has been in power only one term. It has not had time to accumulate the host of defeated candidates, and candidates who have stepped aside for others who have always to be carried by a government which has been in office for a long period of years. The Government cannot, may not be charged with extravagance. Indeed, the civil servants who had their salaries cut in the interests of economy, might feel that the Government was not extravagant enough. Then too, the Opposition in the federal arena were not able to determine the issue on which the battle would be fought. That has been done by Mr. Bennett, in a masterly way. His speech at once makes the position of the Opposition very difficult. Mr. Bennett can point with justifiable pride to a real achievemnt. Something has been done, trade has increased, business is better. The Liberal Party cannot deny that. They must agree that the Ottawa Treaty has been a success and support it, or promise somethine better. But the yhave consistently denounced the Ottawa agreements and cannot, very well, approve of that which they have denounced, even for political purposes. The alternative is to offer somthing better. But the offer of something better is a rather vague thing when compared with an actual achievement.

Mr. Bennett has done well to dwell on the results of the Ottawa Pact. And in the campaign which will precede the general election, he and his followers will do well to stick to that. For in one of the most difficult periods in the world's history, Canada has been capably and splendidly led. Under the present Dominion administration we are weathering the storm better than most other nations.

There was one feature of Mr. Bennett's Brockville address, however, which might have been left out. His speech would have been much stronger without his reported comments on democracy. Speaking of the new Hepburn Government, the Prime Minister is reported to have said "that this is one of the weaknesses of democracy." As a matter of accuracy it is not one of the weaknesses of democracy, so much as the natural results of democracy. For under our democratic system a government is a fairly good representation of the mental and spiritual calibre of the electorate. We cannot get an A 1 government from a C 3 electorate, nor a C 3 government from an A 1 electorate. If a government is revolutionary that is because it reflects the revolutionary temper of the people, if it is a stand-pat government that is because it reflects the complacency of a self-satisfied people.

We hope Mr. Bennett, in the coming campaign will not stress overmuch this point—it will weaken his case. But if he continues, day in and day out to inform the people of Canada as to the real achievements of the Ottawa Pacts, he will be on safe ground.

THE MUDDLE IN THE BALKANS

Every day's delay in the negotiations between the Jugoslavs and the Hungarians is of inestimable value in cooling tempers and preventing precipitate action of one or other of the parties to the dispute. It is quite safe to say that had the League of Nations not existed war between these two states would have broken-out long ago. At the Council of the League the representatives of the Jugoslavs and Hungary have been hurling unkind epithets at each other, while the other members of the Council have either taken sides in the dispute or tried to still the storm. At any rate, there has been open and free discussion and that is the all-important point. If this can continue for a few days longer, undoubtedly the issue will be settled by negotiation, rather than by resort to arms.

The immediate cause of the dispute was the assassination of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia. But the real cause goes deeper than that. It lies in a policy which the ruling regime in Jugoslavia has followed in the effort to unify the diverse social elements which go to make up the new nation, established by the Treaty of Versailles. Under that treaty, the new state of Jugoslavia was created out of territories possessing three distinctive racial groups—the Serbs, the Croats and the Slovenes. The Serbs, proud, aggressive and vigorous, at once assumed the place of leadership in the New State. The public officials were all Serbs, the business of the country was almost wholly in the hands of the Serbs. This led to resentment on the part of the other groups, the Croats and the Slovenes, who felt they were being exploited by the Serbian leaders. King Alexander was a Serb. And when this unrest manifest itself in various acts of insurrection, he dismissed parliament and assumed dictatorial powers. He was reputed to have been the highest paid monarch in the world, except the Mikado of Japan. He had vested interests in banks and most of the large business enterprises in the country. These three facts—that he was a Serbian, that he was a ruthless dictator, that he was so immensely wealthy—did not make for harmony and peace among the minority groups in the nation. Time and again an attempt was made on his life and finally he was killed by a Croatian. The Belgrade Government, at once, accused Hungary of harboring these terrorists and as an act of reprisal began expelling all unnaturalized Hungarians from the country. Hungary appealed to the Council of the League and there the issue rests.

Whatever the League Council may decide with respect to Hungary's harboring of terrorists, it will not be able to settle the matter. We in this country, who have a racial problem, know full well how difficult it is to avoid susnicions and jealousies. That we have succeeded is due to the fact that we have been led by men of great unselfish motives and kindliness towards those of a different race. It has taken generations, even with the utmost care and tact, to establish a government in which the racial issue is never raised. It will take years to cement the diverse elements in Jugoslavia. They will be cemented, not by the spiritual leadership of the late King, but only as there are raised to power men who are capable of rising above their racial superiority and exercising towards all elements in the nation, generosity, kindness and goodwill.

In the meantime, delay is the essence of the solution. Incidents such as the present are bound to occur, but if they can be talked-out before the League of Nations, those peoples of southern Europe may learn to live together in happiness and peace.

LIGHT AND SIZE

It has long been known that artificial light has an influence on poultry and many of the hen houses of England have electricity laid on. It is understood that the deluded fowls, imagining themselves surrounded by perpetual daylight, are induced to lay more freely during months when they would ordinarily restrict production. Now it is reported that "hens, when given artificial sunlight, are to be bred in Moscow so that Russian workers will be able to afford chicken dinners."

So it seems to be assumed that more light will lead to larger chickens, even as it leads to more eggs. But it does not, to judge by the ordinary examples now encountered in English commerce, lead to larger eggs; on the contrary, the hen's egg seems to be getting smaller and smaller, a process which some of us have attributed to the artificial light theory whereby the hen lays more often but lays less generously in point of size. If that is true in the case of eggs there may be a disappointment in store for the Russian overseers of the plan for outsize chickens. So far from producing a chicken the size of a turkey, the artificial light treatment may yield a cloud or covey of silly little things the size of sparrows, and that "Russian worker," instead of being able to cut and come again at one profitable sitting, may have to buy them by the dozen in order to make a modest pie for a single meal.—Miscellany.

A PENETRATING WHISPER

One of the minor mysteries of modern reporting was well displayed in more than one of the daily papers yesterday. Here is the way in which the "special representative" of one of our contemporaries introduced it:

Inspiring, wise, kindly words, were addressed in a whisper by Dr. Pollock Bishop of Norwich, yesterday, to a bride whom he had known from childhood, and her bridegroom.

There is, of course, nothing specially exciting about that. The "notes" address to the newly married couple is not particularly uncommon. But the point is that, after the introduction which had been quoted, there followed in print an apparently full version of what the Bishop "whispered" to the married pair. How was it secured? Did the bride or bridegroom pencil down what reporters call "a verbatim note" even as the Bishop addressed them, and then hand it over to "our special representative"? Or did our special representative take it down himself with the aid of ears that had been elongated on the system of the telephoto lens?

A baffling problem in many aspects! One can only echo once again the old, old inquiry, "How do these things get into the papers?"

On the notice board of a wayside chapel it was announced: "On Saturday at 8 p.m. the annual mince-pie supper will be held: The subject of the sermon on Sunday morning will be 'A Night of Horror.'"

COLD COMFORT

(After last year's discovery that ferrets could be infected with virus of human influenza, it is now announced that the same complaint can be communicated to mice.)

When I think a code id by done,
A complaint that I often inherit,
I am cheered when the learned disclose
That my ailment is shared by the ferret;
My troubles I blithely defy.
In fact they become a mere fiction
When I think that the ferret and I
Are linked in a common affliction.

Still less can I grumble and grouse,
When Science, the ever respected,
Has further proclaimed that the mouse
Has also been duly infected;
I snort and I snuffle and blink,
I wheeze like a pair of old bellows,
But ain't it consoling to think
That ferrets and mice are my fellows?

One problem remains, as of old—
These experts, so clever and clannish,
Are dahs at imparting a cold,
But what about making it vanish?
They can give it the mouse as we see,
(Which the mouse must consider a blunder),
But can they remove it from me—
Is that any nearer, I wonder?

LUCIO.

THE CANADIAN HONEY CROP

For the third successive year it would appear that the honey crop of Canada is going to fall below normal. The peak year was 1931 when 20,606,097 pounds were produced, but due to winter killing of clovers, drought conditions during the summer and insect damage in certain districts, the crop in 1934 fell short of the previous crop by 10,195,597 lbs. An increase of 73,000 pounds over 1933 is recorded in 1933 with another slight increase promised for 1934. Apparently every cloud has its silver lining, for in this case the short crops have permitted the producers to dispose of all carry-over from previous years at slightly advanced prices. The situation is improving quite briskly on the domestic market at prices slightly in advance of last year, while a fair amount is advancing to the export markets. Although it is risky to forecast production conditions in honey producing plants and of the bees themselves going into winter are promising, however, these conditions are not the whole story.

Editorial Comment

THE BANK DIRECTORATE

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce has sent to shareholders of the Bank of Canada a circular which invites them to forward the names of people they would like to see appointed to the board of directors of the bank. The avowed object of the movement is to simplify the procedure, to render unnecessary the meeting of shareholders and to assure a selection of directors exceptionally well qualified to render service to everybody, including the bank itself. It is time to beware. The Canadian Chamber of Commerce is directed by private bankers, brokers, manufacturers, big merchants. It incarnates the hostilities that certain newspapers of high finance translated into articles against the Bank of Canada. It is to be presumed that the list which would be established would be formula of names having little sympathy for the idea of a national bank, of names directly or indirectly identified with high finance or with the type of commerce dominated by the private banks, this commerce which is being exposed by the Stevens inquiry. It would be defeating the object of the central bank to put it under the control of the private banks and all the things that they control.—L'Illustration, Montreal.

SIR JOHN SIMON RECANTS

The Foreign Secretary did a good deal yesterday to recover the ground in the House of Commons which he had lost a fortnight ago in the debate on the Traffic in Arms. On that occasion he managed to convey an impression of indifference to the whole subject, and he also seemed to imply that partisan prejudice was in his opinion prompting socialist indignation at some of the methods which have been recently shown to be employed in the pursuit of this business. Yesterday he handsomely recognised the widespread and genuine feeling that there is something objectionable in large individual fortunes being made out of deathdealing weapons of war, and that it is at least desirable to go fully into the whole question and whether the practices exist and, if so, whether they could be checked by State action. The House liked so frank an apology for the shortcomings of the earlier statement and seemed to approve the proposal for a restricted inquiry.—London Times.

AWAKENING CHINA

Twenty-three years have rolled by since the Republic came into existence; years in which the country has been the scene of many struggles; in the course of which many lives have been sacrificed and much money spent. Through it all one factor stands prominent and that is the steady growth of national consciousness to an extent which the country had never seen before. Contact with the West has undoubtedly speeded the process. Particularly is this noticeable in the case of students where it used to be the pride of scholars to imbibe the Chinese classics, now the passport to the Civil Service examination as their goal. No longer is this the case today. In the enlightened class in the Chinese classics are gradually giving way to the study of medicine, science, engineering and other subjects. The very philosophy taught by Confucius is being studied and compared with the philosophy of teachers from foreign lands.—Hong Kong Press.

CANADA-NEW ZEALAND TRADE

It was of the essence of the Ottawa agreement that intra-Imperial trade should be fostered. The agreement was never meant to be read as an undertaking that the British Dominions should less harder on the Home market. As we now know, the British policy has had to take full account of the needs and hardships of the Home producers, with the result that other parts of the Empire have been tempted to feel sore on account of the inevitable reactions of export. Here, however, we have a hopeful indication that intra-Imperial trade promises to be no myth, but a very practical possibility. It should be our duty, in view of the figures quoted, to keep our eye on the Canadian market.—Hawkes Bay Herald, Napier, N.Z.

WILL UNCLE SAM PLAY BALL?

It is interesting to note the actual trend of our neighbour's business. Of the forty major American imports for the first six months of this year, twenty-eight increased in volume, while total imports rose about 40 per cent over 1933. Canada supplied 12 per cent of the imports during that period, and was Uncle Sam's largest single source of supply. If the Union would add to its tariff wall to emancipate, both American and Canadian industry would surely reap much benefit. In fact, Canada has years ready to barter and so does organized business in the United States. We thus await Mr. Roosevelt's will to trade. In any bargaining that ensues, Canada's interest in increasing concessions for the huge favourable trade balances previously held by the United States and amounting to over $2,000,000,000 in the last ten years.—Canadian Business, Montreal.

Napoleon's Love Letters To Marie Louise To Be Sold

London. — Another collection of Napoleons love-letters, to Archduchess Marie Louise of Austria, whom he married in 1810, after divorcing Josephine, are to be sold here in December. The name of the owner of this collection is not disclosed.

The number of letters greatly exceeds those written to Josephine, which were sold out of the late Lord Rosebery's library a year ago. And as the latter Napoleon's letters are, they lack the first fine rapture of his earlier love affair.

The series of epistles to Marie Louise cover a period of four years, 1810-1814 — giving a picture of Napoleon pleading with the young Austrian princess even before he had met her, and afterwards of their married life down to the time of his first imprisonment at Elba. He begins by stressing his impatience to meet her, his longing to "throw himself at her feet" and to devote his life to making her happy.

Daily Letters

During Napoleon's campaigns he writes to her day after day, urging her to be cheerful, and to be assured of his unchanging love. "You know how much I love you," he writes, "and how I long to hear that you are well and happy," ending with "Good-bye, my love, and a thousand kisses." After the birth of their son, the King of Rome, he variously adds: "Give a kiss for me to the little king."

Throughout the Russian campaign he describes the leading events, but never in any detail. Even in the French retreat, did he cease to urge her to be cheerful, his only worry being that the letters he might be intercepted by the enemy.

At the fall of Paris, he begs her to be "very quiet and calm, as he is, for the sake of their son," and assures her that he "feels his misfortunes far more for her sake than his own." The last letter of the series was sent from Elba. "The island is lovely, but you are so far away," he writes, "and I long to see you and my son."

A spirit of solidarity and mutual helpfulness at home cannot dwell with a spirit of irresponsible intolerance abroad.—Sir Herbert Samuel.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 16TH, 1934

"THE CHRISTIAN AND THE LORD'S SUPPER"

I CORINTHIANS, 11 : 23 • 34

In the text Paul is addressing the church in Corinth. It was a new church, its members recruited largely, from the pagan community. Even though Paul had insisted, from the founding of the church on a high moral standard among church members, yet abuses of one sort and another, carried over from the new Christian world, were soon manifest among the church members, and in the church practices and services. Some of these abuses had shown themselves in the communion service and Paul writes to reprimand the church members for permitting shows and disorder, to mar the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. He then gives in a brief manner, the manner which is read at every communion service and which forms the text of today's study. It forms the most complete record which we have of the institution of the Christian sacrament.

On the night on which the enemies of our Lord were plotting his death, Jesus gathered his disciples for a simple supper. Breaking the bread and distributing the wine, he said to them: "this do in remembrance of Me." That is to say, Jesus instituted this simple rite as a memorial service. In it his followers call to mind the life, ministry, and death of their Saviour. We erect monuments to the memory of our soldiers. We write tablets and install memorial windows to our loved ones. The desire to perpetuate the memory of those we've loved and lost awhile is a natural and universal one. So the sacrament of the Lord's Supper instituted by the Saviour Himself is a memorial of Him who in His life and death, wrought the salvation of the race.

But it is more than that. It is a service in which, in a symbolic manner, the communicant becomes a partaker of Christ's body and blood, becomes one in spirit and heart with Him and with the great family of believers everywhere in a spiritual and wholly intangible manner, creating thereby, the living church.

In the second part of this passage, Paul is very strict in his counsel, to the qualifications of those who partake of the sacrament. Yet, these words of Paul should be taken to preclude men and women of earnest desire, but of imperfect life. For should men and women wait until they were perfect before they partook of the sacrament, they would never enjoy the fellowship that might be their's. What Paul referred to here was the gross misconduct, drunkenness and class distinction which marked the communion service in the Corinthian church. We can hardly, today, conceive of such riotous conduct at a communion service such as that which Paul describes. But still a communicant should heed Paul's inspiration to examine himself before coming to the Lord's table. Self-examination is never easy. But it is essential to a proper approach to the great Christian sacrament. It is easy enough to see our own weaknesses and faults in others. It is simple enough to find these things in another's life and point a finger scornfully out before they approach the communion table. But to recognize one's own sins, is quite another matter. A recognition of them, however, and a determination of God's help to overcome them, are the conditions which make possible the union of the individual with Christ, which the sacrament of the Lord's supper so beautifully and so simply symbolizes.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT NEWS OF WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

GRACE CHURCH W. M. S.

The December meeting of the W. M. S. was held in the Sunday School room on Thursday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. F. L. Hooper, presiding. The meeting opened in the usual manner, after which the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, followed by reports from the several secretaries also the treasurer. Mrs. Miller, temperance secretary, read an interesting article on "The Origin of the Liquor Traffic."

It was moved and seconded that a letter of thanks be sent to the Ladies' Aid for their splendid donation to the Society.

The report of the Nominating Committee was then read by the secretary and Mrs. H. S. Wales presided for the election of officers which resulted as follows :—

In the absence of Mrs. Stalker who has charge of the study book Mrs. Hooper gave an interesting paper on "Ideas for World Peace."

Hymn 295 was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

STELLA C. G. I. T.

The regular monthly meeting of Stella C. G. I. T. group was held at the home of Miss J. Brown, on Monday evening, ecember 3rd.

There was an attendance of six members and one visitor. The meeting opened with "Re-Affiliation Service" a renewal affiliation with the Women's Missionary Society. This included the purpose of the affiliation, prayer and two old familiar hymns. The business period followed, in which the leader, Miss Scott, described to the group their study books for the coming of Conway dom,' and "India on the March."

Psalm 119 was read by Miss Ruth Glenn, which opened the devotional period. A mission story was given by Miss Lulu Glenn and a reading by Miss Irene Welbanks.

In the social period Miss Irene Welbanks read an account of the C. G. I. T. rally held at Gananoque, November 17th, and Miss Edith Scott read part of the story, "India on the March."

The meeting closed with the repeating of the creed and singing of "Taps", after which the hostess served a dainty lunch.

VIOLET—SWITZERVILLE W. I.

The regular meeting of the Violet-Switzerville Institute was held at the home of Mrs. William Cane, Thursday, December 6th, with a large attendance of members and visitors.

Owing to the absence of our president, Mrs. E. Wright and illness of the first vice-president, the chair was occupied by the second vice-president, Mrs. Charles Miller.

The meeting opened as per usual. It was the Christmas meeting and the roll call was answered with an exchange of Christmas gifts, and a suggestion for a Christmas gift. Every member was a recipient of a dainty gift. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Business items were discussed and disposed of. The report of our concert and the financial statement were given, and the Christmas cheer in our community was attended to.

Several Christmas readings were given by Mesdames J. A. McCormick, Rae Brown, A. Empey and F. Wales, each carrying their own little individual message and cheer.

Everyone enjoyed Mrs. J. Wilson's solo, "It came upon the midnight clear."

Mrs. Rae Brown gave a synopsis of local current events. After the meeting was closed by singing the Christmas carol, "Silent Night." Mrs. Arnold Empey won the prize for the contest, which was held while lunch was being prepared.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. N. Wilson and Mrs. J. A. McCormick to the hostess and those assisting with the program, seconded by Mrs. C. Vanalstyne.

A very dainty lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants, while Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. C. Miller presided at the tea table.

Collection, $1.50.

WESLEY LADIES' AID

The Ladies' Aid of Wesley held the October meeting at Mrs. Robert Nugent's. Mrs. Allen Moore presided, and after singing a hymn, Rev. T. H. P. Anderson led in prayer. Mrs. Ed. Eexsmith gave the scripture reading, which was taken from Isaiah 55. Mrs. Ross McKeown gave a financial report and it was decided that Mrs. McKeown, the treasurer give $20 to the church treasurer to be used on the minister's salary. Miss Daisy Moore gave a reading entitled "What is Home without a Mother," and "Success" was the title of a reading given by Mrs. Walter Clancy. A hymn was sung and Mr. Anderson closed the meeting with prayer.

The November meeting was held at the home of Mrs. S. Clancy, with Mrs. Moore presiding. Mrs. W. Wales had prepared the programme. After the opening hymn the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Mrs. Harold Nugent gave the scripture reading, taken from Luke 21. Another hymn was sung and business followed.

Mrs. Allen Moore displayed a quilt top which she had very kindly pieced for the Aid and which is for sale. A bill was paid and a report of the proceeds of the November tea was given. Mrs. Will Wales invited the Ladies' Aid to her home for the December meeting. Rev. T. H. P. Anderson is to prepare the programme and the roll call will be answered by a New Year's Resolution.

Mrs Ella McKeown gave a splendid reading, after which "Jesus Lover of My Soul" was sung and Mrs. Dan Rogers closed the meeting with prayer.

EMPEY HILL W.M.S. AND L.A.

The W. M. S. and Ladies' Aid held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bartlett, on Tuesday evening, with a full attendance. A Pot Luck supper was served at 7.30 and a really fine meal was put on, which everyone enjoyed. After supper the meeting was called to order with the W.M.S. president, Mrs. George Stapley, presiding. "Take time to be Holy," was sung and Mrs. W. Bell offered prayer and the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Mrs. H. Kimmerly read the scripture lesson, the 7th chapter of Matthew, followed by another hymn, after which the roll call was answered by a Christmas verse.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATIONS

CAMDEN EAST Y. P. U.

The weekly meeting of the Camden East Y. P. U. was held in the hall, Friday, December 7th, with the president, Mrs. C. Boulton, presiding. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. The roll call was answered by twenty-three members and visitors. After the collection was taken, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

Following the business part of the meeting a half hour of recreation was enjoyed.

The meeting was brought to a close with a hymn and the singing of the National Anthem.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, December 12th, at 8:00 p.m.

MORVEN Y. P. S.

A large number of the Morven Young people met in the Union Church on Friday evening last. The programme was in charge of the missionary convener, Miss Luva Perry. The scripture reading was read by Pauline Wager, followed by an explanation of the lesson by Luva Perry. The topic, "Uniting our Forces" was given by Wilfred VanSlyck and a reading by Mary Craig.

After the meeting practice was conducted for the Christmas concert which is to be held December 18th, at the Brick Church.

Please remember the date and plan to attend.

The Young People will meet this Thursday evening, December 13th, at Mr. Clarence Baird's.

CLEAN AND STERILIZE ALL DAIRY UTENSILS

The keeping quality of milk depends directly upon the number of bacteria present and this, in turn, depends upon the thoroughness with which dairy utensils have been cleaned and sterilized. The use of live steam or scalding with boiling water is always effective providing it is available in sufficient volume, but as a general rule the quantity available on the average farm is inadequate for effective results. It is for this reason that the use of chlorine in suitable form is recommended by bacteriological experts. It acts rapidly in cold water, is cheaper and more convenient than the heat treatment generally recommended.

When properly employed chlorine sterilization gives excellent results and the practice, already general among milk and other food plants, is spreading to the dairy farms.

Children suffering from worms soon show the symptoms, and any mother can detect the presence of these parasites by the writhings and fretting of the child. Until expelled and the system cleared of them, the child cannot regain its health. Miller's Worm Powders are prompt and efficient, not only for the eradication of worms, but also as a toner up for children that are run down in consequence.

Business was discussed and then Mrs. W. Bell's group gave a short program. "Silent Night" was sung and Mrs. P. Hutchinson and Lillian Bartlett gave readings. Mrs. W. Bell told a splendid story; Mrs. H. Stafford sang a solo; Mr. Harold Winter gave a couple of selections, accompanied on the guitar.

Rev. Dr. Smith was asked to preside over the election of officers :—

W. M. S. — President, Mrs. Geo. Stapley; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. W. Bell; Secretary, Mrs. O. E. Ashley; Treasurer, Mrs. Clifford Abbott; Pianist, Mrs. Fred Kimmerly; Secretary of Christian Stewardship and Finance, Miss Mabel Stafford; Literary Secretary, Mrs. John Meyers; Strangers' Secretary, Mrs. W. Whittington; Supply Secretary, Mrs. Ed. Price; Temperance and World Peace Secretary, Mrs. R. Taylor.

The Ladies' Aid officers were then elected :— President, Mrs. F. Hutchinson; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Wm. Penny; Secretary, Mrs. S. E. Winter; Treasurer, Mrs. E. Price.

MT. PLEASANT PIONEER W. I.

The Mount Pleasant Pioneer Women's Institute met at the home of Mr. Fred Henderson on Friday evening with thirty members present, besides a number of visitors. Mrs. H. Putman, president, presiding. The meeting opened with the singing of the ode and all repeated the Lord's Prayer. Roll call was answered by Christmas suggestions.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and dealt with and a letter from Kemptville re the courses for the girls and boys. A letter from the Institute superintendent was also read. The treasurer gave a report which was gratifying.

Six school children sang a couple of Christmas selections and Mrs. A. Sexsmith gave a reading. Christmas community singing occupied a few minutes and a skit was put on by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sills, Misses Helen Alcombrack and Elsie Henderson on "Formal Dinner" and Misses Alice and Mary Oliver demonstrated a Christmas dinner table.

A vote of thanks was given all who took part and made the evening such a success, also to the host and hostess for their hospitality.

Mrs. Shore Loynes, district president, was present and gave a short talk, and congratulated the officers and members on their success as an institute, and for their very entertaining evening.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God Save the King" after which lunch was served.

Recipes & Hints

It is the desire of "The Beaver" to devote this section of the paper, regularly, to the publication of Recipes and Household Hints, received from local women or women's organizations. We would be pleased to receive recipes and suggestions and would wish to publish the contributors' names, as requested. Contributions will be used as space permits.

(Send them in early in the week.)

HONEY DOUGHNUTS

One large cup of milk.
Four tablespoons honey.
One egg.
Two teaspoons cream of tartar.
Three-quarters cup sugar.
One tablespoon butter.
One teaspoon salt.
One teaspoon soda.
Half teaspoon nutmeg.
Half teaspoon ginger.
Flour as requested.

Mix butter, sugar and honey thoroughly into cream, gradually beat in egg, add milk alternately with soda and cream of tartar, sifted with two cups of flour and half teaspoon of nutmeg and half teaspoon of ginger. Add one tablespoon boiling lard out to add enough flour for frying. Roll out dough. Roll and cut out and fry in deep fat at 375 degrees Fahdenheit.

BOILED BRISKET

Boiled brisket of beef is an excellent dinner. Have the brisket boned, and rolled. Put the meat, the bones, a carrot, onion, and turnip, some pepper, salt, and some soaked dried peas, beans or barley into a saucepan. Almost cover with boiling water, bring to the boil quickly, skim well, and then simmer slowly, allowing a couple of hours to three pounds of meat. The liquid with the vegetables in it makes excellent soup, or it can be used as the basis for other soups.

MACARONI MINCE

Use equal quantities of macaroni and meat. Make a thick brown gravy with some dripping, flour, water, or stock and some gravy browning, and cook a little chopped onion in it for a few minutes. Season well and add the meat, which should be allowed to simmer in it for about twenty minutes. In the meantime boil the macaroni in salted water, then drain well, and put layers of meat and macaroni into a greased pie-dish. Cover the top with a layer of breadcrumbs and bake for half an hour.

MINCED BEEF

Minced beef can be used in tasty and economical ways. If there is any suet with it, shred it and put it into a saucepan. If not, use a little dripping or bacon fat. When the fat is hot put in the meat and let it brown lightly, stirring all the time to prevent it from burning or hardening. Add a little boiling water, cover the pan, and let it simmer slowly in the oven for half an hour. Have ready two ounces of breadcrumbs to every pound of meat, add a dessertspoonful of some salt, pepper, and a little browning, mix with the meat, and let it simmer for a further half-hour. A little tomato or similar sauce may be added, and a little more water may be necessary from time to time, though it should not be made too thin.

GROUND MEAT CASSEROLE

One and a half pounds round steak, cut half inch thick, three tablespoons flour, one and one-half cups water, salt and pepper, three cups potato ball, twelve smallcarrots.

Brown steak in a little hot fat in a frying pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, cut in four serving pieces and lay them on bottom of greased casserole. Make a gravy of the flour and water, cooking it until it thickens. Season. Lay the tiny potato balls or slices of potato over the meat, add the scraped carrots, cover with gravy; cover the dish and bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 reg. F., about one hour. Serves four.

STEAK CASSEROLE

Three cups chopped cooked meat, one small onion, two cups cooked noodles; one can cream of mushroom soups, one and one-half cups milk, one cup cooked sliced carrots, two teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, half teaspoon salt, pepper as desired.

Any roasted or boiled meat may be used for this. Veal or beef will be particularly good. Chop the meat and onion together. Mix with the other ingredients, and bake in a greased casserole in hot oven, 400 deg. F., until nicely browned. Serves six.

FOR SANDWICHES

Sandwiches seem to be more popular than ever before and suggestions for interesting fillings are always in order. Try some of these for your buffet supper or for a party :

Scrambled eggs, adding one-half cup chopped crisp bacon during the process. Spread between buttered bread.

Spread buttered bread with mayonnaise, add thin slices of tomato and sprinkle grated cheese over the tomato. Add remaining slice of bread and put in the toaster.

Add to one-half cup creamed butter one-half cup minced ham and one-half cup minced chicken. Season, salt, the yolk of an egg. Rub the butter to a cream, and the other ingredients and mix well. Chill. Spread the bread with the mixture and use minced ham, chicken or tongue as a filling. This quantity will spread sandwiches for a large party.

— HOUSEHOLD HINTS —

REMOVING STAINS

Tar and grass stains are the most difficult to eradicate. On no account should the garments be washed first, or the stains will be ineradicably fixed. Tar stains should be rubbed on both sides with a generous supply of butter and left for a few hours. Then wipe off the butter and repeat the process if necessary. If the garments cannot be washed afterwards the butter should be removed with benzine. Grass stains should be treated in the same way with glycerine.

While gasoline and benzine are excellent grease removers it is not always advisable to use them on light or delicate materials. French chalk is almost as effective for taking out grease; it should be sprinkled over the stain, left for a time, and the part then rubbed gently over a warm iron. Mud stains can be removed by rubbing in some carbonate of soda, then pressing with a warm iron. Articles which are not stained but which look generally soiled can be cleaned with a piece of common kitchen salt. It should be heated in the oven, then applied briskly to the garment. The soiled part of the salt should be scraped off and the work continued with the clean salt. Then brush the garment well.

CARPET TINTING

When carpets are beginning to show signs of wear, spring cleaning usually makes threadbare patches all the more noticeable. Worn seams, if stretched when carpets are laid again after beating, look conspicuously white. Good results may often be obtained at small cost by staining the worn parts with one of a suitable colour. The dye should be applied hot, and brushed well into the carpet with a stiff paint-brush. Rather less than the usual quantity of water should be used to dilute the dye. Faded patches in self-coloured carpets may be much improved if they are rubbed over with a cloth dipped in dye of the same colour in a slightly deeper shade. A final rub with salt and water, given an hour later, will help to set the colour.

GREASE ON SILK STOCKINGS

When silk stockings become spotted with grease they should be treated at once, as the longer the stains remain the more difficult they become to remove. Soak the grease spots with turpentine. Leave for a time and then wash the stockings. If the spots are only slight and the stockings must be worn again at once, rub a little French chalk over the marks and brush out well with a soft brush. The French chalk will absorb the grease and make the splashes hardly visible.

REJUVENATING JAM OR JELLY

Many housewives find upon their shelves jars of homemade jam and jelly that have been overlooked and become sugary and crystallized. Do not throw them away. They can be made as good as new in a few moments.

Turn the jam into a saucepan, add just a little water and stir over gentle heat until all sugar has dissolved. Bring to the boil and re-jar.

If the jam is too hard to turn out, stand the jars in hot water for a time. You will then have no difficulty.

Chutney often becomes too solid if left too long. Treat it in same way as jam, using enough vinegar to make it soft again. Always reheat it as the sugar in it needs melting. Mixed pickles that have become dry are delicious if placed in a good mustard sauce.

Jams and pickles improve with age. Those treated in this manner are often better in flavor than those freshly made.

Pear never gave stable perspective in life of anyone—John Dewey.

Externally or Internally, it is Good When applied externally by brisk rubbing, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil opens the pores and penetrates the tissue, touching the seat of the trouble and immediately affording relief. Administered internally, it will lull the irritation in the throat which induces coughing and will relieve affections of the bronchial tubes and respiratory organs. Try it and be convinced.

250 LB. MAN LOSES 20 LBS.

And Looks 10 Years Younger

"About three months ago," writes a correspondent, "I weighed 250 lbs. I started taking Kruschen Salts, and I lost 20 lbs., or a little over two months. I am feeling better than I have in years. My friends tell me I look ten years younger, and my step has an elasticity which is amazing. I shall boost Kruschen Salts wherever I go."—J. McC.

Kruschen contains just the six salts, blended in just the right proportion, that are essential to keep you in continual good health. Kruschen Salts keeps the system free from encumbering waste matter. Unless this wastage is expelled regularly, it will give rise to rheumatic and other body poisons. And Nature is liable to take the defensive measure of storing this poison-breeding material out of the way in the form of fatty tissue.

Canadian Poet

instinctively turn to beauty when there is suffering. There has been with the thrilling spirit could possibly interpret in words. Mr. MacDonald has been actively engaged in many sports and holds definite views as to how they should be conducted.

Knows Napanee District Well

Years ago Mr. MacDonald was frequently in the Napanee district. He confessed a knowledge and a love for the country round about, which many an inhabitant does not possess. In his poem "Singing Words" which he read, he brings to his audience's attention, the beauty of Canadian names around which "Napanee" holds an honored place.

His inimitable power of mimicry and portrayal was deftly shown in his rendering of "Grannies" a poem which appealed to everyone who heard it. Variety and humor were introduced into the program in his readings of the negro and the French Canadian poems.

True appreciation of beautiful things and a breadth of experience were evidenced in one of his last poems "I love Old Things."

Mr. MacDonald undoubtedly possesses all the requisites of a true poet. He has an instinctive love of people, particularly the young and the very old. He has a sense of humor, love of the beautiful, a power to commune with nature and an insight into the pleasures and sorrows of people. His versatility is shown in the beautiful illuminations in his volumes of poetry, which he himself has drawn, and in the musical score for one of his poems, which was sung by a group of school girls.

OBITUARY

MRS. JANE LUCAS

Mrs. Jane Lucas, who passed away at the home of her niece, Mrs. Malcolm Hogle of Ernestown, would have reached her 100th birthday had she lived until December. She had lived in the Ernestown community the greater part of her life. Her husband, the late George Lucas, predeceased her in 1908. There was no immediate family but several nieces and nephews are left to mourn her loss.

General services were held at the home of Mrs. Malcolm Hogle, with Rev. Mr. Sharp officiating. Interment took place in the Union Cemetery, the funeral being attended by a large number of friends and relatives.

FALLACIES ABOUT VEAL ARE ENTIRELY DUE TO BAD COOKING

This Meat Is Not Indigestible If Prepared Properly

There seems to be a tradition in this country that veal is indigestible.

But France regards it as a delicacy suitable for invalids and uses it as we use chicken.

The truth is that the digestibility of veal is determined by the cooking. Scientific experiments have proved that properly cooked veal is as easily digested as any other meat. Remember that veal should be thoroughly cooked, never left rare or underdone. A good rule to keep in mind is that meat from young animals must always be well done while that from matured creatures may be cooked rare if you like.

Even thinly sliced cuts such as steaks and chops of veal should be cooked at least thirty minutes. Long, slow cooking is imperative for roasts.

You see, the meat lacks fat and is very fine-grained and close textured so that special attention must be paid to keeping it juicy and flavorsome.

Breading Keeps in Juice

A covered roaster, larding, frequent basting or a flour and water paste are satisfactory methods for roasting. Chops and cutlets may be rolled in flour or bread crumbs, seasoned well and cooked slowly. Pot-roasting is also a splendid method for many veal cuts.

Probably there is no other meat that responds as well to clear seasoning. This flavor is delicate and must be enhanced rather than covered up. A sunshine of sweet herbs and young vegetables does much in this direction.

Professional cooks consider veal stock indispensable for use in aspics, in meat and vegetable sauces and in many soups. While chicken and veal stocks are used almost interchangeably, veal stock is much less expensive and even more delicately flavored.

Veal Fricasee

Two pounds foreleg of veal, 4 cups water, 1 small onion, 1 blade celery, 1 small carrot, bit of bayleaf, ½ teaspoon peppercorns, 2 teaspoons salt, flour.

Peel but do not slice onion. Scrape carrot and cut in quarters. Cut celery in half inch pieces and cut these pieces with bayleaf and peppercorns into a square of cheesecloth. Tie securely and drop into water. Bring to the boiling point and add meat. Cook hard ten minutes. Then reduce heat and simmer until tender, about three hours. Cool in the water. Remove meat from stock and cut in neat pieces for serving. Remove cheesecloth bag of seasonings from stock. Add meat in flour and brown quickly in hot pork fat or butter. Remove meat to hot platter and brown two tablespoons flour in frying pan in which meat was browned, adding more fat if necessary to make two tablespoons. Stir in stock in which meat was cooked and cook and stir until gravy boils. Pour over meat, garnish with parsley and serve.

DOCUMENT RECORDS SALE OF A SLAVE

An interesting document was unearthed at Windsor, N.S., the other day: it was an original Bill of Sale of a negro, one Minitur the price being £75. It is dated 24th of August, 1799. The document is in the possession of a direct descendent of the man to whom the negro was sold. The Bill of Sale, according to the Tourist Department of the Canadian National Railways, goes on to recite that the seller, Joseph C. Northrup "do bargain and sell unto the said John Palmer, of Windsor, a negro, named Minitur, now remaining and being in the said Joseph C. Northrup, to have and to hold all and singular the said Negro man."

There are similar records in Sidney and Truro in the same province. In the town of Shelburne, on the south shore of Nova Scotia, are descendents of some of the slaves bought by the Loyalists from New York, upon the evacuation of that city at the close of the American Revolution, the town arising practically overnight to house the 10,000, or more, who came there—Some of the old buildings still remain and are an interesting sight for the many United States tourists who visit this section of Nova Scotia. The town has in its possession an old hand-operated fire pumping engine given to the town by George III. in 1787.

INFANTS' COLDS Relieved/

Young children easily catch cold. So Mrs. Russel Ward, of Hilton Beach, Ont., wisely says: "If I notice that there is any sign of a cold I give Baby's Own Tablets and find they are a great help." Thousands of mothers do the same not only for colds but for fretfulness, indigestion, constipation, teething troubles, colic, upset stomach and so on. Baby's Own Tablets are safe and sure in relieving children's common ailments. Price 25c.

MRS. F. F. MILLER WRITES FROM INDIA

Srinagar, October 4th, 1934

Dear Mrs. Templeton,

There has been so much going on where the last week that I feel I must write to you while I remember everything. Last week the Maharaja of Kashmir, generally known as "His Highness" celebrated his birthday. The guns were fired at 7:00 a.m. each morning for a week. We were too late coming from Gulmarg to see the polo games. We went, one afternoon, to see the parade of the special boats belonging to H. H. There were five, all very like the gondolas one sees in Venice, only much longer at the back, each boat manned by thirty-six oarsmen. We took a shikara from Miss O'Connor's where we were, going a short distance down the Jhelum, and stopped just in front of where H. H. and his guests were to embark. Coolie had been working for weeks in front of H. H.'s gardens, building steps from there to the Bund, and from the Bund down to the river, where the boats were moored. The Bund as I've likely told you before, is a walk going from one end of Srinagar to the other, for pedestrians only—no motors or other vehicles are allowed nor even riding. The steps were all covered with red velvet carpet. Anyone wishing to cross the Bund at this point had to jump over the carpet. Stepping on it might leave a speck of dust and H. H might step on it. While waiting for him to arrive, coolies, dressed in yellow, were constantly dusting the carpet and railings. All the boats were of gold and sparkled in the sun. H. H.'s own boat came first. In the very front the Kashmir flag was raised the minute H. H. stepped on board. All the oarsmen in the different boats, dressed in yellow with yellow heart-shaped paddles stood with upright paddles. Next came an enclosure, large enough for five or six chairs. This had a gold Chinnana (canopy) supported by four gold posts. The large arm-chairs were also gold. Directly behind, two men dressed in yellow with gold puggris, stood and each one carried an immense upright gold paddle, the blades heart-shaped done in fret work. We guessed they were fans, but the day was not too warm, they were not used. Then came the oarsmen or paddlers. Just before H. H. and guests arrived, a man dressed in red and gold, put two men through a drill, twirling and carrying their paddles upright the minute he appeared at the top of the steps. The men in the other boats were perfect, and later, when propelling the boats were in perfect unison. The other four boats were not quite so elaborate as the first one, the difference being that the chairs and the centre of the shamiana were of yellow velvet with wide bands of gold.

The Maharaja's Boat

The Maharaja and four guests were in the first boat, H. H. sitting being in each of the others. All with one exception, were dressed in cloth of gold, with puggris to match with a jeweled order in front. The one exception was dressed in dark European clothes. We learned later that he was and found out later that he was the controller of H. H.'s household. We had a splendid view of it all. As soon as the boats started a large motor-boat with half a dozen policemen on board, kept crossing from one side of the river to the other, directly in front of us. By this time, all the shikaras started to follow—ours among the number. I'm sure I'm not exaggerating when I say there were a thousand boats on the river and as it is narrow there were frequent jams. Crowds of natives lined the banks on either side. At intervals guns roared, school children sang or bands played. Flags decorated the buildings, also wonderful rugs, curtains and old Persian shawls were hung in front of the different shops of the bazaar. The various brides we passed under had banners with birthday greetings. "Long Live our Noble Maharaja," "Happy greetings to our beloved Maharaja on this auspicious day," "Long life and happiness to our Maharaja, our Maharani and the little Prince," were a few of them. One man evidently thought the British should be included, as his contribution said "Long life and happiness to our King-Emperor." At the different brides were two small artificial trees with hundreds of roses, made of different colored tissue paper with gold or silver centres and green leaves—very effective at a distance but very tawdry at close range. It was all very unlike H. H. in a way, for all H. H.'s subjects are so taxed and ground down in poverty that they hate him. The gold boats were as far as the Seventh Bridge where H. H. and party left the boats and took waiting cars to the Water Palace where he held a Durbar.

Gorgeous Official Robes

There were a number of English people in shikaras beside ourselves, but the majority were Indians. Only the higher governmental people were invited to the durbar. Mrs. Kisk, whose husband is chief justice of Aallahabad, was the only one from Miss O'Connor's to be included. She said it was a marvellous sight, the men all in most official dress the Indians in cloth of gold and puggris to match, with jeweled orders on their coats and pearls and the women wore magnificent saris and endless amount of jewels. One never sees the better class of Indian women wearing sham jewelry as we do, those days. Even the coolie class of women wear real silver.

Fun to return to the river and our shikara. We had taken no tea with us, so left the crowd at the Fourth Bridge, ran our boat alongside some less and had our tea in comfort. Ten minutes after H. H. and party had passed there was not a sign of any decorations to be seen. Even the oarsmen stopped their boats and proceeded in disrobe. Revealing the terrible dirty clothes which they wear every day, and the whole river looked as drab as it usually does. When H. H. went down the river there was not a sight of a coolie boat (called dungas) to be seen. These boats are either medium boats that the coolies and their families live on, or large freight boats carrying all sorts of things, logs, bricks, sawed or even manure — all having thatched roofs. They must have been converted to some canal or stream, as on our way back, we saw dozens and dozens of them.

It was a lovely, not too warm a day, with a gorgeous sunset. We left Miss O'Connor's at three and were back at seven-thirty. About two hours earlier we received command invitations to attend a party given by H. H. at his old Palace, known as the Water Palace, as it is right on the river edge. This took place the next night after the water parade. Each envelope contained three cards; a very large one with the invitation on the back, which said: "All guests must arrive at 9:30 before the arrival of the Maharaja, who leaves at 10:00 and H. H. departs." The second card was smaller and gave directions where to park one's car. As we went with friends in their cars, we were not concerned with that card. The third card, the size of a man's calling card, had our name on it, giving instructions for the time we entered the in-waiting. The streets leading to the palace were decorated with flags, streamers and thousands of electric lights. The back of the palace is on the Jhelum River and before it, opposite side it looked like fairyland. Though there were hundreds of carriages and motors of vehicles already there was not the slightest confusion. We drove up under the arch into the courtyard with a large fountain in the centre. After showing our big card for the —tenth—time, we entered a very wide corridor. Leaving our wraps, we went into a very large waiting room, which later was used as a ball-room—a very fine orchestra was stationed at one end. At one end. There we chatted with friends until H. H. was ready to receive us. We then passed into another corridor, handed our small card to an equery, who passed it on to a second, (he in turn read it and passed it to the minister-in-waiting, who announced it to H. H. We shook hands with him and passed on, being free to do as we wished the rest of the evening.

I was introduced to Mrs. Thorpe, wife of the Controller of the Household. She took me under her wing to speak telling me who everyone was and introducing me to a number of people, including H. H.'s brother-in-law, who is a Maharaja of some kind. He in turn read all present several roms, the first and most popular being the one where the buffet supper was served. After that, long we were quite ready for refreshments. Coffee was a good idea, but Dr. A. G. Cameron spoke of the excellent work being performed by the famine relief and the need for contributed generously during the coming months.

It is with much pleasure that we report the marked improvement in the health of Rev. and Mrs. Soon he expects to be sufficiently recovered to resume his duties in his church.

BICKNELL'S CORNERS

Bicknell's Corners, December 10.—The weather has been real cold, but so far has been a lovely fall and winter compared to last year.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Scouten called at Mr. W. Dunn's one day last week.

Mrs. E. W. Simmons spent a few days last week with her daughter Mrs. J. E. Brown, and family, at Navanee.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Hyland spent Thursday at Consecon attending the funeral of the late George Millighan.

Quite a number attended the Y. P. S. on Friday evening in the Bank Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Simmons, Miss Ruby Simmons and Mr. Fred Pranica, of Kingston, spent a Sunday recently with the former's niece, Mrs. Harry Badgley, and Mr. Badgley, at Consecon.

Miss Dorothy Rutherford took tea one evening last week with her friend Miss Marie Scott.

The many friends around here of Mr. "Bill" McKeown were very sorry to hear of his accident at Finlay's Paner Mills on Friday, and we all hope for a speedy recovery.

MORVEN

Morven, December 10.—Rev. A. E. Oliver gave a very splendid sermon on Sunday evening from these words. "Be run that ye may obtain".

Miss Pauline Amey spent the week end with her friend, Miss Dorothy Sharp.

Mrs. Heywood is spending a few days with Mrs. G. Fralick.

The St. Thomas Church W. A. met a few years ago and Mrs. A. Bell, for the their monthly meeting, and a goodly number were present.

We are sorry to report the illness of Mrs. Bartels, at the home of Mrs. Rutan.

Mr. Bruce Brandon is recovering from a recent serious illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Wallace, of Troy, Ohio, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morris.

The Y. P. S. will meet on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Christianson Hard, the presence to bein charge of Miss Edna Weed.

and men in the school but only seven hundred took part. As usual, tea was served later, by several prominent ladies of Srinagar— on the spacious lawn. Mr. Lyndal Bricso has been at this work for over fifty years and has done wonderful work during that time. Boys are taken into the school from every caste. No attempt to Christianize them is made, except by example. The pupils all adore him and are sorry when the time comes for them to leave.

The weather in Kashmir was wonderful all Mr. Lyndal Bricso has rain—very pleasing for the visitors but hard on the native farmers, where crops were a failure. They depend on rice and other grains for their winter supply of food and from what they sell in the way of embroideries, etc. to see them through until rortie, and the prospect was not very good.

We left Srinagar about the middle of October and my next letter will tell you of our trip to Peshawar and what we have been doing since we came.

With kind regards to all enquiring friends and much love to yourself,

Truly your friend,

BERTHA M. MILLER.

DESERONTO

Deseronto, December 10. — The fifty-seventh anniversary celebrations at Deseronto United Church were an unqualified success this year.

On Saturday evening a very enthusiastic audience attended the entertainment provided by the Virginia Ladies' Choir. Owing to the extreme cold, the number present was somewhat less than would otherwise have been, but all those present expressed sincere appreciation of the splendid given, whether individually or as a group.

On Sunday, at the morning service, at 11 o'clock, the Jubilee Singers contributed two especially lovely numbers, thereby adding much to the beauty of the service. The guest preacher was Dr. James Semple, of Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, who chose as his subject, "The Church for Our Day". In a very forceful and appealing way Dr. Semple discussed some of the various phases of life with which the church must carry on courageously, if it would, in our modern world, maintain its place for which it was intended. The speaker for the evening service was Dr. Shaw of the Queen's University Department of Theology. In a delightful way, which betrayed the speaker's many scholastic associations, Dr. Shaw spoke on the subject, "A Living Sacrifice". His comments, sponsored an entertainment in the White Hall on Tuesday evening, December 4th, featuring local talent. The proceeds will be devoted to relief work. Mr. J. Herndell acted as chairman. Those contributing items on the programme were Mr. Reg. Wessman, Mrs. Trevor Chiniffe, Miss Dora Aylsworth, Miss Margaret Fields, Mrs. A. Shayre, the Misses Jean and Isabelle Shayre, Harry Dens, Wilfred Bendell, Arthur O'Ray, Billy Shayre, Harold Mason, Karl Perry, Guy Bell. Dr. A. G. Cameron spoke of the excellent work being performed by the famine relief and the need for continued generosity during the coming months.

It is with much pleasure that we report the marked improvement in the health of Rev. and Mrs. Soon he expects to be sufficiently recovered to resume his duties in his church.

The Continuation School play, "The Dust of the Earth," will be presented on Friday, December 14th, in the Masonic Hall.

"FACTS AND MR BEATTY"

To the Editor of The Globe :— In the interests of fairness, may I be permitted to reply to the letter on the railway situation which appeared in your columns recently over the signature of J. A. Douglas. Mr. Douglas has sought widespread circulation for his views, as his letter has already appeared in five Ontario newspapers and in, at least, one Western newspaper. It is, I think, an unfair letter, because it seeks to create the impression that the Canadian Pacific Railway has cost and is costing the people of this country vast sums of money, which places it in a position as a source of national expense little different from that of the C. N. R. Nothing is justified and desirable because, without condescending to particulars, Mr. Douglas makes sweeping charges about transactions with respect to which most people are not well informed.

No Ordinary Subsidy

He says that the value of the "subsidies" to the C. P. R. "was certainly at least $250,000,000." He is wrong even as to the public assistance as the C.P.R. received from the Government cannot be classed as an ordinary railway subsidy. The agreement made in the form of both cash and land as agreed compensation for work done, services rendered and obligations assumed under a contract. After having carried out the job under terms to be arranged. The road had to be constructed under unusual physical and financial difficulties, and in the face of skepticism on the part of influential people here and in England as to whether it would ever "pay for its axle grease." The terms of the agreement finally made between Government and syndicate were reasonable, and in view of the difficulties to be met to be performed, and the obligation to operate in perpetuity, quite moderate given the railway was moderate. Judged by the yardstick of assistance given other railways in this country and the United States, it was extremely so. Mr. Douglas's second statement lies in his guess as to the amount of assistance given.

Facts in Figures

Let us look at the facts obtainable from Government and other sources. The figures are as follows:

Relating to Original Contract :
Cash	$25,000,000
Cost to Government of properties turned over to Canadian Pacific ..	37,791,435
Amount realized from lands turned back to Government	10,189,521
Total	$72,980,956
Under Crow's Nest Pass Agreement:
Cash	$ 3,404,720
Other :—
Cash paid to Canadian Pacific By Company	$ 1,721,444
Cost to Government of North Shore Railway, turned over to Canadian Pacific Railway	1,500,000
Cash paid to subsidized subsequent to acquisition of control by Canadian Pacific	10,486,793
Total paid to Canadian Pacific Railway	$90,093,913

Freight Rate Concessions

In return for the money received under the Crow's Nest Pass agreement the company built 330 miles of mountain railroad and made a substantial concession in Western freight rates, which has ever since been a "bugaboo" to the railway, but as a benefit to Canadian shippers and to the country itself was worth many hundred times the cost in money.

	Acres of land
In addition to the cash paid to the Canadian Pacific Railway, there were granted to it by the Dominion Government under original contract	25,000,000
There were returned for cash consideration (See item $10,189,521 above.)	6,793,014
Granted Souris branch	1,811,520
Saskatchewan and Western Railway	98,880
Total	19,917,386
Subsidiaries now a part of the

C. P. R. owned 2,235,145 acres of land when they came under the control of that company, thus making total land received by the C.P.R. 22,152,531 acres.

It is fair to ask what was the value before the C. P. R. made it possible for people to reach them and live on them?

When the road was in the building there was a land boom and over night a half million acres were sold at a gross selling price average of $2.94 per acre; the net after deducting selling expense would have been much less. After that followed the collapse, and in the next fifteen years only 290,116 acres were sold. Cancellations were frequent, so that at the end of 1896 less land had actually been sold or contracted for than at the end of 1883. At that time the company would gladly have turned over its land holdings for a very modest average recompense.

The Public's Share

As noted in the cash received statement, the company turned back $10,786,014 acres at $1.50 per acre. I think it will be agreed that, considering costs of selling and securing settlers and poor land received in dry areas, this $1.50 per acre would be a fair price at which to set the value of land subsidy. On that basis the following is the total of land and cash received, over and above the total cost of the Canadian Pacific to the people of Canada:

22,152,531 acres at $1.50	$34,228,913
Total cash subsidies	90,093,913
Total	$124,322,709

Comparisons are odious, but it might be pointed out that total cash and credit aids to the Canadian National, before and since its group of lines was taken over by the Government, amounted to, at December 31, 1931, $2,467,918,406, with additional accrued and unpaid interest due the Government to a total of $354,172,113.

Made the West

One cannot enumerate here what the Canadian Pacific has done for Canada in the way of national development in return for its land and cash subsidies, which are comparatively small, as compared with those by other railways all over the continent. It opened up and made the West. In doing so it has spent up to the end of last year $102,000,000 of its own money on colonization and development. To the same date it has returned in taxes to the people of this country $116,000,000, and its tax bill averages approximately $7,000,000. I think most people will agree that the people of Canada have received, and are receiving, a most satisfactory cash return upon their investment in cash and land assistance given to the Canadian Pacific.

THE TATTOO EXPERT MUST HAVE GREAT FUN

Denver, Col. — Tattooing, says a Denver exponent of the ancient art, is attracting more women customers than ever, most of the work he does, however, is what is described as "Little Stuff," such as hearts or flowers or anchors at 25 cents each.

It has been a long time since he has had anybody who could part with $150 to have "Cleopatra at the bath" etched on his back. This is a 12-hour job, incidentally.

Every tattoo artist has hundreds of designs ready at hand. But many patrons bring their own. Photographs are popular.

"Sometimes impulsive women want their sweetheart's names tattooed on them; then they fall out of love and want the name taken off," says the tattooer. "The easiest way to do that is to cover the name with a floral design.

"I've covered sixteen names one after the other, on the shoulder and arm of one Denver woman. She had one name on the end of her list and above it sixteen little rows of flowers."

DEPUTY APOLOGIZES DUEL IS CALLED OFF

Paris, France — The expected duel between Deputy Jean Goy and Deputy Franklin, Bouillon over an interview the former had with Adolf Hitler, dissolved with the morning mists—the only losers, a number of over-anxious reporters, they lost a lot of sleep.

Goy, head of the National Union of War Veterans, was reported slated to meet Bouillon on the outskirts of Paris at 6:30 a.m. on November 27th. The friction between the two was said to have resulted from reproaches Bouillon had addressed to Goy for having given an interview describing his talk with Hitler, to the newspaper Le Matin.

Their seconds were said to have exhausted all pistols were chosen as weapons.

Meantime the National Union of War Veterans approved its leader's actions.

As clusters of reporters vainly prowled around possible sites for the duel at dawn, the seconds of Bouillon issued a communique in which he stated he had no intention of offending Goy but wanted merely to criticize his attitude toward Germany. In view of these conditions, the seconds said, a meeting of honor at some of the vital feed elements. Such animals can often be brought into better condition by feeding cod liver oil. If trouble is anticipated, small doses of the oil will probably correct any tendency to a rachitic condition.

War Debt Accord Chances Better

London. — Belief that this year's bills from the United States to her creditors abroad, delivered recently, might prove the first step in the solution of the war debts problem, found expression here.

Although the billing of foreign war creditors has in the past been mere formality since European countries have stopped payment, it was suggested in authoritative quarters that should the creditors act to make an issue of the debts this time, some definite settlement might be achieved.

May Face Issue Boldly

The opinion was based upon the increased strength of the Roosevelt Administration following the recent off-year elections in the United States.

It was believed that with his present large majority in Congress, President Roosevelt might decide to take the bull by the horns instead of pursuing the cautious tactics that have been the rule of the White House where war debts were concerned in the past.

Solution of the debt problem between Great Britain and the United States, it was stated, would not only remove a troublesome irritant from British-American diplomatic relations, but would greatly facilitate the stabilization of dollar and pound currencies.

LONDON JAY-WALKERS WILL FACE ARREST

London, Eng. — The difficulties London's police are encountering in enforcing the new system of marked-out obligatory street crossings for pedestrians were mentioned in the House of Commons recently, when Sir John Gilmour, Home Secretary, said the time has come when "more active measures" must be taken to enforce the regulations.

He said plainclothes police would be employed to curb the practice of ignoring the crossings, marked out by studs sunk in the paving, and no difference would be made between pedestrians and motorists if they infringed the regulations. The marked-out passages have long been a subject of amusement but the authorities consider the matter very serious in view of the large toll taken by accidents, lately.

COD LIVER OIL AND CATTLE

Cod liver oil has never attained very great prominence in supplementing the rations of the larger farm animals because the nutrients which it supplies are not made available, can be procured almost equally well, and much more cheaply, from ordinary farm stock feeds, plus a minimum of purchased supplements such as protein feeds and minerals.

There are some occasions, however, when cod liver oil undoubtedly is a valuable feed for the larger farm animals. Pigs being grown during the winter months sometimes develop an unthrifty rachitic condition. A second winter's ration of dry cod liver oil. If trouble is anticipated, small doses of the oil will probably correct any tendency to a rachitic condition.

WHY BURN STRAW STACKS?

When with the use of suitable chemicals they can be converted into manure and question "Why burn straw stacks?" is really pertinent. Straw is worth something more than as a bedding material, and not the least valuable is its use for the making of artificial manure. The use of 100 pounds of ammonium sulphate and 100 lbs. of lime to each ton of straw, and this thoroughly soaked with water, produces a manure of distinct fertiliser value. From three to four months are required for the organic changes to become effective and the resultant substance has much of the appearance and practically the same value as barnyard manure.

POTATOES FOR POULTRY

Farming increases in value as an occupation just in proportion to the extent to which incidental by-products can be marketed at a profit. Not only must the farmer sell all his good quality products at a fair price, but he must also find a market for as much as he can of the unsaleable product. It has been found that greater net profits per bird can be made and a finished bird of finer quality and flavor produced through crate-feeding on a ration of equal parts of middlings, rolled oats, boiled potatoes and skim-milk than in the case where cornmeal is fed. Potatoes, finely ground or boiled, are provided exceptionally good for finishing poultry, particularly when fed in conjunction with "milk" grains and milk. Crate-fed poultry offers a really attractive market outlet for cull potatoes.

FARMERS' MARKETING ASSOCIATIONS

Available records indicate that the most important early activity of farmers in the field of co-operation was directed towards the marketing of farm products, and today marketing associations, both in terms of places of business and total membership, outnumber farmers' purchasing associations by ten to one. In the matter of volume of business, marketing associations irrigated many times the business handled by purchasing agencies. Membership in the co-operative marketing associations officially reported to the Dominion Economics Branch numbered 318,597 persons, as compared with 30,546 members in purchasing organizations. The total annual business amounted to $136,025,004 for the marketing companies, compared with $7,278,950 for the purchasing group.

Interest in the co-operative purchasing of feedstuffs, equipment and supplies for the farm, however, dates far back to the early years of co-operative development in Canada. At Cobourg in York County, New Brunswick, the Harvey Farmers' Trading company started business in 1872 for the co-operative purchasing of feeds and general merchandise, and is still carrying on an active business. Very early in Saskatchewan's co-operative marketing history farmers organized for the collective buying of farm supplies. The company reporting earliest activities among those now operating is the Wauchope Co-operative Association, Limited, organized in 1906. Between 1908 and 1915, forty-one co-operative purchasing associations, which are still active, were formed and their number has steadily increased to over 200 associations. — Farmers' Business Organizations in Canada bulletin.

FISH MEALS AND LIVE STOCK

In the field of live stock feeding, fish meal has proven a rich source of nutrients. It is fed particularly for its protein and mineral content, and the percentage of these two ingredients determines its value. There are three factors which have retarded more widespread use of fish meal, says the Fish Meal and Oils bulletin, just issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. First, there is its rather high price in comparison with the price of other feeds; second, the lack of definite information regarding its use; and third, a variability in the product.

The feeding of fish meal has been confined largely to swine, but it has also been used successfully for dairy cattle, and in limited way for poultry and live stock. Growing market animals and milking cows seem best adapted to utilize efficiently fish meal and other high protein feeds combined with carbonaceous grains. Fish meal is relatively more valuable for rapid gains and high production than for maintenance. Skowness in fish meal may be included to advantage in the maintenance ration of breeding animals, but the percentage should be lower than that normally included in the growing ration.

FACTS ABOUT CHEESE

Cheese has been used as a food for man from prehistoric times and its manufacture is one of the oldest technical arts. In Canada the early French settlers brought the art of cheese making from France, and revival of this early industry being found at the present day in the Fromage Fraffine which is made in the Isle of Orleans. Over 100 years ago the United Empire Loyalists brought with them to various parts of Ontario, a knowledge of the manufacture of Cheddar type of cheese. This type is practically the only kind now made in Canadian cheese factories. All Canadian cheese was made on farms until the year 1864, when the first cheese factory was started in Oxford County, Ontario. In the following year another factory was opened in Missisquoi County, Quebec. The factory system has so many advantages that it was quickly adopted. There are now cheese factories in every province of Canada, but the greater part of Canadian factory cheese is produced in Ontario and Quebec.

SUPPLEMENTARY FUELS IN FARMING

In view of the growing practice of using supplementary motor fuels in farm tractors, with gasoline for farm and other machinery, the feasibility of using blended fuels in countries like Canada, in which low temperatures are encountered in winter, has been studied at the National Research Laboratories at Ottawa. This particular form of research is of special practical importance to the Dominion, and consequently the laboratories have determined the relation between water content and solution temperature of the various gasolene mixtures now in use or being tried out.

Owing to their availability, benzol and ethanol (ethyl alcohol) are in extensive use in the preparation of mixed motor fuels in which gasolene is the main constituent. Recent developments make it appear that isopropanol (isopropyl alcohol) can be manufactured cheaply from waste gases which are by-products of the petroleum industry, and it is not unlikely, says the Canadian Journal of Research, that in the near future this substance may become commercially available as a fuel.

A problem arises in connection with the use of mixed fuels containing ethanol, namely, the possibility of separation into two liquid phases upon the addition of relatively small amounts of water. At a given temperature any alcohol-gasoline mixture has what is known as a critical water content, and, conversely, any such mixture containing dissolved water has a critical solution or "cloud" temperature below which separation into two phases will occur.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

The second estimate of wheat production in the Prairie Provinces for 1934 is two million bushels lower than the previous estimate of 265 million bushels made on September 11th last.

In the Boys and Girls' Farm Clubs competition at the Royal Winter Fair, Ontario carried off the trophy in the Dairy Cattle project through the Markham Dairy Calf Club, and also the trophy in the Seed project through the Durham County Boys' Grain Club.

Grain Class Winners

The Grain Class open to Agricultural Societies at the recent Ottawa Winter Fair resulted in very keen competition among Societies in Eastern Ontario, where the production to high class grain has developed rapidly in recent years.

The purpose of the competition was to encourage the societies to stimulate the production of different kinds of high class seed grain by its members.

The Renfrew Agricultural Society was awarded first position, with a total of 480 points of a possible 500. The lots of peas, barley, alfalfa and oats each scored over 90%, while fall rye fell slightly below this high standard.

The leading Societies were placed as follows:

1st. Renfrew Society, 480 points.
2nd. Fakenham Society, 439 pts.
3rd. Carp Society, 434 points.
4th. Yankleek Hill Society, 422 pts.
5th. Drummond Society, 420 points.

Burning Stubble

When stubble has been burned off and the land again seeded, after a minimum amount of cultivation, the yields of grain have proven this method to be superior to any other treatment. Objections to the burning are the loss of nitrogen, loss of moisture, and some loss of soil fertility; while supposing the practice are weed control, clean crop and convenience.

Preparing Turkeys

Turkey growers are now beginning to finish or fatten their birds for the christmas trade. It is customary to begin the process of preparing the luscious turkeys for the nation's festive dinner tables by feeding them small amounts of grain which readily are increased until the birds are on full feed. Due to the large supply of wheat available, it is unlikely that there will be any shortage in the fattening ration. Wheat has nearly the same fattening qualities as corn, but does not produce the rich yellow color of flesh that yellow corn does. It is important, however, that all grains be free from moldiness and they should be fed to hoppers to counteract certain diseases that cause heavy loss. Do not confine turkeys for fattening especially if they have been run on a range, for range birds cannot stand confinement.

32 Boys' and Girls' Farm Teams Competed at the Royal Fair

In the annual National Club Contests in connection with the Boys' and Girls' Farm Club movement, thirty-two club teams of two members each, representing all of the Provinces of the Dominion, competed in several live stock and field crops projects at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto, last week. The actual contests were conducted on November 30 and the sixty-four contestants remained in Toronto until Friday evening, November 30, visiting the Royal Winter Fair and other points of interest under the direction of the Canadian Council of Boys' and Girls' Club workers. These clubs teams earned the right to compete in Toronto by winning their respective provincial elimination contests.

An unusual feature of these contests was the inclusion of an oral examination with a judging competition to form the complete contest, each of the projects included in the national contest program. After several years' experience, it is felt that this form of contest has provided an opportunity to measure the general ability and knowledge of the contestants, and, in turn, has the effect of encouraging, on the part of all club members, more thorough study of the projects in hand.

During 1934 there have a total of 1544 fully organized boys' and girls' farm clubs in Canada with a total membership of 29,709 members. The projects undertaken include a variety of farm activities under the general headings of live stock, poultry, field crops and home economics. The results which are being obtained are significant and it is widely recognized that this junior club work has far, much economic and educational importance.

Clean Nests, Clean Eggs

It takes less time to place clean straw in the nests than it takes to clean eggs. Some eggs will become dirty in spite of the best of care; but dry egg cleaning work is greatly reduced if the nests are cleaned at egg gathering time when dirt is noticed and a little clean straw is added once or twice each week. This is a good early morning job before the hens start using the nests. If you have no straw stack, keep a bale of straw in each laying house so that a handful or loose straw can be worked up and added by handfuls to any nests where the boards are becoming bare or the straw is soiled.

Cheap Feeds for Crate Finishing of Poultry

In experiments in crate finishing of poultry, it has been found that buckwheat screenings or standard recleaned screenings, a by-product from the grain elevators combining largely of wild buckwheat and brake when mixed with a small admixture of wild oats, flaxseed and other weed seeds, give excellent results both as to quantity and quality of flesh. It was also shown in these experiments that small unmarketable potatoes may be used to advantage in crate feeding. Fed in conjunction with home-grown grain, these potatoes gave the economical gains and produced better colour and finer quality in skin and flesh. The potatoes may be fed either boiled and mashed, or raw and finely chopped, and mixed with the ground grains and milk.

Winter Care of Live Stock

With the approach of winter, farmers should make sure that the barns in which their stock are to pass the cold months are clean and free from possible infectious diseases or parasites. Most cattlemen whitewash their stables at least once ayear, but frequent dustings with an old broom are needed to keep the cobwebs and dust down. Before the cattle leave the pastures for the season, it is good practice to inspect the whole herd for possible skin diseases as ring-worm, and for mange, lice or warbles, are dangerous and each needs special treatment. Ringworm is quite contagious because humans may contract it through handling or from currycombs and brushes. A mixture of iodine applied daily following washing with soap and water will cure ring-worm, but scabies or mange need to be dipped or sprayed with special solutions such as crude petroleum or equal parts of kerosene and cottonseed oil, which mixture is also recommended for lice. No animal can give its best milk production or put on flesh when feeding such parasites.

Current Crop Report

Mild weather in November resulted in many farmers leaving their stock out, thus saving considerable roughage and relieving the feed shortage situation. It has also enabled farmers to complete their fall work under favorable conditions. Two maple sugars growers in South Simcoe have been forced to market their crops because of having inadequate storage facilities. This results in an overa supply on the market and depressed prices. Buyers in Toronto are offering as high as $1.00 to $1.15 bus. for Durham wheat. Potato sales in Frontenac are fairly heavy, with prices ranging from 80c to 60c a bag. Two carloads of cattle have been exported from Grenville to the U. S. A., with up to $100 being paid for accredited and blood-stamped cattle just freshened. Close to 70,000 lbs. box-packed government apples dressed poultry were shipped out of Prescott and Russell, last week. Grade cows in Middlesex have been selling at $30 to $35 for best individuals and down to $12 to $15 for common kinds, and good commercial purebred cows at $50 to $75 each.

A Remarkable Holstein

A 13-year-old Holstein cow that on November 23rd gave birth to her 13th lively calf and that has in her lifetime produced 107,750 lbs. of milk and 4,395 pounds of butter, is something worth while to talk about and much more worth while to see.

This is the record of Colantha Tottilla O.A.C. 111839 G.M., a cow bred at the O.A.C., Guelph and still in the college herd along with seven of her own daughters. Three times she has borne twin calves and seven times, single calves.

Colantha Tottilla represents several generations of college breeding. Her sire, Sir Paul Colanthus, was former herd sire at the O.A.C. and was a double grandson of the famous Jundation cow, Pauline Colantha Posch. Her dam was a college bred cow, Tottilla Rue II, with a four-year-old record of 15,233 pounds of milk and 554 pounds of butter fat, and was sired by Johana Rue IV's Lad.

This cow is a splendid example of a combination of production and reproduction. She and her offspring will be much in evidence in the demonstrations during the agricultural conference and short course at the college, January 2nd to 11th, when scores of Ontario's best young farmers will convene to discuss their problems and to enjoy ten days of real college life.

Meal Mixtures for Pigs in Winter

For pigs newly weaned and up to four months of age the following meal mixture is recommended by the Animal Husbandry Department:—

Middlings, 3 parts; oats, 2 parts; shorts, 1 part; bran ½ part. Three pounds of skim-milk or buttermilk per pound of mealmixture should be fed at this stage.

The following meal mixture is recommended when the pigs are between four and five months old:— shorts, 2 parts; oats, 2 parts; barley, ½ parts; bran ½ part. With one pound of this mixture feed two pounds of skim-milk or buttermilk. From this time the pigs are five months old and weigh about 150 pounds, up to market weight, they may be fed the following finishing ration; shorts, 1 part; oats, 2 parts; barley, 2 parts. With one pound of this mixture, feed two and one-half pounds of skim-milk or buttermilk.

Hydro To Foster Rural Power Use

Toronto. — The Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission announced that a survey to forward rural power districts showed that even on existing power lines only a few farm homes have any advantage in obtaining Hydro service advantages. The Commission also announced that negotiations with Hydro service were using only a small portion of its possibilities and the Commission plans to develop this power market.

Paper Says Girls Sold Into Slavery

Jerusalem. — The Arabic newspaper Falastin said, recently it had learned that nine young girls, daughters of Fedouin tribesmen, were "leased" for domestic service at the rate of $10 a year, to be paid to the parents. The "rental" virtually sells the girls into slavery, the paper said, for a five-year period.

The activities of an alleged "girl broker" are being investigated by police authorities, and also a search is being made for the whereabouts of the "rented" young women, the Falastin said.

The publication named a man who it said, tried to obtain 50 girls at $10 a year "to be used in domestic service in the cities" in the Arab village of Wadi Hamam.

Under the terms of the alleged contract, parents who "lease" their daughters in this manner agree to pay $100 damages if they demand the return of their children before the end of the five-year period.

Chinese Police Snip Off Queues of All Who Disobey

Shanghai. — The recent order issued by Nanking that the wearing of queues and the custom of binding the feet of girl children must be discontinued immediately, has been literally taken to heart by the authorities of Talan, in Shantung Province, according to letters received in Shanghai from missionaries stationed in this region.

All police officers, especially those stationed at the gates of the city, have been armed with shears and orders have been issued to the effect that if the mandate against the wearing of queues is not voluntarily obeyed, the policemen are to enforce it. In several cases the police have not given the offender a chance to dispose of his queue himself, but have snipped off the offending braid with practically no ceremony whatsoever.

Although the order against the binding of the feet of girl children is explicit enough, the missionaries of Talan express a certain amount of pessimism as to its effective enforcement. Both an old custom dies slowly, especially in the more remote districts, where the magistrates and those in charge are more in sympathy with the peasants and the ear-old women than they are with what they consider "new-fangled" innovations.

The order against foot-binding also states that women under the age of 30 whose feet have been bound must take off the wrappings and allow their feet to develop naturally. This part of the order has been practically disregarded in the country districts.

ENGLISHMAN LIKES MORE COLOR IN HIS SHIRTS

The Englishman likes his shirts with more color in them than Canadians, judging by reports on demand for shirts in the United Kingdom. Canadians prefer more white in the ground of the cloth and self-colors, while the United Kingdom self-colors are considered out of date. The English buyers want cloth of from 60 to70 per cent color and from 30 to 40 per cent white. In Canada the proportions are reversed. The taste in the United Kingdom is distinctly against French prints. Ninety per cent of the shirts sold in the United Kingdom are on pattern, the remaining portion being on the feel of the cloth. They, however, like the set of Canadian soft collars, due, it is though, to the setting of the button-hole.

The Englishman is very conservative as to his underdressing, not caring much to change the style. The demand for bathing suits is increasing, due to the large number of fine swimming pools that have been constructed in the last three, or four years.

Several were present at Newburgh on Tuesday evening of last week to hear the Virginia Jubilee Singers, and report a very nice concert.

Mr. Albert Donald has been on the sick list.

What might easily have been a fatal accident occurred on Friday morning, when Mr. William McKeown, of Thompsonville, who is employed at the mill here, fell into a tank of hot water. McKeown, with several others were pushing a jacket around a tank of water tank at the rear of the mill. This tank is the source of hot water supply for the beaters and stands perhaps twelve feet high, and is open at the top. Several boards had been placed across the top of the tank, and McKeown walked out on one of the boards, slipped on some ice, and fell, the weight of his body breaking the board on which he was standing and letting him fall into the hot water below. The board broke his fall, however, and he was not completely immersed in the water, but had it not been for the prompt assistance of Marshall Buck, who seized him and helped him out, there is little doubt but that the unfortunate workman would have been fatally scalded. As it was, he was quite badly scalded in several places, and after having been given first aid treatment by Dr. Mouore, was removed to his home, where he is progressing as well as can be expected.

At the Sunday School last Sunday Mrs. Jas. Wilson gave a temperance address, and presented the pupils with prizes who wrote on temperance examinations. Final Session Council Winds Up Business---Prepares for Election

Only 103 Persons Receive Relief in Town

The Town Council met on Monday evening for the last session in 1934. Mayor Tustin presided and all members, except Councillors Masters, were present.

Following the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, the Clerk read a communication from Canadian Performing Rights Society concerning the use of copyright music in the Town Hall. Following discussion, in which the general opinion was voiced that the Town Council had no responsibility in the matter, the letter was ordered filed.

Colonel H. LeRoy Babcock appeared before the Council, to ask that the town assist the local company of the Frontenac Regiment to the extent of $17.00, in paying the expenses incurred on Remembrance Day. On motion of Messrs. Wilson and Cowling, the request was granted.

Deputy Reeve Wilson read a statement of expenditures by the Treasurer since the last meeting, amounting to $23.08.83. On motion a voucher for the amount was granted the treasurer.

Councillor Cowling, reporting for the Fire, Water and Light Committee, advised that the matter of purchasing an auxiliary pump for fire protection, be left over until next year. The recommendation was accepted by the Council.

Parks Committee Report

Councillor Exley, on behalf of the Parks Committee, reported that the committee had employed Fraser Aylsworth, a licensed civil engineer to survey the line between Springside Park and the property of the Rev. L. M. Sharp. The result of the survey showed that a portion of the building erected by Mr. Sharp is on town property. The committee made a recommendation, which was endorsed by the Council, that Mr. Sharp be asked to vacate or pay a rental suitable to the town.

Reeve Hughson presented the Chief of Police's report covering the months ending ... The report included: Doors found unfastened, 201; open pumps unfastened, 34; calls to accidents, 66; cars stolen and recovered, 5; bicycles, 7; summons served, 126; arrests, 47; transients given protection, 2855; fines and costs collected, $521.15.

A summary of police court cases showed 40 were under the criminal code, 25 liquor control act cases, highway traffic act, 19.

The Chief of Police also advised that he had received notice that all persons in the town of Napanee possessing revolvers, whether in good or bad condition, must register the possession of same with him after January 1st, 1935. A penalty not exceeding $50.00 may be exacted for failure to comply with the regulation.

163 Persons on Relief

Councillor Exley, chairman of Welfare, reported that at the present time there are 27 heads of families on relief, with 73 dependents. In addition there are three individuals making a total of 103 persons on relief in Napanee. To date 12½ cords of wood have been used for relief purposes.

A by-law was presented and given its several readings and finally passed, naming polling places, deputy-returning officers and clerks, for the coming municipal elections.

A local improvement by-law, to provide for the issuance of debentures to the amount of $2,550 to cover the building of cement walks, was given its several readings and passed.

After passing of accounts, Council adjourned.

Saturday's Market

The market on Saturday was comparatively small. The usual vegetables were offered for sale. A good quantity of poultry was shown and several lots of beef and pork by the quarter. Ducks sold at 25 cents each, turkeys at 18 and 20 cents per pound. Eggs were 35c per dozen. Beef sold at 7 cents for hind quarters, and pork at 13 cents for fronts and 14 cents for hinds.

Christmas Spirit Pervades Town Hall

The Council Chamber is a busy place these days. Every afternoon twenty or thirty women, under the trained eye of Miss Leamy, are diligently and energetically working. Packages that have been carefully stored away are brought forth and their contents counted, sorted and classified. Then they are arranged in neat little piles, each designed for some particular child in the town.

Long before this, much preliminary work has had to be done. Homes have had to be visited by volunteer workers, who took the names and ages of the children. Then a brief note was made of the particular need of each child. The boys may need sweaters or warm shoes and stockings — the girls may need wraps, mufflers or warm woollens. Every child of the three hundred who will be cared for by the Santa Claus Fund is treated separately and individually. Each gets the gifts that he or she particularly needs.

Then, of course, in addition to all this, a stocking is prepared. In it are nuts, candy, some fruit, and a toy. But that is not all. Every family in the whole town, who is in need at all, is provided with a Christmas dinner—a roast of meat, potatoes, can of canned goods, a pound butter, few turnips or other vegetables. The dinner is prepared according to the size of the family.

Then when these are all packaged, labelled and laid out in proper order, the members of the Rotary Club come to the Town Hall with a truck, on Christmas Eve, and see that they are delivered to their proper homes.

If anyone wants to see a bee hive of unselfish industry, there should be seen over the Town Hall any afternoon this week and take a look in the Council Chamber.

(Sgd.) R. HUMPHREY

The committee who had charge of the Rotary Club Frolic this year, desire to take this opportunity to express appreciation for the splendid support given by all citizens of the district. It is very gratifying that the Club's activity of aiding children throughout the County can be continued to such an extent.

Drama Group Presents Christmas Programme

Enthusiastic Meeting at Superior Banquet Hall

The banquet hall of the Superior Restaurant was well filled on Friday evening, for the December open meeting of the Napanee Drama Group. Enthusiastic support is being given the society in its efforts to present programmes, each month, of high literary and musical quality. The program for this month, in keeping with the season, had a decidedly Christmas flavor. Dicken's immortal story, "The Christmas Carol," in an abridged version, was read by Rev. Harry Pearce. The familiar tale, interpreted in a delightfully expressive manner by Mr. Pearce, held the close attention of the audience from beginning to end. To many, who heard it again for the first time in years, it had the same charm as on first reading.

In addition to the reading, several musical numbers were given, which lent variety and interest to the program. The first selection was a pianoforte duet, "Birthday Suite," by Robins, played by Mrs. J. E. Madden and Mrs. Myers. Mrs. Madden's ability as a musician is well known and much appreciated by Napanee audiences.

Mrs. Myers, who has not appeared on a program in Napanee for some time past, was again heard with considerable pleasure.

The ladies' trio, under the direction of Mrs. J. E. Madden, sang three carols, "Angels O'er the Fields" an old French carol arranged by C. P. Manning; "The Virgin's Slumber Song," by Max Reger; "While Shepherds Watched," by Mary B. Piersol. The trio is composed of Mrs. H. Donohue, Mrs. W. A. Templeton, Mrs. Zender. Misses R. Graham, E. Taylor, Muriel Wilson, F. Hall, M. Garrison, Elizabeth Madden, Harriett Madden, M. Nolan, O. McMillan.

Master Harold Zender's singing of "The Gift," melted the hearts applause given by the audience. As an encore he sang "The Slumber Boat" by Jessie Gaynor.

The program was brought to a close by Mrs. P. Cameron Wilson, who played as a violin solo, "Liebesleid," by Fritz Kreisler.

Every number throughout the performance made a distinct contribution to the enjoyment of the evening.

After the program, refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour followed.

Ladies' Trio At Rotary Luncheon

The regular Tuesday luncheon meeting of the Napanee Rotary Club, the ladies' trio, under the direction of Mrs. J. E. Madden, provided the entertainment and were guests of the club. The singers gave several numbers, and Mrs. Myers also assisted in the programme.

At the close of the meeting the Venerable Archdeacon Dumbrille expressed the pleasure of the Club to the ladies, for their enjoyable programme.

Bank of Canada Will Begin Operations On March 1st

Ottawa — Millions of dollars in currency will soon be running off the presses of two bank note companies in Ottawa, to replace the present notes in circulation. They have staffs working at extra shifts getting ready the new notes for the Bank of Canada.

Under the Act the bank has to have a supply of currency adequate to all needs and for this preparations are being made.

The statute provides that the notes may be in either language—English or French. As required, consequently, the supplies are being printed in each language, but the bills are not bilingual.

The bank, it is announced, will start to function on March 1. When it does the Dominion one and two dollar bills will be called in at once, and substituted for them will be the currency of like denomination of the new bank. Gradually, as provided under the Act, the notes of the chartered banks will disappear and be replaced by the bills of the central bank, although this process will take about ten years.

Rev. Father McCarthy Read Parish, Retires

After half a century of faithful service in his parish at Read, Rev. Father Thomas McCarthy has tendered his resignation. It will take effect on January 6, 1935, at which time it is expected that an appointment to the parish will be made.

Rev. Father McCarthy, known throughout the section by friends of all denominations, is the second oldest priest in the diocese in point of service. The oldest is the Very Rev. Monsignor M. McDonald of Napanee. Father McCarthy holds a record for the diocese in serving at Read over a period of fifty years. During that time he earned the love of all with whom he came in contact, not only his own members of the parish, but the whole community.

Following the date on which his resignation takes effect, Rev. McCarthy will travel south, where he will enjoy a well earned rest.

Next week's Beaver will be delivered the day after Christmas. We take this opportunity therefore, of extending to all our readers and families and advertisers, our sincerest wishes for a Merry Christmas.

We are not unmindful of the difficulties with which many of our people are faced. If we were thinking in terms of material prosperity, our wishes might seem like hollow mockery. The prices are still low, unemployment is still a nightmare for many, and public relief is the only means by which estimable citizens are able to sustain life. But a Merry Christmas doesn't depend solely on material possessions. During the past few weeks, all over the world, men and women have been concentrating their efforts on making children happy. Parents, Churches, Service Clubs and Newspapers have given themselves to the task of bringing joy into the lives of others, and in doing so, they have found the secret of securing happiness for themselves. Seeking to make others happy we have forgotten our own handicaps and have had little time to nurse our sorrows or to grumble at our lot.

Our wish for you all is that your Christmas be a Merry one in the joy which comes from the privelege of making others happy.

No Provincial Police In Prince Edward County

There will be no appointment made to provide a resident provincial police in Prince Edward County, replacing Constable W. M. Durnford, recently moved to Kingston, it was announced by the commissioner of the County Council, Thursday.

Officer John Kelly, High Constable of Hastings County, will also have charge of Prince Edward County. Constable Kelly can be reached at Belleville, at any time.

In case of his being unable to come over, some other prominent officer stationed at Belleville will always be available.

Three Young Girls Gather Collection Santa Claus Fund

On Saturday three young girls, Katherine Weiss, Leonore Valkman, and Helen Degroff spent the evening in going about the residential part of the town, singing Christmas carols and taking a collection for The Beaver Santa Claus Fund.

Their efforts were undoubtedly appreciated for, on Monday, they turned over to the fund, the sum of $7.05. The result was three fold. The girls had a fine time, the people were entertained and the Santa Claus Fund benefited to the extent of the above amount.

Presentation Made To Miss Wilson By Ladies' Trio

Miss Muriel Wilson was given a farewell party at the Paisley House, on Monday evening, with Mrs. Victor Zender as hostess. The guests were the members of the ladies' trio, to which Miss Wilson belongs.

After some music and a game of bridge, delicious refreshments were served in the private dining room.

Miss Wilson was presented with a gold compact, by Mrs. Madden, on behalf of the ladies of the trio and as a souvenir of her association with them. After Miss Wilson had thanked the friends, Mrs. Madden was presented with a Christmas gift, with the thanks of the trio, for all her interest in their training. Master Harold Zender made the presentation.

The party ended, appropriately, with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Trinity United Church Men's Club Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Men's Club of Trinity United Church, was held in the dining hall of the church on Thursday evening, December 13th, and was served at 6:30 p.m.

Mr. W. D. Graham acted as chairman and conducted a short program which followed the supper. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Wilson Moore, minister of Bethuam Street United Church, at Kingston. He gave an interesting address on "Wales."

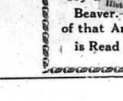
Mr. Clark is, himself a Welshman and was consequently able to give in intimate picture of the Welsh and their country. He told something of the history of the race and gave a description of the loveliness of the scenery of Wales. In talking of the characteristics of the people, he said they are noted for their religious fervor, their love of music and their courtesy. As a race they have kept their own language and many of the customs of former days.

The chairman expressed to Mr. Clark the thanks of the club for his most entertaining address.

Arrangements Made For Quintuplet Broadcast

Final arrangements have been completed for the broadcast from the Dafoe Hospital at Callander, Ont., on December 20th, at 8.15 p.m. which will be heard over CKAC, Montreal, and the Columbia network of about 80 stations. Though some difficulty had been encountered in bringing the "Quints" to the air, it is now expected that not only the babies, but their physician, Dr. A. Roy Dafoe and the nurses, will be heard. The parents and guardians, Elzire Dionne, grandfather, and W. H. Alderson and G. K. Morrison, will also broadcast.

The program has been timed to give the radio audience an intimate glimpse into the routine that is necessary in the little hospital where the babies live. The Quintuplets will face the specially sterilized microphone just before their evening meal, so that when they are on the air they should be wide awake, full of kicks and willing to express themselves vocally to their great audience.



He Said He Didn't Care

He was only five. He had been childishly disobedient, and when his mother suggested that Santa Claus might pass him by, he said, he didn't care. But that night, when she tucked him in he relented, and as he smothered down the sobs he told her that he really did care. He said he would be ever so good if only Santa Claus would come.

Poor little tyke, he was only five, and had wanted a scooter for the longest time. Do you really think he'll come, he asked wistfully. "Yes, yes he'll not forget" she said as she snuggled him down for the night and kissed his tear stained cheek. But in her heart of hearts she wondered. Father out of work, two other children, relief only sufficient to keep them alive and warm. Over and over again that night she said to herself, "he said he didn't care". But she knew that he cared and that he hoped and wished.

Of course Santa will not forget if you dear readers will help Out of your abundance why not make a contribution to the Beaver Santa Claus Fund. Bring or send it to the Beaver Office, no gift too small to be acceptable, no gift too large to be administered equally well. If you send a check make it pay able to "The Beaver Santa Claus Fund."

Over 13 Tons Poultry At Last Week's Fair

Excellent Quality of Fowl Offered

Between thirteen and fourteen tons of poultry were sold in Napanee on Friday, the second poultry fair for this season. In addition to the Lennox and Addington Poultry Pool purchases were made by representatives of Gatehouse, A & P Stores, T. Eaton Company, and United Poultry Company, of Montreal.

The prevailing prices paid by the independent buyers were 19 cents for turkey and 16 cents for chicken, for best grades. The pool posted the prices received from the sale of most of the produce bought at the previous fair days, in November. The prices were: Chicken, milkfed A, 20; Milkfed B, 18; Select A, 16; Select B, 16; Select C, 13. Turkeys, A, 17½... B, 15½... C, 12½. Geese, 11, 9 and 7 cents. Ducks, 13, 11 and 9 cents. Fowl, 14, 12 and 9 cents.

Executives of the pool were of the opinion that a better price would be obtained for the fowl bought last week.

Again at this fair, the quality of the fowl was extra good. Turkeys were fairly plentiful and came in fine condition. William Graham, of Forest Mills, sold one lot, among the best seen this year. There were 44 turkeys in the load, averaging 14 pounds. all this year's production.

The T. Eaton Company purchased a fine load of 82 chickens, weighing 348 pounds, from Mrs. T. H. Shane, R. R. No. 7, Napanee.

The pool purchased a little more than three tons of all kinds:

Chicken, Milkfed	A	606 lbs.
Chicken, Milkfed	B	1595 lbs.
Chicken, Select Special	A	217 lbs.
Chicken Select Special	B	1496 lbs.
Chicken, Select Special	C	327 lbs.
Pullets	A	138 lbs.
Pullets	B	145 lbs.
Fowl, Select Special	A	350 lbs.
Fowl, Select Special	B	640 lbs.
Fowl, Select Special	C	74 lbs.
Turkeys, young hens	A	212 lbs.
Turkeys, young hens	B	172 lbs.
Turkeys, young hens	C	41 lbs.
Turkeys, young toms	A	392 lbs.
Turkeys, young toms	B	258 lbs.

Turkeys, old hens	A	47 lbs.
Turkeys, old hens	B	25 lbs.
Turkeys, old hens	C	9 lbs.
Turkeys, old toms	A	21 lbs.
Geese, all grades		220 lbs.

The balance of the tonnage was bought by the independent buyers.

The total weight purchased at the two fairs, this year, was approximately 45 tons.

Mayor Tustin Banquets Councillors and Officials Before Final Meeting

Annual Meeting L. & A. Plowmen's Association Held

The annual meeting of the Lennox and Addington Plowmen's Association was held in the Agricultural Boardrooms on Saturday afternoon, December 8th. The president, W. H. Hunter, occupied the chair.

Mr. Hunter, in asking that he be relieved of the position of president, stated that he would still take an active interest in the Association. He has been president for a number of years and one of the foremost men in promoting the work of the Association and the many matches held on his farm were evidence of his support and loyalty. The match held on October 27th of this year, was one of the most successful ever held in the County. Thirty contestants took part in the various classes and competition in each class was very keen.

Officers Elected

The election of officers resulted as follows :—

Honorary Presidents—T. G. Bowman, M.P.P., John Wesse, M.P., Colin Campbell, M.P.; and W. H. Hunter.

President—T. D. Creighton.

1st Vice-President— Ralph Aylsworth.

2nd Vice-President—Fred H. Henderson.

Secretary-Treasurer—C. W. Buchanan.

Directors— Messrs. George Sampson, Russ Miller, J. S. Johnson, Thomas Chalmers, J. B. Elliott, Thomas Craven, Harold Groome, William Yankoughnet, Milton Martin, Arthur VanLuven.

Considerable discussion took place with reward to the possibilities of having the Provincial Plowing Match in the County. This would necessarily mean considerable work and preparations would have to be made at least a year ahead. This is one of the largest agricultural events in the province, which is held alternately in the Eastern and Western parts of the province. The 1935 match will be held in the western part of the province.

Board of Review Personnel Named By E. N. Rhodes

Ottawa. — Announcement of the appointment of a Board of Review for Ontario as provided in the Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act, was made today by Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes, who administers the act.

Chairman of the new board is Mr. Justice John A. Hope of the Supreme Court of Ontario, High Court Division. Lieut.-Col. Byron Malcolm Green of Toronto, will represent the creditors, and Duncan Sinclair, of Harriston, the debtors. John R. Rumball, barrister, of Toronto, has been appointed Registrar.

The Board of Review will function in cases where official receivers are unable to arrive at a decision. Official receivers in Ontario have been united upon to handle a large number of cases, and already, it is understood, there are quite a number for the review board. It will begin

Napanee Balances Budget Despite Reduced Rate

On Monday evening preceding the final meeting of the Town Council for 1934, Mayor Tustin entertained the Councillors and Officials of the Town at a dinner in the Paisley House.

About thirty men attended the dinner, including the Councillors, the Town Clerk, Treasurer, Tax Collector, Assessor, the members of the Public Utilities Commission, Board of Health, the managers of Public Utilities, Mr. Harry B. Williams, Chief Watts, Constable Cook and representatives of the press.

Mr. W. A. Grange, who has held the position of town clerk for thirty years, was chairman. He spoke, in his opening remarks, of the improvements he had seen made in the town during his tenure of office. Considering all the advantages we enjoy in Napanee, the town is in good financial condition. The auditors, Mr. Grange said, gave us a good bill of health. Many towns in Ontario are practically in the receiver's hands. But Napanee has not defaulted in payment of either principal or interest on the debenture debt. The debt is gradually being paid and the credit of the town is good in the bond market.

Mayor Tustin to Seek Second Term

Mayor Tustin welcomed his guests and expressed to the members of the council and the town officials his appreciation of their co-operating during the year. He announced his intention of seeking a second term as mayor.

Dr. Morden, speaking on the town finances, felt it was an achievement to have reduced the town's tax rate to 2½ mills during the past year. With the finances in such good condition he thought there was the possibility of a further reduction. He was of the opinion that the question of tax arrears would have to be dealt with very soon. While not making any public announcement, Dr. Morden intimated to the representative of The Beaver, his intention of running for Deputy-Reeve at the next election.

Mr. M. P. Graham, the town treasurer, gave a statement of receipts, expenditures and assets and liabilities, up to but not including the final meeting of the Council.

A part of the statement follows :—

Relief Expense Lower in 1934

In commenting on the statement, Mr. Graham expressed the opinion that the town was in a very favorable financial position. The tax arrears, he said, were higher than at the same time last year, but will be materially reduced in a very short time, all the various committees have kept fairly close to their appropriations. Social Welfare expenditure was much lower than last year. The total for 1933 was over $10,000, of which the government paid one half, leaving the full payment from the town treasury about $5,000. The payment for relief in 1934, of $1813 u p to December 17, is consequently about half last year's expenditure, and represents less than one mill of the tax rate.

Mr. J. H. Moffatt and Mr. W. T. Cowling spoke briefly, each crediting Public Utilities. Mr. Mackenzie announced his intention to seek re-election as a commissioner.

Deputy Reeve F. C. Wilson voiced the opinion that the date of payment of taxes should gradually be advanced, as a means of doing away with being obliged to pay interest to the banks on money borrowed to help finance. Mr. Graham, after discussing the matter briefly, replied that the plan could not be carried out without special enabling government legislation.

Dr. J. B. Willoughby, representing the Board of Health, said the town was fortunate in having so few infectious diseases during the year. A survey of the milk supply showed it graded very high.

"ON EARTH PEACE TO MEN OF GOOD - WILL"

"To Men of Good - Will" — The promise which ushered in the first Christmas came strangely enough to a little nation which, for two hundred years, had suffered from the intrigues of ambitious rulers, from wars, counter wars, and revolutions. Since the time of th Macabees, Palestine had been drenched with the blood of its own best citizens, as bitterness and party strife had been stimulated by selfish and self-seeking leaders. Herod, the worst of them all, had slashed right and left in a wholesale attempt to blot out all opposition. He was responsible for the death of his own wife, his own uncle and two of his grandchildren, while thousands of others were sacrificed, to sustain him in office.

But hope, which springs eternal in the heart, refused to be quenched even by such overmastering and brutal methods as those of the Herods. The people wistfully looked forward to the coming of One who would redeem them from all this bloodshed, carnage and uncertainty. More than anything else, PEACE was what they desired—the right to live their lives in quietness and contentment, to till their tiny bit of soil, to sing their songs of Zion, to worship their own God in their own way, and to bring up their children according to their own best traditions. The Christmas message heralded the possibility of all that. No wonder angels sang!

Of course it was a long time before men came to realize that peace was not to drop from heaven, ready-made — but that it depended on the cultivation of the good will in the hearts of men and women who seek it. Now, as then, that is the feature of the Christmas message we need to understand and cherish. Peace on earth is attainable only to men and women who possess the good will.

In an address at Ottawa, on Saturday, Hon. W. D. Herridge, Canada's representative at Washington, suggested that men, today, need to make business less a religion, and religion more of a business, that we all must seek to trust less our economists and more our spiritual leaders, which is a trite way of saying that even men of the world, whose activities bring them into closest contact with international problems and force them to take a realistic view of life, are aware of the need for, in our modern life, of a power which will create and sustain, in men, the spirit of good will.

Given men of good will, nothing is impossible. Good will in the home will maintain all the fine fellowships which only the home can provide. Good will in the world will soon change the whole atmosphere of its life. Good will in business would immediately get rid of all the brutal cut-throat competition which marks its progress to-date. Good will in the governments would soon eliminate wars, and establish peace and happiness on earth.

When Good Will becomes the directing force in the councils of men, the Christmas message will become a reality.

REGULATION OF BUSINESS

Premier Bennett speaking at the annual banquet of the Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association, on Saturday, spoke freely and definitely about the necessity of government regulation of business. Of course, there is nothing new in that proposal. For government has always, to some extent, regulated business. The old theory that the government must keep its hands off business, has not held in Canada, for a long time. To be sure, as the Premier points out, the depression has shown the need for further regulation and for a closer supervision of the practices of the men and organizations which conduct the business of the country.

The Prime Minister came out very frankly for capitalism, but for capitalism which shall be more carefully controlled and supervised than has been true of it in the past. This, it seems to us at this stage of the world's economic development, is the only safe and sane method to pursue. It is true that, under the stress which the war and the subsequent upheaval placed upon the capitalistic organization of society, it has come very near to the breaking point. It has failed to meet the stress which these new conditions have imposed upon it. Great institutions of wealth have crashed, bringing misery and poverty to countless thousands. The credit structure of business has been tried and found wanting. In the face of unlimited supplies of food, thousands go hungry. While all this is true, and admitting all the weaknesses and inadequacies of the present system, yet it would be sheer madness to wreck the machine until we have evolved for it a better. It is the consideration of any historic movement, we must discipline ourselves to take a long view. It is difficult to even visualize a form of economic organization which shall prevail a hundred years from now. It may be Socialism, it may be Communism, it may be Fascism. The course for this generation to pursue is to recognize the necessity for a change, and by eliminating the abuses of the present system, making business the servant of the people and not the people the slaves of the system, move forward gradually and orderly into whatever the future may have in store.

The value of the Premier's statements lies not in any new suggestions, nor in any promise of a panacea for the world's ills, but in his willingness to face the possibility of alternative forms of economic structure, in a quiet and reasonable manner. A few years ago, no man in public life in Canada, and least of all a Prime Minister, would even have dreamed of discussing with commercial travellers the comparative merits of Capitalism, Socialism and Communism. That it is being done today, by one who is, himself, interested in large business enterprises, is a great gain, and speaks well for the generosity and unselfishness, and sanity of our leaders.

THE MILK SITUATION

The current issue of "The Canadian Forum" carries a letter from George Keen, the secretary of the Co-operative Committee on Milk Control, which should be given a wide circulation among farmers and those who are interested in the production and distribution of milk. The letter shows, in a marked way, the difficulty which faces any attempt on the part of farmers, to secure better prices for their products. We often speak of the farmer as an individualist and of the difficulty of effecting co-operation among them. But when they do sink their individuality, as they have done in the Hamilton district, and establish a co-operative society for the production and distribution of milk, they find the whole force of the government directed against their efforts.

Two years ago a co-operative dairy was started in Hamilton. In that time it has grown until it now ranks as the third largest dairy in Hamilton. Last year, the dairy paid union wages to the employees; paid 7% on capital investment; increased the price paid producers by 2%, and returned to the consumer 2% of the amount they had paid for milk during the year.

At this point the Milk Board steps in and says that the Co-operative Dairy must not return any of the profits to the consumers. This is certainly a most arbitrary ruling. It reveals, as nothing else has done in our province for a long time, how difficult it is even for men charged with honest administration of an act, to get away from the idea that profits for shareholders must take precedence over the needs of the people. We would respectfully suggest that the members of the Milk Board should study the Insurance Act, which permits mutual insurance companies to do the very thing which the co-operative dairies are attempting to do in Hamilton. We have, in Ontario, mutual life assurance companies and mutual fire insurance companies. The profits of these companies, after all provisions for safety have been taken, are returned to the policy holders in the form of lower rates or increased benefits.

In Great Britain, which has the largest co-operative selling organization in the world, outside Russia, the method which has been their policy ever since their inception, is the very policy which the Milk Board is disallowing in Hamilton. In Britain, after the books of the co-operative stores have been closed and the profit ascertained, these profits are distributed to the customer in proportion to the amount of money the customer has spent at the store. And as Mr. Keen points out, President Roosevelt, under the fair price codes of the N.R.A., has issued an executive order permitting the rebate of profits to milk consumers in exactly the same manner as that which has been denied the Hamilton Co-operative by the Ontario Milk Board.

The farmers in this part of Ontario have been receiving about 70 cents a hundred for milk. They are the victims of an economic system built upon profits, which is enslaving the primary producer. Then when they all—the farmers—unite to make better marketing conditions and observe the manner in which they have to fight and struggle, there is no wonder at the discouragement and unrest among them.

The Ontario Milk Board should be made to realize that they exist, not to insure profits on highly watered stock of corporations, but to see that the primary producer and the consumer get a fair deal.

OUR CHRISTMAS DAYS AS THEY USED TO BE

Sometimes it seems as if the "elder days" were the best. Think of their Christmases! Where is the grace and generosity of those times? The warm welcome, the large cordiality, the mellow fun of innocent celebrations?

Perhaps we look back through the softening glow of distance, but there is a romance, a delicate, fine flavor of something which indeed seems lost to us now.

How the neighbors rode through the snow on horseback to large gatherings! How the pretty girls were muffled in rugs and furs, skimming over the road in sleighs! How the bells rippled and rang! And how the wide doors flew open to greet these guests!

Light of candles . . . breath of pine wreaths . . . sprigs of holly . . . and the high thrill of holiday thoughts.

Laughing faces . . . graceful and the Virginia reel in the evening.

It is a heartsome thing to think about. Let us try to insert some of those times, but hearts can reflect just as truly the invisible yet invincible power of love and lovelimes!

You have my sympathy, old man. Why?
My wife got a new hat, and she's calling on your wife tomorrow.

Editorial Comment

THERE MUST BE CHANGE

There is an aspect of the problem that so far has escaped notice in official statements which must soon be faced. It is the principle laid down by the British Government that there must be uniformity of treatment over all the Dominions in respect to quota distributions. That cannot possibly stand as a permanency, seeing there are so wide differences between the industrial activities of the various Dominions. The terms of the trade treaty between Britain and Australia could hardly apply with equity as between the Motherland and New Zealand. Peaceful though, British statesmen may be of any differentiation it will be found that sooner or later rationalism of Empire industry, both primary and secondary, will demand it. — Auckland News.

ANOTHER VIEW OF MR. GANDHI

Evidently the feeling is universal that Mr. Gandhi must go. This is not the place for an estimate of his life and work. But for all his virtues and his foibles, was none the less a safeguard against a more anarchy than the one with which he sometimes threatened to overwhelm India. At heart he was a conservative and he had no faith in political nostrums manufactured in revolutionary factories. When Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru returned from Russia enamoured of the Communist model, Mr. Gandhi refused to applaud. When recently the Congress Socialists offered their support to his opponents, he unceremoniously brushed them aside. Extremist as he was, he was never, unless a check on the more dangerous extremists, who will now try to nail the Congress ship on the uncharted sea of political experimentation. — Times of Ceylon, Colombo.

BRITISH COAL MINES REORGANIZATION

There is no doubt but that reorganization in the coal mining industry is now making steady progress. That this should be the case is a matter for very real gratification, since coal is at once Britain's basic industries and the prosperity of the mines is an essential to general trade prosperity. The European quotas hit the industry very hard. If it can recover from those blows and, through the elimination of non-profit making mines and the reduction of costs by federation, bring the industry back to its former prosperous state, or near it, then indeed the Old Country will have taken another very important step toward complete recovery.—Montreal Star.

THE TRUTH ABOUT FOREIGN CONDITIONS

In this machine age, where distances have been abolished, nations are vitally dependent upon each other. There can be no prosperity for one without prosperity for all. Foreign commerce is the life-blood of world prosperity. During the past decade this fact has been forgotten by the great powers. In the mad race for economic self - sufficiency foreign trade has been wiped out by tariff barriers, import quotas and depreciated currencies. Let us take a snapshot glance at this "planned chaos" which is raging in every nook and cranny of the globe.

France Clings Desperately to Gold

At the present time the "gold bloc" countries (those still on the gold standard, namely, France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Poland, and Italy) hold the spot-light. They are being squeezed mercilessly in world markets by the other nations who have all devalued. Internal political conditions grow more critical daily as gold flows abroad, but, nevertheless, France, under the new premiership of Flandin, and her satellites, are still clinging desperately to gold. Frankly, I believe it is only a question of time before these nations devalue. This would force an immediate world-wide currency devaluation to prevent another wave of depreciation throughout the world.

Germany today is a stick of dynamite. The German citizen, from an individualistic point of view, can no longer call his soul his own. The fundamental problem in Germany is the loss of her world markets because of tariff barriers erected against her. As a result, she has no money to pay for those goods she must buy abroad. She has been so thoroughly deprived of her gold that there are only three gold marks behind each one hundred paper marks. Her credit is exhausted. Germany's only solution is to recapture her world markets and to reorganize completely her financial structure.

Russia Swinging to the Right

From Germany we move to Russia—the mystery nation of the past decade. There have been so many conflicting reports about Russia, for recent years, that it has been difficult to analyze accurately her condition. The facts are, however, that the Soviet's credit is better and her position is stronger among the family of nations today than at any time since the war. Russia is slowly transforming from a radical communistic nation to a conservative-socialistic state. She has retained or readopted many of the principles such as the price system, private property, and the like. Some day Russia may be our strongest ally in the death struggle of the white race against the yellow. Even today, Japan's attitude toward Russia in the Far East is one of the greatest menaces to world peace.

Japan is attacking England and America with economic pressure as she attacked China with military pressure, two years ago. The sharp devaluation of the yen, plus extremely low wage schedules, have made Japan's price-cutting war a great success. Her textiles are raising havoc in British markets, while certain of her finished goods are stealing the United States' customers both abroad and at home. In addition to "dumping" Japan is further annoying the United States and Great Britain by clamoring for naval equality. She is particularly irritated with the United States for opposing any chance in the present treaty ratio of 5-5-3.

China Threatens to "Go Off Silver"

China, too, is out of sorts with us. The treasury is paying sixty-four cents an ounce for silver, which is over ten cents higher than the world price. Result, we are gaining huge hoards of silver out of the Orient, particularly out of China. Since China is on a silver standard, this has had the same depressing effect on her prices, wages, and business as the devaluation of gold is having on France et al. China has cut down the flow of silver to some extent by retaliating with a ten cent tax levy on silver exports. If pressure on China continues, she may go off silver and devalue. Japan will immediately follow suit, thus aggravating the currency problem.

Among the nations which have the lowest outlook are the British Empire and her tradine "subsidiaries"—the South American States. Conservative bonds of such countries as Chile, Brazil and Uruguay, which could be purchased two years ago from 50 to seventy cents on the dollar, have more than doubled in value. Foreign trade is the backbone of South American prosperity. Many of her products, such as cocoa, coffee, rubber, and nitrates, are essential to northern happiness. Hence, South American republics are excellent barometers of world business conditions. The biggest boon to South America would be the stabilization of sterling, which would invoke restoration of normal trade relations.

Sterling Area Shows the Way

The British Empire, especially England, Canada, and Australia, has made a splendid recovery. Business in Great Britain today is better than a year ago. Factories are busier, unemployment is decreasing; and retail trade is reviving. The British people, generally recognized as the strongest currency in the world. England's credit has improved greatly since the pound collapse brought about by the former Labor Government. Great Britain's recovery is a tribute to the balancing of the budget and her coalition government. Following England's lead in these two ways would do much to eliminate unemployment in the United States than all the Washington alphabets could ever hope to accomplish.

Without the use of artificial stimulants, business in Canada has advanced more than ten per cent above last November. Canada has her problems. Some of them are serious; but they are the problems of growth and development, not the problems of age and decay. Frankly, I feel that Canada today is one of the strongest bulwarks of sane progress. For the immediate future no grave crisis should disturb us. The danger points to watch this winter are Germany and France. With England's improvement, Russia's slow stabilization of its internal situation, and Italy's progress under Mussolini, I feel that the European balance is on the constructive side of the period ahead.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 23RD, 1934

"THE CHRISTIAN HOME"

LUKE 2: 8-19. Ephesians 6: 1-4

The birth of Jesus, recorded in today's lesson, calls attention to the way in which His life has created the Christian home. We in the western part of the world, who have been brought up in Christian homes, are apt to think that no other kind of home-life exists or ever has existed. But the home as we know it, was a direct result of the religion of Jesus. It was only won and achieved after long years of struggle and sorrow. And what has once been won is always in danger of being lost.

There are influences and tendencies abroad in our modern life, which threaten in a very serious challenge to the home as we have known it. And the Christmas season gives us a splendid opportunity to seriously consider them.

In the first place, one of these is the lessening up of provisions for obtaining divorce and so breaking up the home. This, in many states, can now be done on the very flimsiest of reasons. The movies, which for a time, have popularized divorce, have by their suggestive appeal to the youth of the land, made it appear as the natural and commonplace thing. This constitutes a grave menace to the sanctity of the home, which is the very basis of an enduring and permanent society.

Another tendency which threatens the home is the modern organization of society and the ever-increasing call for women in business and in industry. Granted that it is necessary for women to take their place alongside men in all walks of life, yet without great personal self-discipline this practice cannot but have grave consequences for the future of the race. The freedom which economic independence gives women, is not without great strength of will sacrificed for the comparative restraint of the home-maker.

Then too, the organization of our modern society has a disruptive tendency on the family life. Men and women leave home at different times. They take their noon-day meal down town, and have other and diverse interests in the evening which claim their allegiance. Under those circumstances, home becomes little more than a glorified boarding house, where the members grab an occasional meal and snatch an occasional few hours sleep.

The childless home, which leaves the mother free to attend her parties and other social activities, and the father free to attend his club and get there his intimate associations and companionships, cannot but rob the home of those finer satisfactions which have ever marked it under our Christian heritage.

The reaction against the stern discipline of the homes of a bygone generation, as a daily matter, is also, to some extent, a very serious challenge to the home as we have known it. And the Christmas season gives us a splendid opportunity to seriously consider them.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture)

Poultry Grades

Most of the poultry being offered on the market this year is being graded in accordance with government standards, with the class and grade marked by tags affixed to the breast of the bird. There are two classes of poultry, "Milk-fed" distinguished by yellow fat. Within these classes are the grades "Milk-fed A," "Milkfed B," Selected A," "Selected B" and "Selected C." Grading of the birds in this manner enables the householder to choose a good dressed poultry with great ease.

Meal Mixtures for Pigs in Winter

For pigs newly weaned and up to four months of age the following meal mixture is recommended: Middlings, 3 parts; oats, 2 parts, shorts, 1 part; bran ½ part. Three pounds of skim-milk or buttermilk per pound of meal mixture should be fed at this stage.

The following meal mixture is recommended when the pigs are between four and five months old; shorts, 2 parts; oats 2 parts; bran 1½ parts; bran ½ part. With one pound of this mixture feed two pounds of skim-milk or butter milk.

From the time the pigs are five months old and weigh about 150 pounds up to market weight, they may be fed the following finishing ration: shorts, 1 part; oats, 2 parts; barley, 2 parts. With one pound of this mixture, feed one and one-half pounds of skim-milk or buttermilk.

Purchasing Feed Stuffs

The advantage of co-operative purchase of feed stuffs is sometimes lost through the feeding of those feeds which can be purchased in carlot quantities without regard to balance or suitability of rations. Carlot purchase of feeding stuffs should be undertaken from the standpoint of both economy and efficiency. Dollars per ton is not the all-important angle. The cost per pound of food nutrients is more important and, better still, the price per unit of feeding value and the suitability for balancing homegrown or other feeds, are the important factors to consider. There are several steps to follow in the purchase of supplementary feeds. They are: (1) Know what is on hand in the form of home-grown feeds. (2) Know what best balances the feeds on hand, taking into consideration both quality and cost. (3) Purchase supplementary feeds in quantity sufficient to take advantage of the best prices and lowest freight rates. (4) Know the production records of the livestock fed.

"O" Brand Lacking

Fulton, President of the National Association declares: "One of the greatest tragedies this season, as far as Ontario is concerned, is the lack of the Big "O" brand apples on the United Kingdom markets. After five years' work in building up this brand to the stage where the trade have come to recognize the quality of this pack, it is a great disappointment to be unable to meet the demand and to continue building up a reputation for Ontario apples. I fully appreciate that this disappointment is equally as great for the Ontario growers who have had their trees damaged and have no apples to ship. At the same time, if Ontario is going to remain in the export business, there should have been a special effort made by shippers to continue shipping under the Big "O" brand, if only a few cars from each packing house, in order to keep the name before the trade." Mr. Fulton recommends that the packing houses and growers organize an export apple association entirely separate from any other organization, so that the welfare of this phase of the industry can be looked after.

Weekly Crop Report.

Prevailing weather in most parts of Ontario until the first week in December was quite exceptional. Whereas last year cattle had been fed for five or six weeks prior to this time, the open fall this year permitted farmers to leave their cattle on pasture, thus shortening the winter feeding period materially. It was a fine autumn for plowing, too. Grey county reports that never, for the past few years, has so much grain been marketed. This is largely due to the fact that prices of cattle were low, grain was comparatively high and there were exceptional grain crops, this year. Several carlots of livestock have been shipped from Brant and Haldimand counties to the United States in the past few weeks. Copious rains relieved the water shortage in many districts so far as wells and cisterns were concerned. First-grade poultry is selling in Lincoln at 25c to 28c lb., with wholesale prices 20c to 22c. Young turkeys are bringing 22c lb. in Wentworth. A strong demand for hay is noted in Hastings, with mixed hay selling at $14.00 a ton.

In Peterborough county, potatoes have been selling at 45c to 50c a bag, and McIntosh apples at $1.60 a bushel, and Northern Spies at $2.00 to $2.25 a bushel. Prescott-Russell reports that cheese products produced this year have decreased 15 per cent., while butter production has increased slightly. Butterfat prices range around 28c. lb.

CARE MEANS CASH ON THE FARM THESE DAYS

One of the very practical lines of instruction given to all regular students at the Ontario Agricultural College is in the adjustment, repair and care of farm machinery and other farm equipment such as tools, harness, ropes, belts, etc.

So great is the need for care and economy on the farm just now that it has been decided to offer a course of instruction and practice along these lines to any young men who attend the ten day short course at the College, January 2nd to 11th, and who wish to spend their time on this kind of work.

These men will participate in the same evening program of games and entertainment as those taking other lines of work in the daylight hours.

THE SPIRIT of CHRISTMAS

by SARA LOCKWOOD

IN THE little village below the hill the snow and ice-covered houses seemed snuggling up together among the fir trees, in order to keep warm. The fir trees locked their long arms together and moved restlessly to and fro, moaning now and then. Other trees, hopelessly bare and cold, shivered in the wind and crackled their icy branches. The beautiful Lady of the Snow with all her Snowflake Imps in attendance flitted about the village street, gliding gayly down the shop windows and flirting with the passers-by.

The Man and the Child made their way through the drifts toward the group of houses. The Child ran and danced about, now in front, now behind the Man, shouting and laughing. She loved the white old Winter and in return Winter had commanded all his subjects to be kind to her. So the Snow Lady kissed and caressed her and the Snowflakes played about her merrily, touching her cheeks softly and making them rosy.

But the Man hated Winter and now he hurried along, giving no heed to the beauties about him, wishing only for the warm fire in his cottage. The Snow Lady tried all her charms on him, but he only pulled his muffler tighter about his throat and his cap more firmly upon his head and went on. Then the Snowflakes Imps flew at him furiously. They stung his face and buried themselves inside his muffler. The North Wind tormented him, too, blowing up his sleeves and twisting his great coat about his knees until he stumbled and muttered under his breath. When the Child laughed at him and would have thrown snow in his face, he reproved her gruffly.

The Man was threshing over in his mind a question he had discussed with the Woman only the week before. They had decided to have no Christmas, this year. It was foolish, very foolish to wear one's self out thinking and planning presents for one's relatives and friends for months before, and then perhaps not be ready when Christmas came. They would not allow their child to hear her belief in the foolish Santa Claus myth which they had told her so long ago.

This was the hardest part, for both the Man and the Woman dreaded to tell the Child, and they put off the task as long as possible. Now it was Christmas Eve and the Man had promised to tell the Child as they visited the shops. But she had been so delighted with the array of toys heaped in windows and, over counters, so happy in thinking Santa would bring her some of these wonderful playthings, that he could not bring himself to tell her Santa would never visit her again. And yet he must. She would soon get over the disappointment and be happier than ever, he told himself. Yes, it was the sensible thing to do, but he would wait and let the Woman tell her.

The Child Ran and Danced About, Shouting and Laughing

As they neared the cottage the Child threw out her arms joyously as though she would embrace the whole world of Snowflakes before she left them. And they, wild with delight, fought for a place upon her little hood and shoulders that she might carry them away with her.

"Oh, Mother, Mother, the Snowflakes have played with me and have told me the prettiest stories," cried the Child as she drew the Woman's hand across her cold, damp cheek. "And I have seen Santa Claus. He is visiting the shops now but he promised to come here tonight." She stood on her toes and clapped her hands in her excitement, and the words tumbled over one another as she tried to tell of all the beautiful toys she had seen.

The Woman sighed and looked reproachfully at the Man. So he had not old the Child. Why did he always put it off and leave it for her to do? The long discussions on the subject, the dread of spoiling the child's happiness and the arguments as to which should tell her, had unsettled the Woman, usually so gentle and even tempered. She was vexed. She turned to the Child wearily, a little impatiently. She would tell her now.

"Dear, haven't you learned yet that there is no Santa Claus? You will not hang up your stockings tonight, for he isn't coming to fill them."

Then as the Child stood looking at her with wild, wondering eyes, she exclaimed, "Why do you stare at me so? Don't you see we have been playing make-believe with you all these years? There is no Santa Claus, and you are old enough now to forget such foolish stories. It is expensive and tiresome to keep up this farce and we have decided never to have Christmas again."

To the Child it was all a strange muddle. Something dreadful had happened, but as yet she could not understand what it was.

"No Santa— But I have just seen him, Mother. He talked to me this afternoon at the shops."

Wrought up as she was, the Woman's voice sounded cold and unfeeling. "Go to bed now. You will understand better in the morning."

The Child obeyed silently. All her joyousness was gone. The laughter had died out of her eyes and in its place there was wonder and hurt. But she could not talk about it now.

"I Wish We Had Never Heard of Christmas !"

When the Woman left her in the white bed by the window she cautiously opened it so the Snowflakes could come in. And then, with a great sob, she told them her troubles.

In the big room with the bay window, the Man paced restlessly back and forth and the Woman sat by the table with workbasket and mending. But her hands lay listlessly in her lap and she gazed into the fire. Once her face brightened and she murmured aloud, "But Father and Mother never forgot us, and of course they will send something for the Child—"

The Man wheeled about with a snort. "We won't receive anything from them. Do you think we would accept presents when we are not sending any ? I have written them that we are not to have any more Christmas celebrations."

"Oh," gasped the Woman. "You do not mean we must send back everything we get ?"

The Man hesitated. Then, as though he were sick of the subject, "I don't know. It is all your doing. It is you who has nervous prostration at Christmas after worrying about presents."

"I do not," she denied hotly. "And you suggested this anyway. I wish we had never heard of Christmas !"

Their Christmas Eve was spent in quarrelling, and that night they dreamed of horrible plots that Santa was planning against them.

A pale moon with icicles on his whiskers watched over the little village. The Snow Lady was asleep and the Snowflake Imps had settled down to rest. One cottage glowed redder and whiter than the others and seemed to stand apart as though not of them. The Spirit of Christmas tried the door softly.

"Why, it is barred against me !" he murmured sadly. "This will never do."

So he walked about looking for a place to get in until he came to the window where the Child slept. Tenderly he sprinkled happiness and joy upon her until her lips parted in a smile. Then he flew past her to where the Man and the Woman slept. To them he gave of all his essences.

The Woman wakened first, and with strange new feelings, she called the Man. They gazed long at each other.

"Merry Christmas," whispered the Woman.

And with wonder and joy, peace and good will all mingled together, the Man took her in his arms.

"We must have Christmas, after all," he said. And the Woman nodded, her eyes beaming with happiness. "I must go to the shops and bring Santa Claus for the Child before she wakes."

"Wait," cried the Woman, and laughing, she brought from their hiding place an assortment of beautiful toys. "Mother and Father sent them and I just couldn't send them back."

With shining faces and happy hearts the Man and the Woman hung stockings by the fireplace and heaped them with playthings.

"We will tell her she had a bad dream," said the Man.

"No," said the Woman softly. "We will tell her that Santa is the good Christmas fairy, who will always be welcome here."

Tuberculosis Giving Ground States Governor-General

The Toronto Hospital for Consumptives, the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptives, Weston have all been supported and visited by His Excellency the Earl of Bessborough, for the Governor-General is Honorary President of the National Sanitarium Association which operates the three, named institutions. His interest in paying tribute to those who are helping and protecting the less fortunate who have fallen victims to tuberculosis, he said that Canadians should be glad to know that Canada stands in the first place among the nations in the forefront of those nations before which tuberculosis is steadily giving ground.

The work of these three hospitals has been intensified owing to the unemployment problem. It is at this time, when living quarters become cramped and the supply of nourishing food inadequate, that tuberculosis strikes those who are weakened and run-down condition. Frail children, the hope of the future, and youthful toil in sanctuary is available and health may be restored to many if the gifts of warm-hearted friends, upon whom these hospitals must largely depend, are continued.

Will you please assist in this great work by sending what you can to George A. Reid, Treasurer, Gage Institute, 223 College Street, Toronto 2.

Bank of Montreal Statement Reveals Strong Liquid Positon : Cash Holdings at High Level

Of Total Assets of $759,108,178, Liquid Assets Amount to $491,247,207, Equal to 71.97% of all Liabilities to the Public — Cash Holdings are up to $87,210,888 from $78,683,217 — Excess of Assets Over Liabilities to Public Amounts to $76,538,810.

The Annual Statement of the Bank of Montreal shows the Bank in its usual strong liquid position. Of total assets of $759,108,178, quickly available resources are $491,247,207, equal to 71.97% of all liabilities to the public.

A feature of the liquid assets is afforded by cash holdings of $87,210,888, up from $78,883,217 a year ago.

The principal holdings are in government and other bonds and debentures, which now amount to $317,536,912, as compared with $316,967,375 at the end of the previous year. The excess of assets over liabilities to the public has increased to $76,538,810.

The report makes its appearance at a time when it is certain to be studied closely by all who are anxious to get a better understanding of the strong position in which the leading bank has maintained its resources.

Notwithstanding general evidence of more active manufacturing conditions, current loans are slightly down at $243,477,041 as compared with $251,885,302 at the end of the previous year. This would indicate that a number of Canadian companies still find it possible to finance business in its present volume without leaning heavily on banking accommodation.

Deposits Well Maintained

Deposits are well maintained, especially in view of recent large government bond offerings. Total deposits payable on demand and

YOUNG PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATIONS

STELLA Y. P. S.

The Young People met in the Town Hall on November 20th. The meeting opened with hymn 414, after which the roll was called with fourteen present. The minutes were read and adopted. The next program committee chosen was Janet Filson and Rev. M. Whyte. As the president, Ben. Nightingale, resigned, Morrison Scott was elected next president and Lulu Glenn, vice-president. The treasurer's report was read, after which Helen McMaster and Harris Filson took charge of the program for the evening. Hymn 449 was sung after which Lulu Glenn read the scripture reading. A very interesting contest was given, on flowers, fruits and vegetables. Ruth Gleen gave a reading on the Dominion Bells, at Ottawa. A contest of riddles followed by Mr. Wright asking the members questions on the Bible Lunch was served and the meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.

ADOLPHUSTOWN A.Y.P.A.

Adolphustown A. Y. P. A. lived up to the reputation it established two years ago, with the comedy "Much Ado About Betty," in their latest production. "The Eighteen Carat Book," which they staged in the Adolphustown hall on December 7.

Under the capable direction of Mrs. R. J. Allison, the cast ably portrayed the characters they represented. Mr. Howard Garrison, as Bat, Harold Allison and Dick Daverne as the darky attendants, supplied the comedy of the entertainment. Miss Elizabeth Allison, as Alice, delighted the audience with clever acting. Gerald Good, as her father, Gordon Campbell as the hero, Jack Merry, fulfilled their parts, but the highlight of the evening was the clever acting of Miss Florence Daverne and Mr. Lewis Robey, as the scrapping young lovers. Miss Helen Daverne, Miss Evelyn Campbell, Miss Eleanor Garrison and Mr. Victor Hayes, supplied the background for this clever comedy romance.

A large attendance brought a profit of the evening of forty-two dollars. The "Night Hawks" of Picton supplied the music for an enjoyable dance afterwards.

Woman Perishes In Kingston Fire

Kingston— One woman was fatally burned on Thursday and four others suffered minor hurts, in a fire that destroyed a two-story brick dwelling in Kingston and the students welcome. Informal. 51a

The dead woman, Miss Florence Andrews, 22, was found unconscious in a burning bedroom by firemen, who believed previously they had rescued all the occupants of the house. Miss Andrews was lying on a bed with a coat covering her head. She was believed to have become confused in the dense smoke of the building and to have lost her way and been overcome as she sought to escape to the outdoors.

The fire started in the kitchen, where an electric iron was believed to have been left last night by some one who forgot to turn off the current. It swept quickly through the building, and when firemen arrived they were forced to rescue four screaming women from the second-storey windows. They were Mrs. Edith Andrews, Miss Mildred Driscoll, Mrs. C. E. Ballard, owner of the house, and Mrs. Moffatt, the mother.

Male residents of the house were absent when the fire broke out.

Prince Edward County Supplies Half Canada's Canned Goods

Picton—Saturday was an important day for Prince Edward County farmers when the canning factories paid out the sum of $250,000 for produce received during the season. This is a substantial increase over the amount paid last year.

Prince Edward County has the reputation of putting up over half the vegetables packed in cans in the province. This season 8,000 acres of tomatoes were contracted for, and the yield was a good one. Farmers received more for tomatoes this season than for several years. The average price in 1934 was thirty cents per bushel while last year it was twenty-five cents.

Prince Edward County canning factories not only benefit the farmers but the laborers. This year, factories paid out some $200,000 to factory workers.

S. S. Anniversary Services, Grace Ch.

Grace United Church Sunday School anniversary was observed on Sunday, December 16th, at the morning and evening church services.

At the morning service, between three and four hundred members of the Sunday School attended church. Rev. R. T. Richards, the minister of the church was assisted in the service by the pastor, Rev. G. F. Smith, the Sunday School superintendent. Hymns suitable to the occasion and to the season of the year, were sung. Special music was rendered by the primary class and the junior choir. Miss Barbara McLaughlin sang a solo and Miss Mary Elliott also gave a reading. The address was given by Mr. Richards.

At the evening service the junior choir sang two numbers and a musical selection was sung by four junior girls. Miss Jean Clark gave a recitation.

Mr. Richards' theme in his evening address was "Playing the Game." The hymns used were Christmas carols.

The Late Mrs. Matilda Joyner

The death occurred at Napanee on Thursday night of Mrs. Matilda Joyner, following an illness of several months. Nearly a year ago, Mrs. Joyner suffered a stroke of apoplexy from which she partially recovered. For the past three months she had been in a critical condition and was confined to her bed.

Mrs. Joyner was well known in Napanee and the surrounding district. She was born at Elginburg, near Kingston, about 85 years ago, the daughter of the late Thomas Guess and Lydia Shorer. For many years she resided at Yarker, with her father, the late Mrs. Shibley. After Mrs. Shibley's death, about thirty years ago, Mrs. Joyner came to Napanee where she resided until her death.

During the years of her residence in Napanee, she was a devoted member of Trinity United Church. She was extremely active in the affairs and means to the various organizations of the church. She was a valued member of the Ladies' Aid, the Women's Missionary Society and was actively interested in the W.C.T.U. of the town.

The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon at her late residence, Adelphi Street, and interment followed at Yarker. Rev. Harry Pennington, minister of Trinity United Church was in charge of the service. He was assisted by Rev. Ernest Farnworth, of Belleville, a friend of long standing of Mrs. Joyner.

Mrs. Joyner is survived by numerous cousins, among whom are Mr. C. C. S. McKim and Mrs. Nathan Sylvers, of Napanee, and Mr. Norman, of Kingston. Her only child, Alice, died many years ago at the age of five years.

Mayor's Banquet

Councillors Exley, Cowling, Luffman and Topping spoke briefly. Councillor Cowling intimated his intention of running for Reeve, and Councillor Luffman expressed the hope of being a councillor again next year.

Reeve Hughson congratulated the Mayor on his conduct of the town's business, last year. He though it was a fine idea to have gathered around the dinner table and talk over town affairs. Mr. Hughson gave the mayor a great deal of credit for keeping the various committees within their appropriations. He announced that he intended seeking re-election to the office of reeve for 1935.

Town's Credit Good

Mr. Harry B. Williams, manager of the Bank of Commerce, Napanee, said: "The bank has always felt the town of Napanee was a good risk." Mr. Williams went on to say that the policy of reducing the interest on debentures, where possible, the rate was lowered to 5% from 5½%. Napanee be considered was in a good financial condition. Many of the municipalities throughout Ontario had defaulted in payment of interest or principal on debentures. One reason for Napanee's good position, in Mr. Williams' opinion, was that it had always had good councillors, really interested in the town's welfare. He considered the town fortunate in having such a capable treasurer as M. P. Graham, who was always ready to cooperate with the bank.

Chief Edwin Watts, on behalf of the police officers, thanked the council members for their assistance in carrying out the administration of justice.

C. L. Graham, representing the press, congratulated the mayor on the way he had presided during the year and thanked him and the council for the consideration shown the press representatives.

Immediately following the dinner, the Council went into session at the Town Hall.

Engagement Rings Prized by Royalty

Queen Victoria Buried Wearing Three Favorite Jewels

London—The marriage of Princess Marina has sent delvers back into history for comparisons. One such has taken up the subject of the engagement rings of royalty for royal brides who are just as much attached to these marks of betrothal as are other girls.

Queen Alexandra had a large collection of magnificent jewels, among them some of the most valuable pearl necklaces and other ornaments in the world. But the jewel she prized above all was a gold ring set with a beryl, an emerald, a ruby, a topaz, a zeinth, and another emerald. The initial letters of the names spelt out "Bertie" — her name for her husband.

Queen Victoria received from Prince Albert, on her betrothal, a ring set with the finest emerald, it never left her finger, any more than her wedding-ring, nor did a rather square-looking ring set with a very diamond, which her Consort-to-be had given her while she was still a child. The great Queen was buried still wearing these three rings.

Emeralds appear in the engagement ring of the Princess Royal (Mary) as well as in that of her great-grandmother. She received a fine solitaire emerald, very valuable.

A queen who loved diamond rings was Anne of Denmark, the consort of James I. She had literally scores of these ornaments. An attendant "about the court, called Margaret Hartayde, evidently thought that one would not be missed out of so many so she stole one and sold it to a jeweller. The theft was discovered; Margaret was tried and condemned to be banished to the Orkneys.

Queen Henrietta Maria had several rings made with her cipher in gold underneath a crystal cut like a diamond. These she gave to friends who lent her money to help the King's cause against the Parliament. They were known as "the Queen's pledges" — it being understood that when they were given back the money would be repaid.

Former Tamworth Teacher Appointed Inspector of Schools

Mr. J. R. Pickering, who is at present teaching in the Hamilton Technical School, has been appointed Inspector of Public Schools in the district of Parry Sound East, with headquarters at North Bay, and will assume his duties in January.

Mr. Pickering was born in Riceville in the county of Frontenac. He received his early education at Vankleek Hill Collegiate, then trained as a teacher at the Ontario College of Education, Toronto. Following his graduation he taught two years in the public schools of Northumberland, then for seven years as principal of Continuation School, Tamworth, and for two years in the public schools of northern Ontario. In 1922 he was appointed to the staff of the Hamilton Technical School.

Mr. Pickering is a graduate of the University of Toronto in Arts and in Pedagogy, and is at present a member of the executive of the Hamilton branch of the Alumni; a member of the Y. M. C. A., the Canadian Club and the Hamilton Literary and Scientific Association.

Mr. Pickering and family will be greatly missed in Tamworth, where he and Mrs. Pickering have been ardent workers in community and church circles. Their sincerity and friendliness will be real assets in their new environment.

The many friends of Mr. Pickering will be delighted to hear of his appointment and will wish him the best of luck in his new position.

Spring Election Rumor in Ottawa

Ottawa — A general election in Canada much earlier than has commonly been expected looms on the political horizon-scope in the light of the summoning of Parliament for January 17. The prevailing idea has been that the election would not occur before September or October. Now, it is discussed, as a possibility in June or even in April—if the session is concluded by then.

There is no mere effective vermifuge on the market than Miller's Worm Powders. They will soon clear the stomach and bowels of worms, and will prove a very serviceable medicine for children in regulating the infantile system and maintaining it in a healthy condition. There is nothing in their composition that will injure the most delicate stomach when directions are followed, and they can be given to children in the full assurance they will utterly destroy all worms.

Free Shots on Local Sport

Local hockey enthusiasts should see a real exhibition of the winter pastime to-night (Wednesday) when Sunbury and Napanee Gibbards clash for the first time this season at the Hardy Arena, in Kingston. The locals can clinch a play-off berth by winning this fixture, otherwise they will have an uphill battle to get in the charmed circle. They have split even in their two games this far, and are out to make it two straight.

Napanee is returning to the junior O.H.A. hockey wars after a lapse of four years. This year's setette are a fast-travelling, ambitious group of youngsters who will merit the wholehearted support of the fans. The team is managed by Walt. Gerow and coached by "Wink" Wilson. The lads have been practicing faithfully and under the watchful eye of their two wily mentors, have shown great improvement.

Napanee Gibbards are entered in the Kingston Junior League, prior to participating in their own grouping which commences shortly after Christmas. No doubt when the regular season gets under way, they will be strengthened by the addition of one or two experienced puck-chasers. The teams included in the regular league schedule are Tweed, Campbellford, Belleville, Napanee.

Once again the skating arena is sponsored by the Gibbard Athletic Association and judging by the splendid turnout on opening night, last Wednesday, should prove a huge success. Season tickets are now on sale and may be purchased either at the rink or the factory. The prices are as follows:—

Employees' Single	$ 1.50
Employees' Family	3.00
Public School Children	1.00
Ladies' Skating Club	2.50
Non-Employees' Single	2.00
Non-Employees' Family	4.00

NOT ONLY GREAT HOLSTEINS AT O.A.C. —SHORTHORNS, TOO

"That was a good story in last week's press about your remarkable Holstein cow and her fine family," said a visitor at the College, this week, "but have you no outstanding beef cattle to show to the young farmers who come to your short course in January?"

"Plenty of them," said Professor Faithby, "Shorthorns, Herefords and Angus. For instance, there is our fine Shorthorn cow, Augusta 6th —169,122. She is fifteen years old and last August she dropped her thirteenth calf. Three of her heifers are still in the College herd and six of her own bull calves have been sold for breeding purposes.

"Then, too, we have in the herd many of the offspring of Augusta Fancy's grand old half-sister, College Augusta 4th, who, when she was seventeen years old, gave us her sixteenth single calf. A fine Shorthorn cow, of good-type and great usefulness.

"Yes, we have lots of good cattle for both beef and dairy breeds for our demonstrations in January, and we expect to have several hundred keen young fellows here to handle and discuss these cattle and to enjoy the last week of real active, intimate College work and life."

THE BEEKEEPERS' HOLIDAY

(Experimental Farms Note)

Apiary work is finished, the bees have been fed and snugly packed away in their winter quarters and will require no further attention until next spring, therefore, unless engaged in some other full time pursuit the beekeeper will have considerable spare time at his disposal for the next four or five months. This time, however, should not be wasted for there are many ways in which it can be profitably expended. Conventions and short courses are in the order of the day during the fall and winter months, and every beekeeper would be well advised to attend as many gatherings as possible, for no matter how good a beekeeper one may be, new ideas are always available at such meetings. It may sometimes be tiresome to sit and listen to official addresses, but the friendly and open discussions that usually follow such addresses are extremely valuable and many a profitable idea is picked up from them. There will be meetings of the local organizations, and one can help to make such organizations useful and successful by attending. Then there will be the Provincial Association Conventions which are important because problems affecting the beekeeping industry of the whole province in which one lives are discussed. Some of the Agricultural Colleges provide short courses which are especially valuable to beginners, but the professional beekeepers may also be benefited by attending. On December 17, a great International Congress of Beekeepers is to be held at Valdosta, Georgia. It promises to be one of the greatest beekeepers' meetings ever held in America, and all who possibly can do so should make an attempt to be present. Conventions and meetings, however, will not fill all the spare time, but there is an abundance of valuable and interesting literature available, and many a profitable hour can be spent with books, bulletins or journals that were perhaps cast aside unread during the rush of the summer months. Aside from conventions, short courses etc. one should not overlook the fact that the slack period of winter also offers an excellent opportunity of putting all equipment into working condition before the active season of 1935 begins.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' FARM CLUBS

Hon. Robert Weir Presents Trophies At the Winter Fair

At the Royal Agricultural dinner at Toronto on Wednesday, November 21st, Hon. Robert Weir, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, presented trophies to the winning team clubs of the Boys' and Girls' Farm Club movement who were present at the dinner as guests of the President and Directors of the Royal Winter Fair. Thirty-two teams of two members each, representing all the provinces in the Dominion, competed for the championships in six livestock and field projects. Ontario carried off four trophy in the Dairy Calf Club project, through the Markham Dairy Calf Club, and also the trophy in the Seed project, through the Durham County Boys' Grain Club. Alberta won the championship in the Beef Cattle project, the Lacombe Beef Cattle Club proving to be the top scorers. Nova Scotia gained the championship in the Poultry project through the Cambridge Poultry Club. Saskatchewan was the champion in the Swine project through the Watrous Swine Club, while Middlesex, Sabine Potato Club carried off the Potato championship for Quebec.

In presenting the prizes, Hon. Mr. Weir, who is the father of the Canadian Council of Boys' and Girls' Club work and who throughout has maintained a keen and practical interest in the movement, read the following message from His Excellency the Governor General:—

"Hon. Mr. It was a great pleasure to me to become Patron of the Canadian Boys' and Girls' Club Work a few months ago. I am very sorry that circumstances make it impossible for me to be present in Toronto until the end of this week, but I am looking forward to seeing the Council stand when I visit the Royal Winter Fair next Tuesday. Meanwhile, I hope you will give my best wishes to all connected with the Council and tell them how very keenly interested I am in the work it is doing. (Sgd.) Bessborough."

The important thing for a worker is his yearly wage, rather than his daily wage.—Raymond Moley.

REAL SPIRIT

If the real spirit of Christmas is within us we will, indeed, find that it is more blessed to give than to receive, and we will give out of the fullness of our hearts and because of the joy that giving brings us, instead of from any other motive. So to get the real joy of giving and to receive the richness of the Christmas spirit in fullest measure, give because your heart prompts you to and forget all else. — Katherine Edelman.

Dollars Bring Health to Frail and Weak

Up in Muskoka, where sparkling lakes and pure, fresh air is abundant, stands the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. On a high plateau, overlooking the lakes, is the Queen Alexandra Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children. All these are havens for the frail and weak and here the never-ending fight for the lives of men, women and children is carried on.

There are but few of the patients in these hospitals who can pay anything toward their keep. There are none of whom the whole cost is not assessable. But there is a big difference, sometimes to many thousands of dollars a year, these institutions must look to the generosity of warm-hearted friends. There, your dollars may be turned into health and smiles may be brought back to faces now wan and tired.

Over a thousand patients are now being cared for in these hospitals. Many others will profit, the services these hospitals can give. Will you please help by sending a gift of money to the Hon. Treasurer, Muskoka Hospitals Fund, Mrs. Reid, Treasurer, Gage Institute, 223 Chilcote Street, Toronto 2.

All creeds that use suppression of facts show a lack of confidence in the reasonableness of their own beliefs.—Bertrand Russell.

RURAL SCHOOL FAIR PUBLIC SPEAKING CONTEST

The Annual County Championship Public Speaking Contest for rural school boys and girls, was held in the Assembly Hall of the Napanee Collegiate Institute on Thursday evening, December 7th. About 100 people were in attendance, including rural school boys and girls, their parents and teachers.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. C. W. Buchanan, Agricultural Representative, and "O Canada" was sung. Reeve A. S. Huzhson presented the medals to the first prize winners in the public speaking contest at each 1934 school fair. Seven of these winners were present and took their place on the platform. The public speaking contest then took place—seven pupils taking part, as follows:

James Yateman, S. S. No. 17, Ernestown— "The Rabbit That Went to School."

Hazel Jaynes, S. S. No. 15W, North Fredericksburgh— "My First Toothache and Its End."

Sam Asselstine, S. S. No. 6, South Fredericksburgh— "A Travel Talk."

Lillian Bartlett, S. S. No. 5, Richmond— "The Amazing Amazon."

Madeline Martin, S. S. No. 4, Camden— "How to Keep Well."

Paul Lewis, S. S. No. 7, Camden— "The Coming of the Reaper."

Orval Kirk, Tamworth Consolidated School— "Why I am Proud to be a Canadian."

Following the final speech, Mr. F. Correll, manager of the local Canadian Department Stores, was called upon to present the prizes that had been donated by the T. Eaton Company. In a few complimentary words Mr. Correll congratulated the winners and assured them of the interest his company was taking in their work. A silver cake dish was given to the winner of the highest number of points at each school fair in the County; a book entitled "The Life of Our Lord" was given to the winner of the second highest number of points and the winner of the third highest number of points took entitled "The Rock and the River." Ten fairs were conducted in our County last September and in all, 205 fairs were conducted in the Province.

Sir Herbert S. Holt Resigns Presidency Royal Bank Canada

Montreal, Nov. 30—After 36 years in office, Sir Herbert. S. Holt has relinquished the presidency of the Royal Bank of Canada and now becomes Chairman of the Board and Chairman of the Executive Committee. He is succeeded by Morris W. Wilson as President and Managing Director and Sydney G. Dobson follows Mr. Wilson as General Manager.

These changes were announced at the end of the Bank's fiscal year following a regular meeting of the Board. They are changes which constitute not only an important milestone in the 56 years of Royal Bank history, but also an event of national significance. Sir Herbert Holt's retirement from the presidency, marks the withdrawal from active duty of an outstanding Canadian, under whose leadership the Royal Bank has developed from a relatively small organization to its present status as one of the great financial institutions of the world. Furthermore, the appointment of Morris W. Wilson as President, marks the first occasion this office has been attained by a man from within the ranks of the bank.

In assuming the newly created position of Chairman of the Board, Sir Herbert Holt will continue a connection with the Royal Bank which began nearly thirty years ago with his election as a director in December, 1905. He was appointed Vice-President of the bank two years later and became its President on November 16th, 1908.

The Royal Bank has been in existence for sixty-five years. It was incorporated in Halifax in 1869 as The Merchants Bank of Halifax, the present name being adopted in 1901 and its Head Office removed from Halifax to Montreal in 1907, the year in which Sir Herbert became Vice-President.

When he was appointed President in the following year, the Royal Bank was recognized as being soundly established upon long adherence to the conservative principles of its inception. It was not, however, outstanding in the extent of its activities, and it was under Sir Herbert's direction that the bank entered a new period of steady growth which gradually made it one of the leading banks of the world, international in scope and influence. In 1908, when Sir Herbert became President, the Royal Bank had 107 branch offices; to-day it has nearly 800 branches, serving parts of Canada and located in twenty foreign countries. Its assets during the same period have increased from less than $50,000,000 to more than $725,000,000, and the number of its shareholders from 800 to a present total of 12,000.

Sir Herbert's policy has been one of steady and constant enterprise, consistent with sound banking practices, and this has included an influence upon the development of an active and highly trained personnel. He has always emphasized the importance of providing opportunity for new ability, and the Royal Bank has been notable for the development of young men such as C. S. Tompkins, Inspector General of Banks, a position created by the Federal Government in 1924, and Graham F. Towers, the recently appointed Governor of the new Central Bank.

It is understood that Sir Herbert's retirement from the presidency is due to the age of seventy-eight, is due partly to his desire to have more leisure for personal affairs and partly to his policy of gradually transferring his direct responsibilities to younger shoulders.

Morris W. Wilson, the new President and Managing Director of the Royal Bank, was formerly Vice-President and Managing Director of the A. Jukes Bank, which, formerly, was born in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, where he entered the service of the bank. His entire business career has been with the bank, and the thirty-seven years since he began have been marked by a series of promotions through which he has acquired experience in every phase of banking activity.

In 1909, when he was twenty-six, Mr. Wilson was moved from the Maritimes to Vancouver, where he became Manager of the main office two years later. In 1916 he was transferred to Head Office in Montreal, as Chief Inspector. The following year he became Superintendent of Branches, and in 1922 was appointed Senior Assistant General Manager. He was promoted to General Manager of the bank in July 1929, and in 1931 became President as well. Each of his predecessors as President has been, like Sir Herbert Holt, a figure of prominence in industry or commerce. He is thus the first professional banker to become President of the bank.

Sydney G. Dobson, who has been Senior Assistant General Manager and who now succeeds Mr. Wilson as General Manager, is also a familiar career. Like Mr. Wilson, he was born in the Maritimes, at Sydney, Cape Breton, and is fifty-one years old. He started with the bank as a junior clerk in his home town thirty-four years ago, becoming Accountant at Winnipeg, in 1906. After serving in various other positions he was appointed Manager of Sydney Branch in 1910 at the age of 27. Five years later he became Assistant Manager in Montreal, and in 1916 he was transferred to Vancouver to succeed Mr. Wilson as Manager. In 1918 he became Acting Supervisor of Middle West Branches, with headquarters at Winnipeg, and in 1919 was promoted to General Inspector at Head Office. He became Assistant General Manager three years later, and has occupied this position for the last twelve years.

DUCHESS OF YORK'S COSTUME DESCRIBED FOR BLIND PEOPLE

The Duchess of York's gentle eyes filled with tears when from the platform she looked upon two hundred blind men and women, gathered at the university of the Hepburn Stacey Blind Aid Society. The sightless company cheered loudly when Lady Gladstone told them the duchess had arrived. Then, probably, for the first time in her life, the duchess heard the appearance described to an audience.

"I regret you cannot see Her Royal Highness," said Lady Gladstone. "I assure you she is a very sweet thing. Let me be your eyes for a minute. She has on a lovely blue velvet coat with a big fur collar. She has a smart blue hat—I believe it is her best hat—anyway, it is very becoming; and she has, what she always has, a very sweet smile, the smile that has won the hearts of the people all over the British Empire."

It is now forced upon all that the welfare of the mass is the best guaranty of the prosperity of the whole. —Benito Mussolini.

The time has come when the fear of poverty in old age shall disappear. —Royal S. Copeland.

It is a little known fact that wireless waves are already actually in use in several hospitals for both medical and surgical purposes. —Guglielmo Marconi.

EMERALD

Emerald, December 17. — A play, entitled "Truth Takes a Holiday," was presented in the hall by the following members of the Dramatic Club: Mrs. Howard Richards, Miss Helen Wemp, Ruth Gibson, Violet Flanigan, Mr. Lorne Wemp, Arthur Wemp and Maurice Smith. Mr. Fred Richards acted as prompter. The cast is to be congratulated on the splendid manner in which the play was presented. The large audience showed their appreciation by many hand clappings. Songs and recitations by members of the club were enjoyed between acts. A dance followed the entertainment.

Great excitement reigns in S. S. No. 4, owing to the fact that a concert and Christmas tree are taking place next Friday evening. The concert, however, joins with the other schools of the Township at Stella. This has been the custom for a number of years.

The motorship, "Amherst Islander," called Saturday morning with Fred Robbins for the week-end. This, no doubt, will be the last trip of the season.

Mr. Herman Willard is a patient in the Isolation Hospital, Kingston. His many friends hope for a speedy recitations by members of the club turn to health.

We are very glad to know that Mr. and Mrs Arnold Wemp are feeling better.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Westwood, a recent bride and groom.

ENTERPRISE

-nterprise, December 15.—Without becoming conscious from a very severe stroke of apoplexy, which he suffered last Sunday morning, there passed away on Friday morning, at his home near the village, one of the district's most respected citizens in the person of Alonzo Wagar. Born seventy years ago in the house just across the road from where he died, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Philip Wagar, the deceased spent his whole life in this vicinity. His grandfather and grandmother were of U. E. L. parentage, and were among the first pioneer settlers in this district. When a young man he married Miss Sicily Keller, a daughter of the late George Keller, and Mrs. Keller, and of this marriage six children were born, all of whom survive: Mrs. Harold Townsend, of Sackrui's Harbor; Lorne, of Stittsville; Ford, of The Gibbard Co., Napanee; Glen, De-Verde and Freda, at home. Some twenty years ago Mr. Wagar suffered from a severe stroke and since that time had five more severe attacks, passing away from the last attack on Friday morning. The young man he followed the carpenter trade, and was considered one of the best mechanics in this district. Following the death of his brother, the late Hamilton Wagar, he left his residence in the village and returned to the old home farm, where he died on Friday morning. The funeral service was held on Saturday afternoon at his late residence, the service being in charge of the Rev. D. M. Stinson, of the United Church. A very large number of relatives and friends paid their last respects to a worthy member of the community. Following the service interment took place in the Moscow United Cemetery. The pall bearers were Clayton Brown, Arthur Brown, George Nelson, Milo Jackson, Daniel Wagar and John S. Bell. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community.

On Wednesday night the members of the Hockey Club sponsored a most enjoyable dance in the Community Hall, at which an orchestra from Belleville furnished delightful music. Special and novelty dances were enjoyed. The boys having showed exceptional taste in decorations, the hall presented a very splendid appearance. Owing to the weather in the first part of the evening no doubt lessened the attendance to some extent, but, nevertheless the boys were quite gratified with the financial returns.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of St. John Anglican Church was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Guy Fenwick, with the meeting in charge of the president, Mrs. Edna Clark. The meeting was opened by the Litany and the Lord's Prayer followed by prayers for absent and for sick members in the hospital. The Roll Call was answered by 24 members using the word "pride". Letters were read from Miss Ruttan, regarding the sale of goods which had been sent, and a letter from the Cumberland House requesting their order there. The President read a letter from Samuel Waller, with regard to the sale of a quilt donated by Mrs. Ford, from the Treasurer was read, regarding the receipts from the play recently given, communication was read to the Church Fund and to buying a new carpet. A communication was read from Miss Ruttan, regarding the work of the Auxiliary. Arrangements were made for sending Christmas Cards to Rev and Mrs. Redding and prayer partners. Arrangements were also made for a Christmas dance. The meeting was then closed by prayer, partners and membership prayer. The next meeting will be at the home of Miss Edna Clark, the roll call to be answered by the members using the word "worthy".

The regular meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Enterprise United Church was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the President of the Society, Mrs. R. R. Jackson. The meeting was in charge of the Program with a Christmas programme, and was opened by the singing of a hymn and the call to worship. A scripture reading, "The Christmas Message Annoucned," from Isaiah, 9th chapter, was read by Mrs. Jackson, and "The First Christmas Gift," from Matthew, 2nd chapter, verses 9-11, also read by Mrs. Jackson, followed by prayer by Mrs. W. J. Mellow, and by sentence prayers by the members, for our missionaries, who are telling the Christmas story in other lands. This was followed by a reading, "The Unseen Guest," and "The Birthday of the Child," which was followed by the minutes and business part of the meeting. The election of officers was held over until the January meeting. Following the singing of a hymn, the last chapter of the Study Book was read, "Living Issues in China", and with the singing of a hymn and repeating the watchword, the meeting was brought to a close. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. George Nelson.

By dint of much hard work the local skating rink is getting into excellent condition. During the past week the boys purchased a small building, which has been moved to the rink and converted into a splendid room in which skaters can warm and change into skating togs.

The extreme winter cold has made the ice on Mud Lake and Varty Lake in wonderful condition, and, taking advantage of the moonlight nights, a number of young people from Enterprise, Moscow and Desmond have spent evenings in this most exciting and healthful sport.

On Saturday evening a number of the Enterprise hockey team went to Tamworth for a practice game with the boys of that village, and in a fast and furious game defeated them by a score of 3-0. The Enterprise players were Walter Keech, Milo Jackson, Vernon Bell, Fred Bell, Dick Holland, William Brown, with Gerald Davey, Francis (Pip) Cronk and Miles Jackson as subs. Among the Tamworth players were Irving, Williams, Courneya brothers, Tucker, Reynolds, Harry Leitch and Teal. Pip Cronk starred in scoring one of the goals for Enterprise. Tamworth is to be congratulated on their very fine rink, which is in splendid condition. The Hydro lighting was installed during the past week.

At a meeting of the L. O. B. A. which was held in the Orange Hall on Wednesday evening, the following officers, which had been elected at a previous meeting, were installed into their respective offices: Past Worshipful Mistress, Mrs. Aimore Hyland; Worshipful Mistress, Mrs. Bernice Caney; Deputy Mistress, Mrs. Stanley Wagar; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Oscar Fenwick; Financial Secretary, Mrs. George McLaren; Treasurer, Mrs. Robert Potter; Lecturers, Mrs. John W. Reid, Mrs. Cephas Bell; Director of Ceremonies, Mrs. George H. Fenwick; Councilwomen, 1st. Miss Libbie Reid; 2nd, Mrs. R. J. Coulson; 3rd, Mrs. Elmore Hyland; 4th, Mrs. George McLaren. Visitors were present from Croydon, Centreville, and other neighboring lodges, and, following the installation ceremony, a delightful lunch was served by the members of the Social Committee.

The past week seems to have been a most unfortunate one for motorists in this vicinity, and the local garages have been exceptionally busy in towing in disabled cars and rushing gasoline to stranded cyes.

On Tuesday evening the Tamworth-Kingston bus ran out of gasoline on its return trip in the vicinity of Reidville, and had to walk a supply of fuel rushed from a garage.

On Saturday afternoon, while proceeding to Tamworth, following the funeral of the late Alonzo Wagar, the funeral home of Alex. Hannah became disabled and had to be towed to Tamworth for repairs.

Joseph Bovard, while on his way to Napanee, suffered a breakdown of his car and had to be towed to the village. While Claude Jackson, on his way to Desmond to attend a wedding anniversary, ran out of gasoline and had to telephone a garage for a supply, completing a week's chapter of motor happenings.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Milligan, living on the Centreville road, have sold their farm to Harold Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Thompson, Lake Road. Mr. and Mrs. Milligan are expected to locate in the village here, where Mr. Milligan will carry on an insurance business.

Saturday being the last day of grace allowed for payment of taxes before a percentage was added, a large number of taxpayers availed themselves of the opportunity to pay their taxes to escape any addition.

On Saturday, December 15th, Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Bell were celebrating their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. They were the recipients of many congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Switzer, of Desmond, were also celebrating on the same day their wedding anniversary.

Practice has been going on space during the last several weeks for the annual public school concert on Friday afternoon, followed by the annual Sunday School Christmas Tree and entertainment in the Community Hall. A gala night for the children.

ODESSA

Odessa, December 15. — Mrs. Wm. Tallis spent Sunday the guest of Mr. Fred Porter and family, Elginburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Mohan spent the week end as guests of the former's sister, Mrs. Donald Dawson, and Mr. Dawson, Deseronto.

Mrs. Champ. Smith is visiting her son, Bruce Smith, and Mrs. Smith, Cataraqui.

Mrs. W. C. Jenkins has returned from spending the past month the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. G. Ettinger, and Mr. Ettinger, Kingston.

Mrs. Percy Lemmon returned last Sunday from spending the past week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Forbes, Kaladar.

Miss Jean Milling, of Napanee, spent the week end the guest of her grandfather, Mr. J. A. Bell, and Mrs. Bell.

Miss Laura Amos, of Harrowsmith, and Ronald Smith, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Smith.

A wedding of much interest was recently solemnized at Elmira, N.Y., when Miss Hazel Watts, daughter of Mr. John Watts, and Mrs. Watts, and Mr. A. Booth, of Wells Bridge, N.Y., were united in marriage. Dr. and Mrs. Watts were residents of the village for some time, and their many friends wish the happy couple health and happiness. They will reside at Wells Bridge, the home of the groom.

Last Saturday morning the mercury dropped to 6 degrees below and the boys are enjoying skating and hockey.

Inspector Mr. S. Truscott, of Kingston, visited the Public School last Wednesday.

The Women's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Albert Harriman last Wednesday afternoon, with a large attendance. The meeting proved to be one of the most interesting held for some time.

The Public School pupils have completed their box, consisting of clothing, story books, toys and candy, which was taken to Napanee Thursday morning, and left in care of Mrs. Reddick, to be distributed among the children of Northern Ontario, who are greatly in need of Christmas cheer. The pupils are worthy of praise for the noble part taken by them, and their excellent contributions.

A delightful entertainment was given by the Pals C. G. I. T. group in the United Church Sunday School room last Friday evening. The main feature was a 4-act play, "Two Christmas Boxes," which was skillfully executed. Those taking part were the Misses Marie Amey, Ethel Sandwexler, Helen Stagg, Nina Rogers, Jean Ravelle, Jean Stagg, Maude Cairns, Elsie Wallace, Dorothy Smith, Hilda Rabsod and Mr. Lyle Fawcett. Between the acts a very fine reading was given by Miss Jean Milling, and duets by Mrs. Gilbert, Miss Winnie Cairns and Miss Helen Sproule and Mrs. Stanley Sproule. The piano accompanist was read by Miss Eria Robinson. The organist, Mrs. Robt. Cairns, presided at the piano during the evening. Mr. W. R. Lake has accepted a position with the Abramsky firm, Kingston.

BAY CIRCUIT

Bay Circuit, December 17. — Oh, what lovely winter weather. There is not much snow, but enough that it might be called a white Christmas.

Your correspondent takes this opportunity of wishing to every reader of this column A Merry Christmas.

A number of the people of this circuit were in Napanee on Friday selling and buying turkeys and geese. Several of the men assisted in the work at the "pool" in the Armouries.

This is a great winter for solving the relief problem. The Township crusher is still working and some of the Township roads are wonderfully improved.

The Township Council held their last meeting for the year on Saturday. Your correspondent has heard "no gossip" re the Municipal Elections.

The Bay East Women's Missionary Society held their monthly meeting at the home of Mr. William Joyce on Thursday afternoon. The program was in charge of the retiring President, Mrs. Arthur Dean. Reading a chapter in the Study Book and hymns made up the program. The annual election of officers took place. The officers for 1935 are as follows: President, Mrs. Laura Parks; Vice Presidents, Mrs. Wm. Joyce and Mrs. Percy Furrs; Secretary, Mrs. Kenneth Hamby; Treasurer, Mrs. E. Akenbrack. The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Percy Furrs. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Joyce invited those in attendance to the dining room, where lunch was served.

Mr. Harold Lines is spending a week or two with friends at Gretna.

The Gretna Public School Christmas entertainment will be given in Gretna Church this Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock.

The Bethany Young People are planning to give their play, "Little Things," in Grace United Church Sunday School rooms, Napanee, on Friday, December 28th, at 8 p.m.

The Bethany Sunday School Christmas entertainment will be given in their church this Friday evening, December 21st, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. David Andrews have moved from Gretna to the Bartlett farm, on the bay.

Reports are that Mr. J. Smith is slowly recovering from his recent operation, and expects to return home this week.

The pot luck supper at Bethany on Wednesday evening was a great success. It was a real banquet, and everybody had everything they could eat. The program was also very helpful, consisting of vocal and musical numbers by Doris Davis, John Davis, Ronnie Miller, Harry Clark; readings by Ronnie Miller and Wilson Goodman; negro sketch by Florence Goodman and Doris Joyce, and an address by the minister. It was one of the most successful gatherings held by the Ladies' Aid this year.

The Bay West Women's Missionary Society held their monthly meeting at the home of the President, Mrs. H. Dillenbeck, last Wednesday. The program was of a Christmas nature, with suitable readings and an address by the Study Book. The officers for the year 1935 were re-appointed, and are as follows: President, Mrs. H. Dillenbeck; Vice Presidents, Mrs. A. C. Parks and Mrs. F. Parks; Secretary, Mrs. James Robertson; Treasurer, Mrs. J. Gould. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Dillenbeck served lunch, and an enjoyable time was spent by all present.

Mrs. C. B. Parks left a few days ago to spend the winter with her daughter in Toronto.

Mr. William Bell is better again, after his recent illness.

The Bethany Young People presented their play, "Little Things," in Hay Bay Church on Friday evening. There was a large and appreciative audience. The players presented the play in their usual good form. Between the acts, vocal numbers were given by Verna Huyck, Doris Davis, John Davis and Ronnie Miller. At the close of the programme, Hay Bay Ladies' Aid served lunch. The financial returns for the evening were very gratifying.

Mr. W. H. Dillenbeck was in Belleville on Thursday night, attending a meeting of the Executive of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association. Mr. Dillenbeck is Vice President.

The Hay Bay Sunday School Christmas entertainment will be held in their church this Thursday evening, December 20th, at 8 o'clock. A splendid program is being prepared.

The annual meeting of Hay Bay W. M. A. Aid is being held this week at the home of the President, Mrs. Wilfred McCabe.

The Sand Hill Ladies' Aid are having their Christmas meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Oliver, this Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock. Everybody invited.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Anderson Young People's Union was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Griffiths, last Tuesday evening. There was a splendid attendance. The programme was all a very helpful nature. Social half hour was very amusing, as each member had what they were asked to do. Arrangements were made for the Christmas meeting, to be held in the church on Tuesday evening. At the close, lunch was served and a very enjoyable social time was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harnden spent Sunday with friends in Picton.

Rev. J. R. and Mrs. Becker were in Kingston on Monday, looking up the sick at Rockwood and the General Hospitals.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SNAPSHOTING CHRISTMAS

THE only trouble with making pictures of Christmas doings is that the day goes ah fast. Before we know it, chances for rare shots have come and gone—gone, some of them, never to return, next year or ever. For babies will grow up and friends will move away.

So plan now for a few good shots this Christmas, shots that will mean, inescapably, Christmas, 1934.

To do the job up brown, you'll probably need to call all of your snapshooting talent into play. For there'll be interiors as well as outdoor shots, daytime and nighttime pictures, close-ups and long shots.

For example:

Holly wreaths at the door and in the windows. Shoot them from the outside, at night, with lights arranged to bring out their full importance. A time-exposure from the outside, shooting in through the window at the lighted room, will give you a fine silhouette of the wreath in the window. Ask one of the youngsters to stand very still at the window during the exposure; that will add the necessary "human interest".

Trimming the tree. This will probably be a long shot, taken from far enough away to show the whole tree and the busy decorators. In all likelihood, a photoflash-type bulb will be your best reliance for this one.

Hanging the stockings at the mantel. A photoflash or photoflood type lamp in the fireplace (the fire itself, we hope, being out) will illumine the figures of children as they hang up their hopeful stockings. Be sure that the direct rays of the light do not strike your camera's lens.

A close-up of the piled-up gifts, before the children—or the grown-ups, for that matter—attack them. This will be another photoflood picture. If there are no people in the picture, you can close down the aperture of your lens and give a longer exposure than usual—half a minute or so, depending on the amount of the light and its distance from the centre of the picture.

Then, of course, a picture of the beautiful confusion of present-opening time. Don't let the tidy housekeeper deter you from getting the scene as it actually is. The more littered, the better.

If there are children, get a snap of each surrounded with his gifts. And there's no reason why every other member of the family shouldn't have the same treatment. If Sister has a new wrist-watch, see to it that it shows very plainly.

If yours is a neighborhood where the folks make much of outside decorations, with illuminated trees and such, you'll find that time-exposures of a minute or so will give you excellent pictures of the various lawn displays. Here, as in practically all shots, a tripod will come in very handily.

And if carol singers come your way, get a shot of them busily caroling away. A photoflash type lamp, in a hand-battery holder, will make this shot easy.

No—you needn't spend the whole time with camera in hand. But a few, well-chosen snaps will be very much worth the time they require. Far better to spend those few minutes than lose the fleeting, unique opportunities altogether. Right?

Patients Play Patience as Health Returns

The game of "Patience" provides one means of whiling away a sick-room hour, but there are many other diversions open to those who are ill and put away when interest wanes. Another form of "Patience" is being played by the inmates of the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives, the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptives at Hamilton, there is a difference—they can't save off when they wish.

Here is the three-sentence for the real victims of tuberculosis, the never-ending fight is carried on for the lives of men, women and children. Over a thousand patients are being cared for in these hospitals where kindly doctors and nurses smile with their patients as gains in weight and strength. There is hope for their recovery if friends continue the voluntary contributions of other years for Christmas Seal Sale. Everybody can help by sending toward their upkeep and the three hospitals must largely depend upon gifts if the work is to continue. Will you please assist in this great work by sending what you can to George Reid, Treasurer, Gage Institute, 223 College Street, Toronto 2.

Puts a Halo on Another Head

By Christopher G. Hazard

Artist Finds New Place For Circle Because of a Servant to Mankind

DAVID SPENCER looked again at his watch with some anxiety. The hospitality of the old southern home had been lavish, the exhibition of his paintings has been successful beyond his hopes, there had been congratulations, and flowers, and commissions. Quite sweet sentions. Charmed by the quaintness and beauty and customs and scenes new to him, the artist longed to linger, and was loath to leave the old city. But the northern train that he must take was almost due, the station was distant, and his host had seemingly forgotten all about it, until they suddenly appeared with apologies and delivered him to the black coach and the family coach. Fortunately, the train, hindered with its load of Christmas cheer was late, also, so that when it moved on, Spencer was among its passengers.

The artist's curious landscape drew him back to study reflection, and he found himself reviewing the sights and experiences of his visit with pleasant amusement. Again he witnessed the bargaining of Uncle Remus and the old market. "Is you got enny eggs?" "I ain't sed dat I ain't." "I ain't axed is yo' ain't, I axed yer ain't yo' is." He recalled the curious operations of the revival meeting that had so illustrated the picturesqueness of negro character and hummed to himself the song that had there been so intensely sung:

Dere's a halo in His hald,
A halo, oh my Lawd.
But dere's one for me He sed,
A crown ob glory wen I'm daid.
A halo, oh my Lawd.
Dat's de kind ob hat ter git,
A halo, oh my Lawd.
In rain or shine it's boun' ter fit,
I sholy am a-wantin' hit,
A halo, oh my Lawd.
And I kin feel hit sprouttin' now
A halo, oh my Lawd.
A crown ob shinin' on my brow,
Each time I hits Him I mek a bow,
A halo, oh my Lawd.

As the train sped on the artist's reminiscences were interrupted by the voice of the conductor and one of the passengers. "But this train does not stop at Redfield," the conductor was saying as he looked at the old man's ticket. "It must sure stop this time," answered the passenger; "I just got to see Jim once more before he goes. I only got the message this morning." Then with him a merry Christmas and a happy New Year where he's goin'."

The conductor hesitated, then seemed to yield as he passed on, and the old man went back in his seat, unaware of the atmosphere of sympathy around him. Shortly after the bell rope was pulled, the train drew to a halt, and kindly looks followed him down the aisle and on to the platform of the little station.

The incident was barely finished and the train had attained but little headway when there was a sudden and terrible jolt, followed by a crash like the bumping of the cars over the ties, then a stop and an affrighted silence, broken by the voice of the Pullman porter, crying out, "We've run through an open switch and we's wrecked, but ne' min', de train an' standin' on de ground." Baggage cars and dining car were off and broken, but the Pullmans remained on the track. "If we hadn't stopped at Redfield," said the conductor, "we'd 'a' been going forty miles an hour and all heaped up at the bottom of the embankment."

In the artist's studio today there is a picture of the Christmas Christ with the halo that believing love has placed upon His head. And just below it another halo rests upon the head of an old negro, pictured there because of his unconscious but real service of mankind.

BEAT BEAUTY PARLOR FOR CHRISTMAS TIME

We buy wreathes for the window, tinsel for the Christmas tree, holly for packages and flowers, for the table, but what about giving some attention to our faces?

Have you ever thought that?

Dress your face up in a smile,
Wear it late and early,
It puts the sunshine in your eyes,
And makes your hair look curly!

There is an undeniable magic in happiness — it beautifies!

Happiness makes holiday in the heart, and the face reflects it.

Better than a thousand candles is the light of cheer.

"J-O-Y" is the sign that hangs over the best beauty shop and it serves men as well as women. If you would become handsome, become joyous first.

And joy comes from living and giving with kindliness and good-will —Martha B. Thomas.

TAMWORTH

Tamworth, December 15. — On Tuesday night the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church held their annual meeting at the parsonage, with a good attendance. After a very interesting Christmas programme, and the minutes and business were dealt with, the chief item of business was the election of officers for 1935. Rev. M. R. Brown officiated at the election, which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Hall; Vice Presidents, Mrs. Gilmore, Mrs. James Wallace, Mrs. Herb. York, Mrs. F. McLaughlin; Recording Secretary, Mrs. S. S. White; Treasurer, Mrs. Stan. Haggerty. Secretaries of Departments: Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Jerry Donovan; Temperance, Mrs. A. Milligan; Supply, Mrs. Tom Mallett; Press, Mrs. A. Carscallen; Missionary Monthly, Mrs. T. J. Watters; Corresponding, Mrs. O. McCuaig; Strangers, Mrs. Dan. Gilmore; Mission Band, Mrs. M. B. Brown; Assistant, Mrs. Milner; Press Reporter, Mrs. W. G. Richmond; Pianist, Mrs. W. W. Redden; Assistant, Mrs. A. B. Thompson; Auditors, Mrs. (Dr.) Johnston and Mrs. D. McLaughlin. After the business from the new officers and the Mizpah benediction, a dainty lunch was served and a social half hour enjoyed by all.

On entering his store on Thursday morning, Mr. Edmond Hannah discovered that sneak thieves had been busy during the night and had helped themselves to a quantity of salmon, sardines, fine cut tobacco, cigarettes, chocolate bars, and other things. It was hard to say just how much had been taken. Investigations are under way by officers from Napanee.

Misses Esther Courneya and Marion Richmond, nurses-in-training at the Ontario Hospital, Kingston, spent Sunday with their parents here.

Messrs. Stan. Brown and Orval Richmond have completed the job of wiring for Hydro-electric purposes the Shields' home on Ottawa street, recently purchased by Stan. Haggerty.

SELBY

Selby, December 17. — Dr. Smith delivered a very impressive message on Sunday evening from the chancel, his text, "Glory to God in the Highest, and on Earth Good Will toward Men".

Next Sunday the Sabbath School and evening service will be withdrawn. A children's service in the charge of the pastor, will be held at 3 p.m. The singing will be led by children's choir.

The annual Sunday School entertainment will be held in the Sunday School Hall on Wednesday evening at 7.30. A splendid programme will be presented. Come and enjoy a good time and support the school in its effort to promote the Christmas spirit.

Mrs. J. B. Denison and Mrs. Cecil Denison were in Kingston for a few days last week, attending the U. F. O. convention.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hudgins received a message from Dr. Ronald Hudgins, of Kingsville, on Monday last, stating that Mrs. Hudgins was very ill in the hospital. Mrs. Hudgins and Carman left on Tuesday morning. Carman returned home on Saturday, and reports that there is very little improvement in the condition of the patient.

The Government surveyors were here on Thursday striking the line for the new highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Windover, of Alberta, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Windover on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark, of Bethany, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McConnell.

The final session of the Township Council was held in the Council Chamber on Saturday morning. General satisfaction prevails.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. J. E. Hudgins, who has passed another mile stone along life's highway. A family dinner party was held on Sunday, in honor of the occasion.

Mrs. Walter Doidge is spending a few days in Roblin, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Arnold.

The teachers and pupils of the various Sections are preparing for their annual Christmas concerts. We wish them success.

NEWBURGH

Newburgh, December 17. — Mrs. Stanley Embury was the guest of Mrs. Willard Embury on Monday.

Mrs. J. Moore left on Wednesday to visit her daughter, Mrs. Palmer, of Shelburne, Vermont, for a few weeks.

The High School concert was a success. There was a large crowd in attendance and a splendid programme was presented by the pupils.

On December 10th little Miss Doris Jayne gave a party, it being the occasion of her seventh birthday. At four o'clock refreshments were served and the table looked very pretty in pink and white decorations. She received many beautiful gifts, both from the little girls and grown ups. The children present were the little girls of her class at school, Francis Switzer, Doreen Card, Doris Ward, Leta Cummings, Gwen Dowdell. The afternoon was spent in playing games.

At the United Church service on Sunday evening the minister, Rev. Anderson, gave a splendid address on "The Lord hath need of him". Next Sunday night the service will be, as the custom is, especially Christmas, "The White Gift" service. All gifts arranged in white will be distributed by the young people Christmas evening. Special music. Everyone welcome.

Mr. Ed. Pile, of the construction camp at Kaladar, spent last week at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Pile.

Mr. Willard Embury went to the General Hospital, Kingston, last week and had a very serious operation, which was successful, and he is gaining nicely.

Rev. T. H. P. Anderson officiated at the funeral service of George Nelson Abrams, at Camden East, on Sunday afternoon.

Many friends in the village were sorry to hear that Mr. John Morris, living north of Strathcona, took a bad stroke and was removed to the Hotel Dieu for treatment.

The Ladies' Aid of the United Church convened on Wednesday evening of last week at the home of Mrs. Geo. Paul, with a good attendance. President in charge. Opening in the usual way. Dr. A. R. Dafoe's Story Of the Famous Dionne Quintuplets' Birth

As Reported in the New York Times

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, who found himself in the white spotlight of publicity after he delivered the Dionne Quintuplets in Northern Ontario, last May, made his first public appearance in New York recently before an audience of 3,000 in Carnegie Hall.

He did not like it; one could tell that. A kind, sensible little man, he went through his second day in the great city without losing his half-humorous, half-skeptical viewpoint in the midst of all the fuss that has been made about him.

On Sunday night he was the guest of George M. Gales, head of the Liggett Drug Company that arranged his visit to the city. He was up at 9 a.m. as is his custom in his native backwoods. He had explored the estate before any one else in the household was awake.

With his brother, Dr. William Dafoe, and his sister-in-law he motored back to the city and at 10 a.m. behind a motorcycle escort, was driven to the Empire State Building. Obviously he was thrilled as the elevator shot to the thirty-second floor, but, never voluble, he withheld comment.

He shook hands with former Governor Smith and the two began a discussion of the Dionne babies. Mr. Smith seemed to have difficulty with the word "quintuplets" and kept calling them "those Quintuplets." The doctor corrected him each time to them as "the quints."

Mr. Smith wanted to know if the babies lost weight and the doctor said they did, only to regain it, as normal children do.

"Well," said Mr. Smith, "if they'd been to the public dinner I attended last night they wouldn't lose any weight."

Dr. Dafoe invited the ex-Governor to Ontario and Mr. Smith said he might make the trip—next Summer. "Too cold now," he said.

From the observation tower of the skyscraper, Dr. Dafoe looked out over the city and then down at the base. He seemed fascinated by the panorama, but had little to say about it. He is not the kind to try to say original things.

A Goodyear blimp hailed by, high against the murky sky.

"I'd like to try a ride in one of those things," he said, wistfully.

But he got no encouragement. His advisers — think he is too valuable to risk in the air. He was determined. He wanted to fly down to Washington to visit the Canadian Minister, but they objected. After a long argument, however, he had his way and the flight was arranged.

After his visit to the skyscraper he returned to his suite in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, spoke at a private luncheon, attended by physicians and nurses, then retired to his room for perusal of the newspapers. He skipped most of the stories written about his visit.

Visits Carnegie Hall

Late in the afternoon, with a few of his friends, he went to Carnegie Hall to test the amplifiers. He had never spoken before so large an audience in his life, and seemed shy and nervous about it.

The audience, largely made up of middle-aged men and women, paid him the tribute of listening thoughout in a silence so complete that veteran reporters said they had never known anything like it. Afterward Dr. Dafoe set out on a visit to a night club.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe gave the first complete picture of the life and habits of the celebrated Dionne infants, their birth, early care and present condition in his talk at Carnegie Hall. After expressing his pleasure at "my first real holiday in twenty-five years," he said that he considered the entire affair "a modern fairy tale with a medical flavor."

"The only available data as to previous multiple births in the Dionne family shows that on the wife's side there were three sets of twins among her first cousins," Dr. Dafoe said. "The husband's side produced two sets of twins, but these are rather distant relatives to the Dionne family.

"When twins or more babies are born at the same time, they are known in medical terms as being identical or fraternal. Identical babies mean that the babies, no matter how many, have all originated from a single fertilized egg and the babies all look alike from birth. This similarity in physical appearance continues throughout life and some experts in twining feel that even habits, thought and actions are similar.

"One outstanding British surgeon has remarked that if tumors of a certain kind are found din one twin, they are invariably found in the other also.

"Before birth identical twins receive their nourishment and eliminate the waste products of their bodies through a common placental mechanism in a circumscribed area known as the 'afterbirth.' This single area communicated with the Dionne babies through five separate channels which are called umbilical cords. In identical multiple births the babies are always of the same sex.

Fraternal Babies Not Alike

Young Woman Gathers in Homeless Tots for Christmas Festivities

THE dining room of this exquisite home was beautiful, spacious and furnished in the best of taste. Its massive Jacobean high-backed chairs, long table, draperies all harmonized. But that quality which puts one at ease was lacking. It looked austere and unfriendly. The servants had decorated the table and room profusely, trying to give a little of the Christmas atmosphere. The forbidding look still seemed to itself, though. From the length of the table and amount of edibles piled upon it, one might have judged there was to be quite a party, but only four places were set.

The dinner going sounded. A middle - aged, well - dressed man and woman appeared.

"And you say Thelma went out in the car?"

"She didn't say where she was going, Robert," replied his wife.

"She probably thought Hubert was taking too long in getting over here, so she took it upon herself to go after him."

"Undoubtedly," asserted Mrs. Premont.

Thelma came soon bursting in upon her folks, coat and hat still on. To be sure, she had Hubert with her.

"Dad, mother," she excitedly exclaimed, "come and see what I have out here!"

She led her folks into the front hall. To their astonishment, they found the butter and a small child in rompers seated on the floor, chubby fingers in the butter.

"Well, where did you get these?" said Mr. Premont in his blustering way.

"Is like this, Dad," began Thelma with a rather apologetic air: "When I came downstairs this afternoon and saw that dining room table heaped up with good things—well, I just went for Hubert; together we found the name of the nursery or home for whatever you call it in the city and we went over there. I had the matron give me half a dozen children and here they are." She pointed to the group in front of her, who were busily eating in their surroundings. "Children, this is my father and this my mother. Now, Dad, here is Tony, Rose, Frederick, Charles, Anna and Marie," as she gathered the children to her. "Now, children, we are going in and have dinner. Let's see, Hubert, you take Frederick and Charles. Dad take Tony; Mother, you take Anna, and I will have Rose and Marie."

The children, ranging from six to eight, were rather shy until they set eyes on all the goodies on the table; then they were all excitement. Thelma winked at Hubert, and they looked at her dad. He was busy keeping meat, mash cut up for Tony, supplying his numerous other demands, and keeping up with his many questions. The children were fairly stuffed when they climbed down from the table.

"We are going to play some games now," said Thelma. "Hubert, you be on that side of the circle; come on, Dad and Mother." But in amount of coaxing could bring Dad and Mother. Dad thought he had done his share.

"What do you think?" said Thelma to the children a little while later,

"Hubert tells me he was just in the library, and Santa left a Christmas tree and some gifts for you in there. They all made a rush for the door.

"Where do you suppose she got these things?" queried Mr. Premont of his wife.

"I can't imagine," she replied: "this must have been the planning of more than today."

It came time for Thelma to give the final announcement that they were to leave for the home. Before doing so she surveyed the scene before her: There was Dad, on his hands and knees, crawling about the floor with Tony, playing train. Tony had succeeded in winning over Mr. Premont. There sat her mother, reading a story to three of the youngsters, and Hubert—she could hardly believe her eyes — sat cuddling a little sleeping unknown. Ah, dear! She went over and sat down on the arm of his chair.

"You dear old thing," she said, putting her arm around him; then, "Hubert, look at Dad. Won't you say this day has been a success?"

Bacon Export Gains Attest Value of Empire Pacts

Ottawa. — How the Empire agreements have worked out to the advantage of Canadian farmers, is indicated today in a statement by Hon. R. B. Hanson, Minister of Trade and Commerce, showing an export of 109,129,000 pounds, valued at $17,-810,000 in eleven months of the present year.

"We have almost reached the total of 110,000,000 pounds for the 12 months we had 122,000,000 pounds to Great Britain. Should we reach that figure we will have exported more bacon than we ever did in any one year, so we anticipate, we shall break that peak record.

"This is one of the important things that we accomplished under the Empire agreements. After 1932 the exports of bacon and hams to the United Kingdom fell off rapidly and in that year was down to 36,702,600 pounds of the value of $6,580,000. We had become one of the smaller contributors to the food in the British market.

"We tackled that problem successfully and now in 1934 we are second only to Denmark in the United Kingdom from a bacon point of view. What that means to Canada is obvious," concluded Mr. Hanson.

Ontario Will Approve Old Age Pension Plan

County Judges Will Pass on Applicaaion

Toronto.—Introduction of a new system of dealing with old age pensions in Ontario on January 1st, will save the Provincial Government $35,000 and municipalities almost $80,000. Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and municipal affairs, last week, told a delegation which called to protest against the new plan.

Under the new system County Judges rather than local boards will decide on applications for pensions.

"It is no crackpot idea we are introducing," Mr. Croll told the delegation. "It is in practice almost everywhere else but in Ontario. We are convinced that it is the fairest and most efficient method of dealing with pension cases."

At present the average cost of putting an application through the local board is from $8 to $10, the Minister said adding "this is utterly prohibitive. Some new method had to be devised."

The principal argument of delegates against the change was that the County Judge could not possess the intimate knowledge of the individual cases which was open to the members of the present boards. Mr. Croll countered with a suggestion that in Ontario any pensioner has a chance of local favoritism and antagonism and leave the decision to an unbiased judge.

Winter School Will Be Held In Belleville

An event of unusual importance in connection with Young People's Work is the Annual Winter School of the Bay of Quinte Conference. Three years ago under the dynamic leadership of Rev. Ernest Hanston, the first Winter School was held, and ten successive years it was held in Cobourg. Then with a lapse of a year it was continued in Belleville. Last year the school held its sessions in Bridge St. United Church and this year, from January 14th to 18th, it will hold its sessions in the same historic church.

The week is one of rare opportunity offered to Young People, a week of study, inspiration, fellowship and fun. Among some of the special features for this year's school is the address by Rev. Dr. Thomas Marshall, of Metropolitan Church, Toronto, on "Jesus in a World That" by Rev. Dr. Lightfoot, a "Devotional Period" will be conducted each day, also Mission study, under capable leaders, along with practical methods in Young People's Work and Boys and Girls' work.

To any young person or group of young people who can arrange to attend, the week will be one of high privilege and opportunity. The president of this year's school is Rev. H. W. Gardner, Port Hope and the Secretary is Rev. C. H. Ferguson, Northport.

Richmond Reeve, Mr. A. McCutcheon Entertains Council

On Tuesday evening of last week Reeve and Mrs. McCutcheon, Roblin, entertained the Council and officials of Richmond Township and their wives, at a turkey dinner. It was held at the home of Reeve and Mrs. Arch. Graham. The guests numbered about thirty.

Following the dinner addresses were given by several of those present. Mr. H. A. Wood, Clerk and Treasurer of the Township, acted as chairman. Reeve McCutcheon also Councillors Kinnear, Winters and Martin, gave brief surveys of work of the 1934 Council. Assessor Provins, in his jovial manner, pointed out that it was only by careful assessing that such a record was made possible. The financial part of the report of the township for 1934 shows a very excellent position with a balance of about $7000.00 on hand, no liabilities whatever, besides a trust fund of $17,500.00, invested in Dominion of Canada bonds, the revenue from which goes to schools. Richmond Township has no debenture debt whatever. County rate for 1934 all prepaid.

Councillor and Mrs. Exley of Napanee were also present. Councillor Exley gave an exceedingly interesting talk on Napanee's administration for the past year, stressing the very healthy condition of the town's finances. Rev. Smith of Selby, also Rev. Craig of Roblin, were present and made short addresses, as did also Mrs. D. Richmond and road superintendent D. Hudgins of Selby.

Ex-Warden Dr. Tummon gave a short talk on his motor trip through the Maritimes this summer. The remainder of the evening was spent in music, singing and games with Mrs. (Rev.) Smith and Mrs. (Rev.) Craig leading the sides.

At about 11:00 p.m., the happy party broke up after giving a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation to Reeve and Mrs. McCutcheon, for the very enjoyable evening.

Christmas Celebrated In the Churches Of the Town

The Christmas festival was celebrated in all the churches of the town in special services. In the three United Church, on Sunday, the ministers delivered Christmas messages and the choir rendered music suitable to the occasion.

In St. Mary Magdalene Anglican Church and St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church, the festival was observed at Christmas eve midnight services and again on Christmas morning.

The churches all looked especially attractive with decorations of evergreens and red garlands.

Trinity Church

At Trinity United Church, in the morning, Rev. Dean Pawson delivered a sermon on the "Facts and Ideals of the Christmas Story." Christmas carols were sung by the choir, "Silent Night" and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." The service was entirely devotional. The choir rendered the cantata "The Christmas King." In addition to chorus and solo parts duets were sung by Mrs. W. Calvert and Lyndon Gray. Miss Olive McMillan and Mr. E. B. Weiss, and solo parts were taken by Mrs. Gray, Mrs. P. B. Mills, Miss Viola Brennan and Mrs. A. B. Sinclair.

As decorations for the church, tall evergreen trees were placed in every available corner of the altar and choir railings were festooned with evergreen boughs and garlands of red flowers and candles.

St. Andrew's Church

St. Andrew's Church was decorated in a most artistic manner with a profusion of evergreens, boughs, poinsettias and red wreaths, giving the church a very Christmasike appearance. Rev. A. J. Wilson, in charge of the morning servire, delivered a Christmas message. Mrs. M. A. Eppiett sang, "And there were Shepherds," and Miss Mary Daly sang, "The Angels' Song." In addition two carols were sung by the choir.

In the evening Rev. Dean of Napanee took charge of the service. Mr. M. A. Eppiett read the story of "The Other Wise Man," by Henry Van-Dyke and the choir sang several Christmas numbers.

Miss Helen Daly presided at the organ.

Grace Church Services

The service in Grace United Church followed the usual form in the morning with Rev. R. R. T. Richards, the minister in charge. Mr. Richards delivered a Christmas sermon and the musical numbers were an anthem by the choir. "The First Christmas Morn," and a solo by Mrs. Harold Dennison, "Shepherds in the Field of Night." In the evening a carol service in song and story was presented. Carols were sung by the choir, interspersed with the Christmas story told by Mr. Richards. The choir sang an anthem "O Come all ye Faithful." A male chorus and a male quartette sang numbers and solos were sung by Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Harold Dennison.

St. Mary Magdalene Church

The Christmas services at St. Mary Magdalene Church included a midnight celebration of the Holy Communion at 11.45 p.m. Christmas eve, when the service was fully choral, using Maunder's setting. Preceding the holy communion and following the processional hymn, carols were sung by the choir and congregation. The choir rendered "Semper's Anthem. "Glory to God in the Highest," and Mr. William Owen sang a solo. The Holy Communion service was again repeated on Christmas morning at 10.30 o'clock.

The chancel of the church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and garlands of red.

St. Patrick's Church

The Christmas mass was sung by Rev. Father Healy on Christmas eve, and was well attended by members of the parish. The beautiful church was tastefully decorated with evergreens for the occasion.

On Christmas Day, mass was celebrated at three different hours. Monsignor McDonald, the rector and the assistant, Rev. Father Healy, officiated.

Miss Agnes Cavanaugh presided at the organ.

Christmas Concerts In the Sunday Schools

The Christmas concerts and annual Christmas treats for the children of the Sunday Schools of the town, took a variety of forms this year. At every church considerable time and effort was expended by the workers, in providing entertainment of an interesting nature for both the children and the adults.

The first concert in the town was in Grace Church on Tuesday evening December 18th. It was held in the auditorium of the church which was well filled by members of the congregation and citizens of the town. Mr. G. F. Smith, the Sunday School superintendent, was chairman. The program was of a varied nature, featuring particularly the junior members of the school. Choruses and exercises were given by the primary department vocal solos were sung by three small girls, Misses McLaughlin, Ruth Scott and Marguerite Loucks. In some of the older girls and boys, a playlette and drills were given and an organ solo was played by Gilda Barnes. The closing number was a lovely pantomime, "Holy Night."

St. Andrew's Church

The Christmas concert in connection with St. Andrew's Church Sunday School was held on Thursday evening, in the Sunday School room, Mr. A. MacGregor ,the superintendent of the school, presided as chairman. The program was opened with orchestral selections under the direction of Miss Leamy, at the piano. The pupils of the school were then presented in the cantata "The Christmas Guest." The main feature of the evenings entertainment was the pageant, "At Christmas Castle," for which about forty of the scholars had been trained by Mrs. W. T. MacKenzie and the teachers of the school. Lovely fancy costumes, choruses and musical numbers contributed largely to the effectiveness of the presentation. In addition, recitations and songs were given by junior members and the Caldwell children took part in a musical trio.

At the close of the concert, gifts were given the children from the decorated Christmas tree.

At Trinity Church

At Trinity United Church the annual Christmas entertainment took the in the form of a Christmas party, at which a large number of the children and their friends were present. The whole entertainment was held in the dining hall of the church. The tables were prettily decorated for the occasion and musical numbers were given by the primary department and junior members of the school, and Miss Laura Rockwell told the Christmas story to the children. Following the program some supervised games were played by the children and then the event of the evening, the arrival of Santa Claus, took place. Candy, fruit, candies and nuts and oranges were distributed, lunch was served to the children and adults.

Beaver Santa Claus Fund Helps Many Children

Distribution Made Monday

Through the medium of The Beaver Santa Claus Fund, to which so many organizations and individuals of the community generously subscribed, Christmas was made a happy day for many children and families in the town.

Preparations, which have been carried on for weeks past, came to a climax on Monday, when the distribution of the gifts and Christmas dinners was made. Under the capable supervision of Miss Jessie Leamy, everything was made ready in plenty of time for the members of the Rotary Club to make the distribution during the afternoon on Monday.

Three hundred and forty children were given a Christmas treat. Large boxes of groceries were included in the five pounds of meat, 1 lb. of minced meat, cabbage, beans, butter, a tin of tomatoes, sugar, flour and tea. Potatoes were not included, because in most cases the families have a supply on hand at this season. Monday, Miss Leamy and her helpers were at the Town Hall, giving personal supervision to the distribution, and looking after last minute calls for assistance.

Each year members of the Rotary Club assist in sending out the gifts and every practically all those in charge of the administration of the fund. Without the work and effort expended by Miss Leamy and those who help her throughout the year, the task could not possibly be accomplished in such an effective and thorough manner.

Chief Watts, Douglas Chambers and members of the Town Hall staff rendered valuable assistance in distributing and preparing the gifts.

Two Chimney Fires During past Week

During the past week the Napanee Fire Brigade, answered two fire alarm calls. On Thursday a chimney fire at the home of Kenneth Bell, on John Street, near the C. N. R. crossing was the reason for the first call. Saturday morning, another call was put in, when the chimney at Grass's Feed Store, burned out. Neither fire did any damage to the buildings.

Administrative Changes Children's Aid Societies Announced

A new policy announced by Hon. David Croll, Minister of Public Welfare, will institute changes in the administration of Children's Aid Shelters and Societies in Ontario, next year.

Some of the features of the changes are:—

Close inspection and regulation of local children's Aid Societies by the Provincial Department.

Classification of local societies according to their merit, local Superintendents receiving grants from the Government, according to their classification. Main emphasis of the new policy directed toward placing children in foster homes, either free or boarding.

Children's shelters to be used, so far as possible, only as clearing centres before placement.

Employment of qualified, trained staff by local societies.

Children in shelters to be covered by liability insurance.

School Attendance Act to apply to all wards of Children's Aid Societies.

Complete, easily understood records of every child — his parents ,religious faith and treatment — admitted to a shelter must be kept.

Children in foster homes must be visited regularly by qualified wardship.

58th Annual Convention Dairymen's Association To be Held in Napanee

Will Meet on Thursday and Friday, Jan. 3rd and 4th

An event of considerable interest to farmers of the county, will be the annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, which will be held in Napanee, on January 3rd and 4th, 1935. The district comprising the territory covered by the Association, includes all the counties east of Toronto. Several hundred delegates will likely be in attendance, besides many other visitors of the surrounding country. The convention will be an opportunity for dairy farmers to obtain some valuable information from speakers well versed in the business.

The convention sessions commence at 10 a.m. on Thursday, January 3rd, when the President, W. A. Edwards, of Aultsville, will give his address and committees will be appointed. The afternoon session at 2 o'clock, will include the cheese and butter scoring contest and among other addresses, will be one by Dr. J. F. Booth, Commissioner Economics, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The evening meeting on the opening day will be addressed by Mayor Geo. J. Thain of Napanee, the local members of Parliament, Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, and Dr. T. Christie President of the Ontario Agricultural College., Guelph.

Friday will be cheese and buttermakers' day. Several addresses will be given in the morning. L. A. Zufelt superintendent of the Eastern Dairy School, will speak on "Saving the Cheese Industry." Joseph Burgess, Chief Produce Grader, and Geo. H. Barr, Director of Dairying, Toronto, will also speak.

At the afternoon session on Friday, J. P. Singleton, Dairy Commissioner, and Dr. A. C. Fraser, Secretary of the National Dairy Council, and Prof. A. L. Gibson, B.S.A., Guelph, will be the speakers.

In Canada the European earwig is found only in the province of British Columbia.

In spite of the fact that China does produce great quantities of wheat and could produce more, it does not export it, for her domestic supplies can compete under natural conditions with imported wheat.

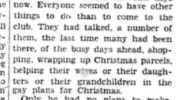
His Christmas Spent at Club

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Lonesome Rich Man Finds Happiness in Playing Santa Claus

IT WAS SITTING alone in his fashionable club that he was quite deserted. It had been for some days now. Everyone seemed to have other things to do than to come to the club. They had talked, a number of them, the last time many had been there, of the busy days ahead, shopping, wrapping up Christmas parcels, helping their wives or their daughters or their grandchildren in the gay plans for Christmas.

Only he had no plans to make. He gave his employees, and a number of others with whom he came in contact, money at Christmas time that fulfilled his Christmas demands.



Other years he hadn't felt it so much as this year. He could leave the club, perhaps a night his own books, in his own digs, he would not feel so lonely. He would not dine at the club, for to do so some stress and crackers and coffee at home. His excellent valet could always prepare a little supper for him.

Outside of the club his chauffeur and car were waiting.

He got in and sat down on the soft, luxuriously upholstered cushions and the chauffeur started the engine, shutting out the cold, cold Christmas time air and the noise of the streets — the noise of many voices of many people going shopping, with the higher voices of children riding on their fathers' shoulders.

He felt very much alone and lonely once in awhile above the din.

His soul seemed to ache. He was alone. Rich, comfortable, luxurious alone ! No one wanted him, needed him, cared for him. He had everything which money could buy; he had enough money to buy everything he wanted.

No, not everything ! He wanted love and affection. he wanted to be part of all this noise and under the luxurious confinement of his car and that he couldn't buy. Mix with the crowds ? Yes, he could do that, but not as one of them. Only as a lonely man who had a fat bank account which didn't help in the slightest.

And yet couldn't it help ? Suddenly he had an inspiration. He called through the speaking tube to his chauffeur. "I think," he said, "I will get out here and walk the rest of the way home."

The chauffeur was surprised, but he was too well - trained to show surprise.

He got out before a large show where in the window was a decorated Christmas tree. He went inside the store. No longer did he feel so lonely. He, too, had a purpose in mind. He was a part of all of this now.

Tinsel, candles, red colored paper, ribbons, small toys, decorations, oh, how much he bought ! And he was filled with bundles just as was the arms of others.

It was such fun to carry bundles, too. He had never known before the joy of over - burdened arms.

Home he went carrying his beloved purchases with him. And then he summoned the janitor to the suite, which seemed filled with the Christmas cheer.

Christmas morning came. Never

the tree, for his own Santa Claus suit.

He had given the janitor money before, of course. This time he would take part in the Christmas joy of the children of the janitor.

Saturday's Market

Weather conditions on Saturday were unfavorable for a large market, even though it was the last market day before Christmas. Very few of the usual farmers who bring produce to the market were present. Geese were fairly plentiful at 15 cents per pound. A few turkeys were offered at 20 cents per pound. Pork sold at from 14 cents by the quarter and beef 6 and 7 cents.

THE END OF A YEAR

Time is without beginning and without end, divided for man's convenience into seconds, minutes, days, and years. These divisions enable us to measure the passage of time, and in the case of the years, form the end of a definite period in business. It affords an opportunity of estimating gains and losses, of making plans for the future.

Looking back over the past year, there are items on both sides of the ledger. The gains have exceeded the losses. It has not been an easy year. The uncertainty of the past four years has marked 1934. The world is still suffering from depressed prices, economic disruption, and national rivalries. The modern method of dividing exports and imports into quotas, which seemed as a way out of the trade muddle, has not solved the problem of world trade. Having interfered with the natural channels of trade, they have benefited some nations while hurting others.

Several political crises, which held the spark of a world conflagration, have been safely passed. The situation in Germany, with intrigue directed to the upsetting of Austria, held all the possibilities of a first-class war. Happily, better minds prevailed and temporarily, at least, the danger was averted.

The racial bitterness aroused over the assassination of King Alexander of Jugoslavia created a situation which, more than anything else, resembled the conditions immediately preceding the Great War. In this instance, too, the efforts of the League of Nations to secure a solution of the difficulty, was crowned with success. National passions are cooling down, and national prestige, in both Hungary and Jugoslavia, has been saved.

On the other hand, the conversations preparatory to a naval conference, have ended without accomplishing anything. The uncompromising attitude of Japan, which has given notice of abrogating the Washington Treaty, was largely responsible for the failure of the preparatory conference. Insisting on a navy which shall be equal in size to that of the United States and Britain, she had to face the opposition particularly of the United States. Great Britain finally sided with the United States and while the attitude of Japan failed to drive a wedge between the United States and Britain, it succeeded in making inevitable another naval construction race.

In Canada, the Ottawa Conference is beginning to bear fruits. Trade with the Empire has greatly increased during the year. The railroads are handling more business, and a better feeling obtained among the leaders of industry. But the Price Spreads Investigation has revealed an intolerable situation, so far as the workers of the country are concerned. While dividends have been paid and business reports progress, the men and women who do the nation's work have been receiving wages which, in many cases, are well below the subsistance line.

The conditions on the farm have shown scarcely any improvement. Prices are still low, the market is slack, and farmers are discouraged as thousands of them have had difficulty in paying their taxes.

Unemployment is still widespread and relief committments are making increasingly heavy demands on Municipalities, Provinces, and the Dominion. No solution has yet been offered for this serious and ominous situation.

Perhaps the most notable gain of the year is the new attitude on the part of political leaders in this and in other countries. At last, they have realized that the situation will not right itself by leaving things alone, in fact, we seen they will steadily grow worse. So that we may look to the future for a more vigorous and definite effort to guide, control and direct the economic forces of society, into humane and profitable channels.

In spite of all the discouragements of the past, the unconquerable faith of man in the ultimate rightness of things, and his undying hope in a better world, will not down. Assured of these and given reasonable and unselfish leadership in church, state and business, 1935 can see the beginning of that "New Heaven and New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

THANKS FROM THREE HUNDRED

We wonder if the average reader of The Beaver realizes what it means that 340 children were supplied with a Christmas stocking by the men and women who, so whole-heartedly co-operated in the work. Three hundred children constitute about 10% of our population, and probably about 25% of the child population of the town. Approximately, one out of every four children in the town were supplied with Christmas cheer by The Beaver Santa Claus Fund. Stated in that graphic way it ought to be clear, even to the most dense, that something is wrong with our civilization.

Lack of work, inadequate wages and seasonable occupation, have each their share to contribute to the general unhappy condition of the children in the town.

We hesitate to think what may happen for the future of the race, if this situation continues through the years.

We are happy, indeed, to have been the medium by which these children were given a Christmas stocking, and that over one hundred families were given a generous Christmas dinner. And yet, we know full well, how little we could have done alone. The wholehearted co-operation of the men and women, boys and girls, clubs, churches and groups, was the main factor in the success of the Christmas Fund.

On behalf of all these children who, but for you, would have been denied a visit from Santa Claus, we tender heartfelt appreciation.

An audited statement of receipts and expenditures will be published as soon as the books of the fund have been closed and duly audited.

NAPANEE TO HAVE A NEW BAR ROOM ?

There are four so-called beverage rooms in Napanee at the present time. There is a brewery warehouse and a government liquor store. With these six outlets for intoxicating liquor, it would almost seem that ample facilities had been provided to quench the thirst of the most thirsty. But it appears not. A definite effort is being made to provide still further drinking facilities.

A movement is now on foot to secure a license to sell beer and wine at the Napanee Armouries. This authority, if it is secured, will permit club members to secure beer and wine on the premises. During the week, letters have been received by many citizens in the town inviting them to become honorary members of the drinking club, at an annual fee of ten dollars. What response there has been to this appeal we have no means of finding out.

The military organizations in Napanee have, through the years, merited the wholehearted support which the community has so generously and so willingly accorded them. They have been conspicuously free from some of the things which have brought criticism of military organizations in other places. But there is a very serious danger that in this new move they will lose very much, in popular esteem and support. The straw vote taken by The Beaver, a few weeks ago, showed conclusively that popular sentiment is against the beverage rooms, and if the military authorities insist on establishing another such drinking place in the Armouries, they will have to share the public resentment against such places.

There is, however, a special reason why the men in charge of the units at the Armouries should hesitate in this proposal. Of late, the Armouries has been used by groups of boys, in their tender and most impressionable period of their lives. Boys of that age are naturally curious. They will soon discover what is going on in rooms from which they may be excluded. Whatever may be said about beer and wine for adults, at least the boys of our town, belonging to an organization which seems to make good citizens out of them, ought not to be subjected to the temptations which a beverage room, in the Armouries, would undoubtedly put in their way.

We hope that saner counsels will prevail and that the movement to secure an authority for another beverage room, will be dropped.

C. N. R. BUSINESS IMPROVES

The local C.N.R. organization, in its yearly report, shows that Napanee has shared in the generally improved business conditions. Fighting the truck business on the one hand and the busses on the other, the Government owned railroad has not, by any means, had an easy time. For several years the railroads have been on the defensive and have lost seriously to its rubber tired competitors. But, at last, the corner seems to have been turned. By inaugurating a system of excursion rates, the passenger business has shown a notable increase, and by giving certain services in connection with express and freight, this branch of the organization has likewise shown its ability to compete with the best trucks in the country.

In all this the local C.N.R. organization has had a share. For the year ending November 30th, the tonnage, in and out of the Napanee depot, amounted to 22,176 tons. The amount handled during the corresponding months, last year, was 17,446 tons, a net gain for 1934, of 4,610 tons. The revenue at the local station, for both passenger and freight, for 1934, was $119,302, while during the same period in 1933, it was $105,050, a net gain for 1934 of $14,252. These figures do not include the revenue from passenger tickets sold at the down-town office.

It is interesting to note that the increase in the amount of goods shipped from Napanee, during the past twelve months, was 1880 tons more than for the corresponding period last year.

An organization, on our town, which did $119,302 worth of business during the past year, is a considerable factor in the community life. It maintains a resident staff, whose homes are in the town. A large proportion of the money which the C. N. R. earns in Napanee is turned back in wages to employees, who spend it in local stores. Such an organization means a great deal to the community and deserves the support of all travellers and shippers.

'Round the Kitchen Stove with "Roland"

By the time you read this the premier celebration of the year will be over, or almost, for we will be cleaning the turkey and goose framed to-night for supper, in a good many homes . . . and we will talk over how well John or Mary looked, how much the kids had grown, how good the dinner and things were . . . a sort of retrospect of the highlights of yesterday . . . and there will be the usual Christmas card we've overlooked (must see to it they get a good one next year) . . . the shirt and slippers that are a size too small . . . but in the main everyone is happy and content, and after all—that's the main thing.

A very simple solution of the beer and wine question would be to rebate to the drinkers all above a certain amount of cash per gallon. In principle it would be something along the line of the refund tax given the farmer who uses gasoline for farm purposes. A form signifiar to the one used for gasoline, would be filled in by the consumer, who would give a man something to drink for life would then have an object in view. He would be able to say: "In the next three months I'm going to drink myself into a new suit of clothes," or his wife could say: "John is down town drinking a new dress for me." Drinking would take on a new aspect. A man or woman would be drinking for something beside a headache . . . It only takes a moment to figure where this would help most everyone—the merchant, the hotelman, the county (as they already get 20% of profits) and lastly, the drinker himself . . . This idea is new and is passed on solely for the benefit of those directly interested.

A short time ago, in Toronto, Rev. Dafoe filled a hall to 2,000 people and Tim Buck, ex-convict Communist spoke to 14,000. There's a lot of food for thought, right here . . . It also depends on the calibre of the listener rather than the calibre of the speaker.

Why not the Nobel Prize to Dr. Dafoe? It's a nice bit of money . . . a fine trip and a big honor. Dr. Dafoe has proved himself a big man and deserves recognition for what he has done . . . The Noble Prize has been given for less it seems to me. I would like Dr. Dafoe to have done a bigger thing in pulling those Quinne kids through than he would have done had he written "Main Street" and that book landed the author the Nobel Prize . . . I may be wrong—but—

It seems to me that the book crop for 1934 will be a record one, both quantity as well as quality. For that belated Christmas gift — or a gift at any time, can't go wrong if you get on a book! . . . . There's no special reason for books — and there never was a time when you could get so much book for so little money. The Canadian Books that every book store carries . . . never before could you purchase so much knowledge for so little . . . and they are all worth while. . . . The novels are not so good taken as a whole . . . . When you get one of these for a present, better read it before you give it. . . . Some of the "dolly-dale" ones are a little rough in spots—so go slowly. For a gift to anyone, I should recommend "The Painted Veil" by Charles Morgan . . . . Not new (published about 4 years ago, I think) but very, very fine . . . . also "My Shadow as I Pass," by Sybil Bolitho, which is also a very clever story. Try "Angel Pavement," which I like the best of Priestly's writings. If you want something big and long (a little too long), get "The Folks," by Ruth Suckow . . . it's interesting . . . moves slowly and will last several evenings. I haven't read "Salvation" by Helen Ashton, but it is a tale of a Polish Jew, and as it is written by the same author as "Three Cities" I recommend it. The Pollard trilogy is a rare thing to find a Jewish writer fathering a poor book. If you want something to convince you that "Anthony Adverse," by Allen . . . . is not (well it is) 1200 pages of adventure in many lands with three or four love stories thrown in for good measure, get "Tales of the Grove" by Rogers — the Atlantic Monthly prize novel, is fair reading and worth while. A man's book is "Forty Years Days of Musa Dagh," by Werfel . . . it's a war story, a good and real as any you've ever read . . . . scene is laid in 1915, with the Turks against the Americans, and it takes 800 pages to tell the story of "40 Days." . . . . This is one of the five books I could name, which, if everybody read, would make it mighty hard to start a Frederick War. Also for the man, order a copy of the "Canadian Almanac" and the "World Almanac" if it's not already in the privilege . . . . they are more than almanacs . . . . they are gold mines of information—about almost everything.

Germany is giving the priviledge . . . . and the means . . . to a certain class of convicted criminals . . . of committing suicide. This would be quite all right, if the privilege were enforced before the crime.

We are too extravagant with life . . . we applaud, and some men — good men at that — try to win and earn that applause. Captain Ulm is gone with three others, on an ocean flight . . . . Wiley Post got up 20,000 feet the other day and expects to go higher in a few days . . . . I hope he gets up and back — but— it seems too much to risk for so little gain.

Science broadens our religious thinking. The more man knows, the less superstitious he becomes.—Robert A. Millikan.

Editorial Comment

NO NEED FOR ALARM OVER JAPAN YET

There does not seem to be any real ground for alarm over the action of the Privy Council of Japan in recommending the Emperor to denounce the Washington Naval Agreement. That Japan would take such a step has been known for months. The denunciation of the treaty in itself does not exist. Nor does that of the unanticipated. All the naval experts of the state-craft are agreed that for consideration of the naval problem for the next few months, must have always had in mind the fact that Japan would take this step. They may not have expected it as soon as this, but knew it was coming.

To argue from this that Japan has any serious antagonism to Great Britain or American interests in the Orient, however, is to argue beyond the known facts. And to claim that Japan's denunciation of the Washington Treaty is necessarily a threat against the United States in a naval building contest is to ignore the salient factors in the whole issue.

Japan's New Economic Policy is the key to the situation. Japan is a country of 65,000,000 people, with a density of population greater than that of Great Britain. Her population is increasing at the rate of 1,000,000 a year. Her industrial development has been phenomenal. Her foreign trade has increased by leaps and bounds. Her people are clothed in the cheapest of cotton goods, and are fed on the cheapest of rice. Her industrial development has been largely based on cheap labor. Her people have been content to live on a low standard of living, because they have had no other standard to which to aspire.

But Japan's New Economic Policy is changing all that. Her people are being taught to demand a higher standard of living. Her industrial development is being based on the home market, rather than on the export trade. Her people are being taught to buy Japanese goods, rather than to export them. Her industrial development is being based on the use of machinery, rather than on the use of cheap labor. Her people are being taught to demand more and better food, rather than to be content with cheap rice.

TO PEOPLE THE EMPIRE

In Canada and Australia especially, and also in many other parts of the Empire, there are lands which are just for the plough, grass for cattle grass, minerals awaiting the pick and waters for the fishermen. All through the Nineteenth Century this country sent out a constant stream of emigrants to inhabit those regions, but the tide gradually came to a stand and now has turned inward and is at a point flagged from which to approach a new orientation of naval power that might prove agreeable to all parties. — Montreal Star.

A CANADIAN EXILE

Although no longer in Canada, the most historic apple tree in North America, is intimately connected with the Dominion. This 108 year-old tree which still bears fruit annually is located at Fort Vancouver in the State of Washington, where it was planted in 1826 by officers of the Hudson's Bay Company who were the rulers of Old Oregon and thereabout. Prior to the treaty of 1846 which fixed the boundary between Great Britain and the United States at the 49th parallel, Fort Vancouver was the principal Pacific depot in Canada and dispensed goods from Hudson's Bay to Honolulu. The Fort was built in 1824. Later on, anticipating the result of the 1846 treaty, the Hudson's Bay Company decided to move to unequivocally British territory and selected Camosan, the Indian name for the territory, on the southermost end of Vancouver Island. It is the site of the city of Victoria, but Camosan was chosen not with a view to becoming a city, but as a favourable spot on which to erect a fort. This was done in 1843. Shortly afterwards the name of Fort Camosan was changed to Victoria, in honour of the late Queen Victoria.

The story of the planting of the tree is as follows: In 1826, at London, England, a farewell dinner was given to Governor Simpson and a number of other officers of the Hudson's Bay Company, who were ready to set sail for the Hudson's Bay post at Fort Vancouver. Apples were being served for dessert. One of the ladies seated next to Captain Simpson, on cutting an apple, dropped the seeds on the table. Casually she began telling him to plant them when he reached his destination, and perhaps they would grow. Upon the arrival of the party at the fort, the factor, Dr. McLoughlin, insisted that the seeds should be planted immediately, detailing his own gardener to look after them. The seeds were planted in small boxes as the frost they could not be touched by anyone. After several years, there bore its first crop—one apple. This apple when ripe, was picked by Dr. McLoughlin, who carefully cut it into 17 slices, one for each person seated at the table. Next year the tree bore more apples, and has been bearing fruit ever since.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 30TH, 1934

"TESTS OF A CHRISTIAN"

I JOHN, 5: 1-12

Teh reason why this particular passage has been chosen as a study of "Tests for a Christian" may not appear on first reading of it. But when we see that the purpose of the Book, al lthe way through, is to lead readers to Christ, we see how the full force of the writer's message. The late Professor Law says: "It is to prevent a study of the Book of John from this angle. In the preface to his great work, he says: "In my view, the key to the interpretation of the epistle, is the conception of it as an antidote of tests that its definite object is to furnish its readers with an adequate set of criteria, by which they may satisfy themselves of their being begotten of God." "These things I write that ye may know that ye have eternal life." And throughout the epistle these tests are definitely, inevitably and inseparably, — doing righteousness; loving one another; and believing that Jesus is the Christ come in the flesh, sent by the Father to be Saviour of the world."

These, then, are the three tests of a Christian, which the epistle sets forth. It then the Christian is to test the reality of his Christianity, He is doing righteously; is he loving others; does he believe that Jesus is the Christ. In these verses for today's lesson, each of these tests is briefly stated. The first two verses of the first half of the third, recapitulate what has been said earlier in the book, that the true Christian will possess a love of God and along with it a love of one's fellow men.

In this the disciple is only reiterating the essential teaching of his Master, who insisted that love is the solution of the world's ills were to be found. Love, kindness and mercy. The world waits for the application of that test. We have tried and are still trying everything else—ambition exploitation, selfishness and greed. The world waits in agony for some group, some nation which will make the great adventure by trusting its future to goodwill and love as a solution for life's pressing problems.

In the next section, verses 3 and 4, the writer deals with the other two parts and shows the very close relationship between belief and righteousness. It a person believes sufficiently to accept Jesus as Saviour, he will depend on that belief will not be onerous. This is undoubtedly true. Faith is the first step and it is very easy to accept that, putting on it whatever interpretation suits their spiritual needs. There can be no sense, be called Christians.

After pointing out in verses 7 to 10 the various witnesses to this faith—the Spirit, God Himself and an inner experience, the writer states in verses 11 and 12 the result of the threefold possession of love, righteousness and belief—eternal life. the Christian is assured of eternal life. In this he sums up that which touches every man most closely—the soul of man and women today. Everywhere, there is a hunger for life, abundant and eternal. Our own mad age has followed many devious paths on the search for it—employment, power, luxury, wealth. But to no avail. Full, complete and eternal life will be achieved only when man predominates in the hearts of men, when there is no disparagency between what they believe and what they do, and when they trust the power and the saving grace of Jesus Christ, as the Son of God.

CATERPILLAR OR SNAKE

We are all of us scientists nowadays, more or less; we lap up the new -cream of scientific discovery with an insatiable zest. When we hear the news that there are one and a quarter millions of biological species out at first slightly astonished brain soon proceeds with customary ease along the paths of "unicellular" and multicellular" organisms, of "acquired" and "inherited" characteristics, of "mutations" and what not. Our scientific background invests us with authority when we label—or libel ?—Nature as "red in tooth and claw." But we must have some regard for truth—even in connection with the "lower" 'animals.' Tooth and claw, forsooth ! Go to the rant, thou sluggard—or better still go to the caterpillar, for, lacking the protection of the sanguinary tooth and claw, the caterpillar provides itself against aggression. So Major R. W. Kingston tells us in "Discovery," with an ingenious facial "make-up." The Sphiugid, for example, found in the forests of Guiana, when attacked, expands the front segment of his body into a large flattened triangle, thereby revealing on each side a large and menacing eye - spot and displaying in its uncanny resemblance to a snake. The "serpent-caterpillars," which are numerous in Brazil, hang vertically from the stems of food plants and follow the same process of head inflation, but they have a wonderfully more adept in mimicry they also assume the curved body shape of the snake and consciously perfect its swaying side-to-side movement. Less distance make for disbelief must be mentioned that the English caterpillar of the large elephant hawk-moth, performs its trick in like manner. It seems, after all, that the proverbial snake in the grass may have been a caterpillar.

Working in co-operation the three divisions of the Health Animals Division, Experimental Farms Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, are jointly concerned in investigating the health of live stock and the maintenance of foreign markets and export meat trade. Special attention is taken to prevent the entrance of disease from foreign countries and to maintain the health of the domestic stock. The problems of contagious diseases are constantly united with a view to meeting new conditions and improving methods of control.

AD THE CLASSIFIED ADVTS. ON PAGE 7

They started out as ordinary snapshots but, artfully handled, turned out to be charming greeting cards. A simple, effective and individual solution of the greeting card problem.

SNAPSHOOTERS have a great advantage over ordinary folks at Christmas time, for they can easily produce Christmas cards that are 100 per cent. individual, unusual, and not at all expensive.

What's the purpose of a Christmas card, anyway? Simply to carry a message of cheer and goodwill from one person to another. It is, at its best, a personal message.

Snapshots of yourself, your home, your family, your pets or anything else that's part of your life can be easily used to make a card that will result in cards like no one else's.

There are many ways of using snapshots in greeting cards. Photofinishers in your town are equipped to make greetings for you, using one of your own photos. They do some beautiful things; it will pay you, at least, to investigate them.

Or you may want to make even more individual. One of the simplest greetings consists of a card with a snapshot mounted on it and a handwritten message below. Nothing can be more personal than that!

The opportunities for unusual and beautiful cards are endless. It's a challenge to your ingenuity. But no matter how clever the scheme, the simplest itself must be good — and effective.

You might use a snapshot of your family, stood up in a row, facing the camera. But is there anything Christmassy about that? Not much. It would be far better, wouldn't it, to have a snap of the family grouped about the fireplace, hanging up their Christmas stockings? Or decorating the tree, or putting up a holly wreath on the front door? A view of your house and yard on a winter night would make a charming card.

Your camera can do just about anything you want, providing only that you give it the right kind of cooperation. For interiors and night views outdoors use a supersensitive film; equip yourself with a few of the inexpensive modern lamps of flashbulb and photo-flash types; don't forget that auto headlights can be used to light up small outdoor scenes sufficiently for brief time exposures. And so on.

But remember that new, of all times, your picture must "tell a story," must be clean-cut and vivid. The idea is the most important thing. With care you can get the picture you want.

Go into "executive session" with your family now. Discuss ideas, select the best — and get out your camera.

One word of advice, born of experience — simple ideas are best. They are easier to execute and, nine times out of ten, they "click" more effectively than something pretentious or complicated.

LOCAL AND DISTRICT NEWS OF WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

ERNESTTOWN W. I.

The spirit of Christmas truly pervaded the December meeting, held at the home of Mrs. Harry Hunter, worth. It was a real winter's day. The first snow and the hostess graciously welcomed the members and visitors, and we all gave a royal welcome to our much loved District President, Mrs. Shore Loynes.

The President, Mrs. Clarence Thompson presided in her affable and business like manner.

Everyone, even our visitors answered the roll call "A suggestion for Christmas dinner," and by the variety of suggestions it seemed there could be nothing left out. The secretary, Miss Mona Thompson, read the minutes of the last meeting, and financial statement and correspondence.

The whole programme was Christmas, from first to last. Mrs. E. Smith gave a very fine paper of Christmas thoughts and Mrs. William Kellar gave a two-minute talk on "Peace on earth, goodwill towards men," stressing that the W. I. members should always be working for peace, and telling how the Christmas spirit peace prize had just been awarded at Oslo, Norway, to Mr. Arthur Henderson, chairman of the Disarmament Conference and Sir Norman Angel, who has been untiring in their efforts in the interests of world peace.

Mrs. Loynes first exhibited some useful and beautiful Christmas gifts, which could be made at very small cost, by women who are deft with their fingers: laundry bags, bags for dusters and holders, kitchen memo pads, dress protectors, oven pads, bags for rubbers and one for twine, oilcloth memo pads, yard stick and a most useful and unique cover for a picnic basket, and a dainty bag of lavender, which she said we could grow, all of which were useful and practical.

We were then told of the lovely poem which is always a favorite, "The House by the side of the road" and many other poems written from that to show us how we can help all whom we come in contact with along the road of life.

Mrs. Loynes recited a poem about the Christmas spirit and we marvelled at the memory, giving faultlessly so long a poem. She kindly gave us the books, suitable for our young girls.

Miss Mona Thompson gave a very comprehensive report of the Kingston Convention and a group said after chatting at the lunch table that a report showed how wide and varied our activities are.

Mrs. Kenal Fralick who is always interesting, gave a clever paper on "Christmas Customs." She said the pretty custom of Christmas Carolling, the observance of Christmas, even the innocent mince pies and plum pudding have their origin. King Canute gave orders in 1110, that instead of feasting, the poor's were to fast as the merry making had become so riotous.

Christmas cards are supposed to have originated in the custom of presenting school children with a portion of Mother Goose. The first card was made in London, England, in 1846. The Christmas pudding reminisce pies date back to the early Christmas and are said to symolize the rich offerings made to the Christ Child, by the Wise Men.

Teh January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Thompson and the roll call is "Makers of Canadian History" a paper on legislation by Mrs. Bert Snider and a demonstration of rug making by Mrs. William Kellar and Mrs. Mildred Seeley. A two-minute talk "Do not walk, this year, in last year's rut," by Mrs. H. E. Sharp. A spelling match and currents events by Mrs. Winnie Thompson.

CONWAY W. I.

The monthly meeting of the Conway Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Ross Wagar on Tuesday evening, December 11, with the president, Mrs. Harold Haight presiding.

Arrangements regarding the Hard-Time party, which is to be held at Sandhurst Parish Hall, December 27, met with much discussion.

A letter from Kemptville with regards to the short courses, was read and the names of several boys and girls were sent in as likely attendants. On motion, it was voted that this Institute be self-supporting and ask no levelative grants.

Miss Neilson's generous donation to the relief fund was acknowledged by a letter of thanks. Current events were given by Mrs. Vandyke.

The roll call caused much amusement when each member answered to "A Christmas experience."

Mrs. George Sfam's paper on "Canadian Industries" proved to have a great deal of preparation by its contents being interesting as well as depicting the wealth and industries that our fair Dominion Canada has stored in her industries. A paper on "Readers and Writers" contributed by Mrs. Harold Haight, suggested many helpful methods, not only the value of reading but along other phases, such as the material which is included in good reading.

A demonstration of fretwork, by Miss Grace Vandyke, showed her genius and ability by exhibiting many finished articles.

The gadget table which proved of interest at many other meetings was supplied with useful articles.

The meeting closed and refreshments were served.

MAPLE RIDGE W. I.

Maple Ridge Women's Institute was held Thursday, December 13th, at the home of Mrs. G. Dupre, with Mrs. Gordon Bateman in the absence of the President, Mrs. G. Sills had charge of the meeting, which opened with the ode, followed by the creed. The roll call was answered by a Christmas verse. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and the usual business was disposed of. A novel feature of the programme was a travelling basket sale which proved a financial success. Mrs. Uens gave a synopsis of current events with a very fitting ending as to what Christmas should mean to each of us. A fine instrumental solo was given by Miss E. Dupre.

Mr. Buchanan, Agricultural Representative, gave a very interesting talk comparing the advantages of our own community with those of the north. He also expressed the wish that more young men would take advantage of the various clubs in connection with agriculture.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered both to the speaker of the afternoon and our hostess, after which lunch was served.

ADOLPHUSTOWN W. M. S.

The December meeting of the W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. T. N. Davis, on Wednesday afternoon, with a good attendance. The president was in charge of the meeting. The devotional exercises were arranged by Mrs. Ross Humphrey, who read the scripture lesson from the second chapter of St. Luke's gospel. Prayer and hymn were followed by prayer by Mrs. W. J. Magee another hymn closed this period.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The thankoffering was handed to the treasurer who is Mrs. J. Bird. This was followed by the members with a verse of scripture. The election of officers resulted in a unanimous motion that the present executive be retained. Miss Dorothy Magee resigned as missionary monthly secretary, and Miss Sarah King was appointed to that office. The program committee composed of the executive, Rev. Mr. Sanders and Mrs. Sanders, Mrs. C. Hombach, Mrs. D. King and Mrs. George Magee, arranged to meet at the home of Mrs. Carr on December 17th, to arrange programme for the coming year.

Mrs. Sanders gave a short talk on "Remembering Others," and read a poem entitled "Others." After hymn and prayer, the meeting closed, the meeting with prayer. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

NAPANEE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Agricultural Rooms on Tuesday, December 11th. Mrs. James Douglas presided. Mrs. Jones opened in the usual manner. The Santa Claus Fund was voted on.

Mrs. T. V. Anderson was the convener of the programme committee. She introduced Mrs. Blake Humphrey of Mount Pleasant, who gave a most interesting talk on the history of the church. The Presbyterian Church was erected in 1841-1842. The land for the church stood was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Gilbert, grandparents of Mrs. Kinsley and the Rev. Francis Barry. The church catered to the spiritual and social needs of the community until the union in 1926, after which the building was closed. Since that time, however, it has been leased by the Mount Pleasant Institute, as their place of meeting.

Mrs. R. S. Ham gave an interesting talk relative to her visit to Calgary. In her letter she referred to the rodeo which was held at that time and the procession, which was led by Tom Lowe, a Mr. Bell was the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennet, Member of Parliament for Calgary and Prime Minister of Canada.

There was an exchange of Christmas gifts and the roll call was answered by "The nicest gift I received last Christmas."

WILTON WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

About thirty members and friends of the Wilton Women's Institute were entertained at the home of Mrs. J. Parker on Tuesday afternoon, December 11th. The meeting opened by singing the ode, followed by a verse of the creed. Roll call was answered by "Christmas Thought." After the business items were dealt with, the head was the paper of current events was given by Mrs. Beamer Hepburn. Mrs. Franklin Parrott dealt with the motto, "Why remember the needy at Christmas?" Mrs. Bernard Beckerley had charge of the following Christmas program, which proved very interesting: Reading, "A Message of Christmas," by Miss Gretta Parrott; reading, "Christmas Carols," by Mrs. Arthur Burt; piano selection, by Miss Marion Miller; reading, "Christmas Greens," by Mrs. Helen Babcock; reading "I came to minister," by Mrs. Geneva Sprague; the program, the exchange of Christmas gifts was made.

The National anthem brought the meeting to a close.

An interesting "Christmas Menu" contest will be run by Mrs. Franklin Parrott winning the dainty prize.

Mrs. A. W. Babcock invited the W. I. to her home for the January meeting.

THE LEAGUE SCORES

The League of Nations has surely won a Christmas! It has rescued the favor of many people who began to lose faith in it and in all it stood for. It has ceeded in eliminating the immediate danger of war which threatened the peace of Europe and the world, following the Marseilles assassination. Thanks to the Geneva organization the parties have been able to meet on neutral ground, discuss their grievances and thrash out in smooth over their difficulties. The trouble may come up again, but for the moment the world can rest in peace. — La Presse, Montreal.

CHRISTMAS MAIL to be DELIVERED

By F. H. SWEET

"WELL, YOU can't go no further," old Farmer Benson yelled, curving his hands to his mouth so the words would reach the mail carrier, five or six feet on the other side of the fence. At the same time he nodded significantly toward the road farther on, where the snow had drifted entirely across, making a fence on either side. "Five foot deep an' still drifting, an' plenty more places on ahead just like it. Don't see how you got this far. Well, we'll shovel out the gate, an' then you can drive in under my shed. It's three miles back to town, an' you can't return any more than you can go ahead. You'll never see anow dry so fast. It'll all ease up by to-morrow so we can start to plow the roads out, but 't ain't likely you'll get the mail round under two or three days, or perhaps a week. You'll drive right in."

It was trying, for this was the last day of rural free delivery No. 3. The route had been started as an experiment, but now was thought to hardly be worth while, and was to be dropped. John Holden had been one of the strongest advocates for it, and had obtained the route, leaving his eldest boy to look after the farm. The salary was not large, but in a year or so would enable him to stock the farm as he had wanted to stock it all his life.

At length the snow was cleared from sufficient space, and the horses to be opened and swung back. Holden led his horse through the shed, then unharnessed and took him to the stable, where he fed him generously with the hay which Benson threw down from the mow. Then the two men returned to the wagon, and Holden quickly arranged his mail into a compact package.

"We'll take it right into the house" said Benson. "It'll be safe there till you're able to go on."

Holden smiled and shook his head. "I shall go right on now," he said. "Mail mustn't be delayed, you know. Besides, a lot of folks are Christmas mail."

"But, man alive, you can't do it!" expostulated Benson, incredulously. "It's half a mile to the next house, and that drift right ahead is up to your armpits, an' too soft to stand on an' too deep to push through. Give over talkin'."

"Mebbe," laconically, "but it's got to be done."

At this time he had been fastening the package securely upon his shoulders. Now he straightened up, taking the broken half of a rake handle he saw near.

"Look Here, Hioden, Don't Try It," He Said

"You don't mind, I'll take this along," he said. "It will help steady me."

Benson placed his hand upon his shoulder.

"Look here, Holden," he said, earnestly, "don't you try it. The thing's nothing more nor less than suicide, and you know it."

Holden met his neighbor's look squarely and smiled. "I don't think so," he answered. "I shall try to creep along the fences where it's bad, and walk mostly to the high, windy places. Then I'll get through all right. It's only half a mile to the next house, an' more than that between any two places, an' only fourteen miles round the whole route. Then there's Sinclair's, on the other side of the line, becoming grave: "you forget the folks—who are waitin' for their mail. Especially a Christmas time. The cows away are writin' to their folks then. I shall, will it, mean to them if I don't get 'round? Of course I don't know much about what's in the mail, but there's likely a letter for every family, an' 'her son workin' up country in a mill. I've got a little for her this morning. Mebbe it won't be one, but I wouldn't be surprised if she was without word or letter to long to warm an' a scrap to eat an' that this letter will fix her up all right. Then there's Andrews, on the 4th, who have a sick son off in China. They're out to the bow every mornin' waitin' for me. I've got a letter for them, an' it's from China. An' there's Abey Rose, whose husband is off to sea, an' little Nina Clark, whose fellow is up to the mines workin' hard to earn enough to start housekeepin'. I've got letters for both of them. An' 't ain't all the mail, either. I do strands for a good many. You know the Watts', whose boy is so awful sick. They ain't nobody to send for a doctor. What mightn't it mean if I didn't get there in two or three days? No, sir, Benson, I wouldn't dare to stay if I wanted to. I'm only one, an' they're a good many good-by."

Usually it required less than five minutes to drive between the houses, but it was two hours later when Holden struggled up on the piazza and entered the door, looking more like a crudely made snowman than anything human.

"Por' sick man here!" cried the woman who opened the door, "if it isn't Mr. Holden! How'd you ever manage to get through? But come right in. You can't go on any more to-day. My folks are almost scared to go to the barn. Come," throwing wide the door, "don't stand there in the cold. Take your straps right off and set right up to the fire and warm."

It Was Still Snowing and the Drifts Much Deeper

"I haven't time now, thank you," Holden replied, as soon as he could interpose a word. "I must get on to Watts'. I have some medicine for the sick boy, an' he may need it. Here's your mail. Merry Christmas, speaking ahead." And once more he went out into the storm, disappearing in its blinding whirl almost instantly.

It was scarcely half a mile to Watts', but it took him twice the time to reach it. And when finally he stumbled up the steps, he had to pause to catch his breath before he could summon strength to knock.

"M-merry Christmas, sh' here's your mail, an' medicine," he gasped, as the door was opened. "No, I can't stop. I'm a good deal behind time, an' must reach the widow's tonight, an' Johnson's, an' Rose's' an' others. They all look for me."

"But you can't go another step, sir," she said, anxiously. "You're completely used up an' it won't be safe to attempt going any farther."

"Only to Johnson's an' Rose's an' one or two more, just beyond the curve," he answered. "I have letters for them which I want to deliver today."

The next day it was still snowing, and the drifts much deeper. Although he started early and struggled through the snow until after dark, he made little more than a mile. It was Christmas day, when mail was not supposed to be delivered, but Holden did not even think of that. He had letters to leave, and anxious people were waiting for them. So Christmas went by.

The third day the weather turned colder and the moist snow crusted enough to bear one's weight. The snow changed to a bitter, driving sleet.

It was much harder traveling, but the crust enabled one to go more swiftly. This day Holden completed his delivery, and returned to the post office with the mail he had collected on the route.

Three days later the roads were open so he could go for his wages, and the afternoon he went back to his farm.

Rural free delivery No. 3, however, was discontinued only a month. Then a letter came to the post office, addressed to Mail Carrier Holden. It read :

"Going to route No. 3 and to the prospect of its betterment, and more especially to the manner of the last day's delivery, the department has reconsidered the matter, and the route will be continued for a year, with the probability of being more permanent.

"Postmaster is appointed carrier."

Novel School Maintained for Quarantined Arrival Patients

One of the most unique schools in Canada is that maintained for the benefit of the children of patients for Consumptives' Children. These children come from all parts of the province. Many creeds and races are represented.

Most of the school children are delighted to say that one semester here brings them up to their standard before behind their jolly, inquisitive mates. In the morning they arrive at 10 in the morning and from 2 to 4 in the afternoon. The pupils in the junior school are not as strong as the average child of like age. The work covers that period lying between kindergarten and high school entrance. Domestic science and vocational training is also taught. Other than their studies the children enjoy themselves and the boys have a double several shirts.

Each year many thousands of dollars must be spent to bring such children back to health. With your purse the Queen Mary Hospital in its work of mercy by sending a gift to George A. Cox, Treasurer, Cage Institute, Toronto 2.

SPRING FLIGHT

BY ELIZABETH KYLE

Looking out from the carriage windows of the train which traverses that desolate waste known as Middle-Finland one saw how feebly the spring struggled northward. The birches which farther south were veiled completely in green, seemed here only slightly obscured by a faint greenish mist which left their shuddering silver bodies exposed to the still, chill air.

"But the gipsies will have taken to the woods already," my companion said, with a slight shiver of distaste at the thought of their half-thawed recesses where lumps of dirty snow would still be clinging to the tree roots. "They may board the train now at any moment, and fill up our carriage with their great coloured petticoats. Have you seen the sleeping-bags they carry with them, to use later on when it gets hotter and they don't want to stifle inside a tent? Made out of paper and thin splints of wood, and they crawl into them head first to get away from the mosquitoes. It's a droll sight, I can tell you, to come in summer on a gipsy encampment, looking like long white bolsters laid out in rows, with human toes protruding, curled up toward the moon!"

Just then we slowed down at a wayside station, half-swallowed up by the surrounding forest. A few scattered wooden houses painted red made up the village, and a clearing beyond the station shed was cut in two by the enormous swinging pole with which the water buckets up and down the communal well. Two workmen and a country woman scrambled up the iron grid from the third-class coach, the woman hanging behind her a bulging bundle of polished birch bark bound with leather straps. This the man hoisted after her into the carriage after us to the rack. She sat down heavily, panting. Outside one could see the station-master, with her red cap set athwart her flaxen hair, stand importantly, about to give the signal with the brass bell she held in her hand.

The train had already begun to move when two further passengers hurled themselves on board it and stumbled into the two seats opposite one was a woman, whose brown, swarthy features marked another race from the round-cheeked, corn-fed Finns about her. By her hand she held a small boy, dressed elaborately in the Sunday best of the well-to-do middle class. His sailor suit was surmounted by a perfectly flawless face, with "Ebba Muncke" in gold letters across the front. Clean white socks showed over the tops of his patent leather shoes. His flat features showed the pure-bred Finn. He looked scared, and sat gazing before him, kicking his heels uncheckedly, scarcely glancing at the huge shape which moved slowly past him.

The woman's own clothes showed an inordinate admixture of the bizarre. She looked at us with fierce, hungry eyes, as though defying us to show a contempt for which our total ignorance of her affairs prevented us from feeling. That ignorance did not remain long. Suddenly she began to talk, rapidly, harshly, like a prisoner stating her case.

Yes, the boy was her son. Yes, his father was Finnish; a rich man, a wood merchant. A good husband. He had caught pneumonia a day or two ago through neglecting to change the damp clothes he had come in with from the lumber camp. She had nursed him better than anyone else could, for was she not a pinny born who knew all the cures of the forest? But nothing was able to detain him in this world, and he had died, very early, that morning.

She spoke in the dry, harsh voice of one who has been mortally wounded and to whom the relief of tears has not yet come. The boy continued to kick the woodwork monotonously, like one forced to listen to the repetition of a too-well-known story. But the dazed look was still in his eyes, and he was doubtful if, in the suddenness of the earthquake which had shaken their lives, he fully understood yet what had happened. She went on with her story, almost shouting it across at us, until over the wooden partition dividing the seats the heads of the other occupants began to bob up curiously, a few years ago she had left her family and her tribe to marry the handsome young man she had fallen in with at a fair. He was honourable and would not have her otherwise. Besides, he wanted a wife to run his house, to entertain his friends, to superintend his kitchen. No doubt he received as much as anyone the unsuitability of his choice; but love, alas! was too strong for him, as it was for her; and so together they tried out they rare experiment of transforming a nomad into a civilized member of the community.

Because of that love, his patience with her never faltered, and out of gratitude, slowly, surely, she learned the strange ways of the house-dweller. She put away in an attic all the wild, barbaric clothes and adornments which she had come to him in, and wear sober colours, flat-heeled shoes, and stockings even in the house. She learned, in time to preside at cosy parties with as good a grace as did her neighbors. She went regularly to church and gave the pastor his Sunday dinner afterwards. And when all, to save her husband pain, she learned to hide from him those sudden bursts of hatred for the roof that sheltered her and clamped her down as though it had been the roof of a coffin.

But now that was all ended. With his last breath the light roots she had sent down into an alien soil were stopped that morning only to hunt out once more the garments she had worn when first she came to him; to seize her child just as he was, and, without luggage to run through the woods, leaving her villa behind, in order to catch the train which would bear her northward towards the spring camping-place of her tribe.

With the wild impulsiveness of her race she had not stopped to consider anything, not even the burial of her husband. "He is not there any more. To what should I stay with his body?" she asked, adding indifferently, "the neighbours will see that he is buried

EVEREST— THE MAN-EATER

BY T. HOWARD SOMERWELL

(In 1924 Mr. Somerwell climbed Mount Everest to the height of 28,100 feet, in this article he outlines the conditions necessary to ensure success.)

When, in July 1924, after the loss of our gallant comrades, Mallory and Irvine, the Mount Everest Expedition was on its way across the desert valleys of Tibet back to civilisation, there was one thought common to us all.

"That last 1,000 feet will certainly be done next time." That is what we felt, and that is I believe, what would have happened if only last year's expedition had had better luck in the weather. But it was not to be; and the little piece of mountain that separated Norton and myself from the summit in June, 1924, is still, nearly all of it, untrodden ground.

Norton and I acclimatised in a less scientific and thorough way than were the party who attacked Everest last year. We had arrived within 1,000 feet of the top at three o'clock one afternoon. We had climbed "light." The weather was glorious, the wind far less fierce than usual; the rocks were in good condition.

Mountain Wins Again

But, alas! we were alone. Our battling with blizzards at the lower camps, and a rescue expedition of a few days before, had left us so much out of us, that at 28,100 feet I sat down on a rock with a frostbitten thumb, and told Norton to go on. He went on a little way, and within an hour was suffering from an ice-axe and very painful attack of snow-blindness.

The mountain had won, and a few days later, had celebrated another blood-stained victory with the death of the two fine adventurers who had got still nearer— how near nobody knows— to the summit. But next time, we thought, given good weather they will get up to "our place" fitter and earlier in the day, and they will do it.

Another expedition has come and gone, and the last 1,000 feet or more are still unconquered. Why? For two reasons. First, the weather was in 1933, far worse than anything we encountered in 1922 and 1924. Second, the rocks were found to be far more difficult than we had expected. There is a long wall of rock extending from near the top of the ice-slope down many thousands of feet on its northern face, and formidable on the western wall of snow which has to be crossed in order to reach the summit, and that rock is the barrier to climb than we had anticipated.

Northern and I saw in 1924 that the difficulty was the climb; we knew it was not easy; but from where we sat to it did not appear impossible. It may be able to make some time in speculating which of several snow-covered ledges or shelves in it provided the best way across.

Still Inviolate

We felt, as far as I remember, that the gully should be crossed as high up as possible, in order that some of the labour might be obtained at a place where they led right across this rock wall. Before that point it looked as though the wall was steeper, and, provided with no satisfactory ledges along which one could traverse to its right-hand side where the easy ground leading to the summit could be reached.

Now in 1924 the snow at 28,000 feet was in very good condition, and the rock wall was in the main dry and free from snow; but in 1933 the snow at this level was powdery, deep, fatiguing and dangerous; every little ledge held its quota of this treacherous stuff; and it may have been that the long shelves at a high level were really very perilous places indeed, for they probably slope the wrong way, like most ledges on this face of Everest.

Anyway, Smythe (in the solitary climb which he described in his broadcast account) elected to attack the rock wall at a lower level than the long shelves; and in the conditions then obtaining on the mountain, the wall at that level had failed to be impassable.

He was fit, he was well acclimatised to the height, and he was there in fairly good time, but the weather had joined hands with the mountain and kept its last 1,000 feet once more inviolate.

I repeat, that on a mountain like Everest everything has got to be right at the same time. The snow has to be fit and safe condition; there must not be too much of it; the weather must be good; the climbers have to be fit and acclimatised, and without of sufficient skill and experience to pitch their attack boldly.

All these must happen on the same day, and that day the one arranged for as a possibility in the last lap between the ultimate camp and the summit of the peak.

In 1924 the weather was splendid, and the men—or at least that one of them who writes this—were playing for it, and in 1933 they were all right, thanks perhaps to Ruttledge's slow acclimatisation scheme; but the conditions was dangerous owing to the soft and excessive snow, and the weather was bad.

So good luck to 1935, and may the right meh be there, fit and well and with the luck to see the rocks are safe, the snow firm, and the weather glorious.

If it will this can happen at one and the same time, I believe the summit is theirs.

The train stopped and they began to get out. The last thing we saw of them, as we steamed on again, was the flutter of her scarlet petticoats between the birches and the twinkle of her little son's bourgeois, white-socked legs, sailor-suit and all. He was dragged with frantic haste towards a life as incongruous to him as the old one had been to her.

Patients Play Patience as Health Returns

The game of "Patience" provides one means of winning a patient's confidence, for there are no restrictions upon the number of players, and the game is played at will and not away when interest wanes. Another form of "Patience" is being played by the inmates of the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives, the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children but, however is a different story and we leave off when they wish.

At these three sanatoria for the frail victims of consumption, after months, and in many cases for the lives of most, women and children. Over a thousand patients are being cared for in these hospitals where kindly doctors and nurses smile with their patients as gains in weight and strength. There is hope for their recovery if friends continue the voluntary contributions of other years for it is a fact that few of the patients can pay anything like the cost of their care. Any assistance which you have to spare at this time will be much to continue. Will you please send in this gross work by sending what you can to George A. Reid, Treasurer, Dunn Institute, 223 College Street, Toronto 2.

St. Mary Magdalene Sunday School Concert

St. Mary Magdalene Sunday School was filled with parents and friends, Friday night, for the annual Sunday School entertainment. Christmas decorations covered the walls with evergreen and holly, artistically arranged. A varied programme of choruses, drills, recitations and piano solos was presented under the direction of Mrs. Harry B. Williams and Mrs. William Wright.

Mother Goose's Christmas visit was particularly enjoyed by everyone. Many of the nursery rhyme characters appeared to entertain the audience, in response to the summons of Mother Goose's magic wand.

Just before Santa's arrival, five of the tiny tots came on the stage in their sleepers, carrying a candle and hung their stockings in front of the fireplace. On Santa's arrival, he sang a jolly song and distributed the gifts.

The A. Y. P. A., under the direction of Miss Joan LeMaistre and Miss Mirvale Storey, presented a one act play entitled "The Christmas Party."

Presentation by Pupils To Miss Wilson

On Wednesday evening, December 19th an excellent entertainment was held in South Napanee School. The school was filled to capacity which testified to the appreciation of the parents in the efforts put forth by the pupils and the popularity of the teacher.

At the close of the programme, Miss Wilson was presented with a beautiful reading lamp from the school. Miss Wilson heartily thanked the pupils for the gift and expressed how much she had enjoyed her term and a half here.

Parents and friends greatly regret her leaving and it is unfortunate that there was a misunderstanding over salary.

Miss Wilson will be greatly missed in the town because of the active part she has taken in church and social affairs. Her many friends wish her the greatest success in Windsor where she expects to teach. She will live with her brother, Mr. Douglas Wilson, B.Sc.

Napanee Collegiate Christmas Dance

About seventy couples attended the annual Christmas dance of the Napanee Collegiate Institute on Friday evening, last week. Among those present were students of the school, exstudents residing in the town and several students now at home for the Christmas holidays.

The assembly hall had been profusely decorated with evergreen trees and boughs and presented a very festive appearance.

Mrs. C. E. Jamieson, Mrs. J. E. Madden and Mrs. Eppiett were patronesses and were assisted in receiving the guests, by Mr. C. E. Jamieson, Principal of the school.

The floor was in excellent condition and splendid music was provided by the Aces' Orchestra. Near midnight a dainty lunch was served by members of the school.

Mrs. Henry Otton
Buried at Napanee

On Monday morning the late Mrs. Henry Otton was buried at River-side Cemetery, following a brief service conducted by the Rev. Harry Pawson, at the undertaking parlors of Vanluven and Warriman.

Mrs. Otton died on Friday, December 21st at Toronto and after a service on Sunday, her remains were brought to Napanee for interment.

Mrs. Otton, formerly Elizabeth Boyle, was born at Bath about 61 years ago. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Boyle and with them, lived in Napanee until her marriage to Henry Otton. For many years she lived at Barrie, where Mr. Otton was a prosperous hardware merchant. Some years ago they retired and went to Toronto to live, where Mr. Otton died in 1928.

She is survived by one son, Mr. Fred Otton, at present in Florida, two daughters, Ada, Mrs. J. McCullough, of Detroit, and Allie, Mrs. P. Brown, of Toronto; a brother, Mr. William Foyle and a sister, Mrs. Cornell, of Napanee. The late Mr. Edward Boyle was also a brother.

DEATHS

OTTON — At Toronto, on Friday, December 21st 1934, Elizabeth, widow of the late Henry W. Otton, late of Barrie, Ont., in her 81st year.

A Swedish Yuletide Legend

This quaint narrative was originally published in a Swedish Christmas annual. The author is Karl Erik Forsslund.

In many Swedish parishes, and especially in Dalecarlia, old people relate in different versions the story of the old woman who set out alone to attend the early service on Christmas morning and thought she had too late. There were no jingling sleigh bells, no flaming torches, nor a vehicle nor a pedestrian on the road. Imagine having overslept on Christmas morning itself. What a disgrace! If only the service is not over before she arrives!

She moved her old limbs as fast as she could. Now she saw the church all illumined, with light streaming from every window. But everything was quiet; not a sound. She crept inside; the church was filled, every seat, and the minister was in the pulpit. Drawing a deep sigh of relief and satisfaction, she sank down in a corner and put her hand before her face. When she looked up again and prepared to listen to the minister she was surprised; she did not know him; it was not her own minister, but a stranger. And when she looked around and scrutinized the people in the pews her astonishment grew. She felt confused; she recognized no one; neighbours, no acquaintances, could she discover. It was as if she had arrived in another parish.

But look! Here was a face she seemed to recognize—and there another, and over there a third. Then she remembered and gave a start—Good Heavens! They had all died some time ago! Gradually she recognized more and more people, but they had all departed long before and been laid away in the cemetery. But now they sat here just as they did formerly; and there was the minister at as though alive—now she remembered him too, she had been present at his funeral, though that must have been about fifty years before.

It was the congregation of the dead she had dropped in upon—the death service. She had not risen too late, but, on the contrary, too early; for exactly at midnight the dead rise from their graves to celebrate their Christmas service before the living gather for theirs. Terrified, she huddled down and made herself as small as possible in her corner. Already it seemed as if some of them had caught sight of her. She felt curious glances fixed on fire from several directions. Then someone leaned forward and whispered to her—it was her own aunt—telling her to slip out as quietly and inconspicuously as possible, otherwise some misfortune might befall her; but she must leave the bookmark in her hymnal behind in the pew. That she did, trying to disappear like a shadow, though she felt more awkward and noisy than ever before in her life. With her heart in her throat she reached the door, but imagined that hundreds of hollow eyes were staring at her back; and when the door slammed behind her, catching her skirt, she almost fell in a faint. Then she noticed that she had not been really caught, a bit of the skirt having been torn off as though burnt.

Homeward she ran as fast as her aged and trembling limbs could carry her—back to her cottage, though it was a long way off. There of course she put the coffee pot on the fire to revive herself with its cheering stimulation. And probably never before had she ever started off in the cold and snow with such joy as when she set out later to attend the real Christmas service—that of the living.

This time innumerable stars twinkled in the blue sky; and almost as many shone on the white earth; lighted candles stood in the windows of every homestead, two long rows, one above the other, in the proud mansions of the big farmers; two single ones, side by side, like two friendly eyes, in the windows of the small cottages. On all roads leading to the church there was a symphony of flickering, sparkling torchlights. At first faintly in the distance, then rising, stronger and richer, the sounds of the bells merged. There were big, deep-throated church bells, almost like little church bells, then small, jingling bells and "rattle wreaths" with a higher tone and a lighter resonance. These latter reminded one of the tambourine little butterfly-winged angels on the church ceiling, while the "cathedral" bells suggested the serious old Apostles on the choir walls. Indeed, the "cathedral" bells seemed ambitious to sing in the same key as the big church bell; and the smaller bells in the steeples sang—yes, they sang—then as they swung in tremendous circles, pealed out in ecstasy, calling with all the power of their metal lungs, "come, come—come, come!"

At first the torches seemed merely flickering points of light, small hovering flames, like will-o'-the-wisps or fireflies. But they grew and ranged themselves in long lines, until they approached swiftly like roaring trains of fire across the lake to the south, along the forest border to the east through the villages and street to the west down from the wooded hills to the north. It was a fairy play, a throng of fiery pennants and glowing cagey glittering and crackling. Toward the church they all hastened; there they gathered, and were set down in the snow or thrown in a pile, making a blazing pyre like a real Walpurgis Night fire. The flames burst up into the sky between the heartfelt-glittering birches; their reflections spread and fluttered over the snowdrifts, then merged into the candleglow from the church windows and made it seem pale.

This time the old woman was not alone. The long church-bordered street leading to the church was thronged with people, all wearing freshly chalked white sheepskin garments, with wide, shaggy borders; the men in long fur coats and the women in shorter sheepskin jackets and skirts of the same description in shiny white clothes, exactly like the birch trees in their array of snow and hoar-frost. And now what a joy to sink down in her familiar pew on the women's side! There she found a horn, half-burned bag, a remnant of the bookmark she had left behind. Probably something similar would have happened to her, had she not saved herself in time. But now the danger was over. Everything was peaceful and pleasant and pretty—new fine clothes, sheepskin jackets fragrant of the finest lamb's-wool furs and aprons in glowing, bright colors, friendly people all around who bowed to her with calm faces and kindly eyes almost as radiant as the candles in the chandeliers and candlesticks. And then the sermon, the old rector himself with his familiar, quiet voice, the reverberating organ and the hymn:—

'Oh blessed day we now behold
From Heaven to us descending,' sung by many hundred voices and so vigorously that walls and arches vibrated. Did not the candleflames themselves seem to join, flickering in time, and rise higher and higher toward the ceiling!

At length it was all over. The people poured out into the churchyard and there was life and motion in the breaking dawn. Still it was only twilight, but in the east a red streak

CAROLINE'S CHRISTMAS

BY CLARISSA MACKIE

CHRISTMAS morning dawned cold and clear. Over field and farmhouse and winding roads, was a snowy blanket. "Good Christmas weather!" said Jared Pigeon, as he stamped in from the postoffice, and thumped a bundle of letters on the kitchen table. He was regarding his wife from a watchful eye, for he had noted a letter from Caroline, their daughter.

Jared went out to his car to bring in the Christmas packages. He saw his wife's pretty, wrinkled face bent over a long letter in Caroline's handwriting, as he closed the door. Of course it was natural for their only child to desire other friends—and it would be pokey indeed to come home to eat Christmas dinner with two old people! And there was Billy Wakeman, too. She used to go around with Billy. Now they had quarrelled and Billy was very grave and grown up in the conduct of his public career. He had a good mind to go down and ask Billy to come and eat Christmas dinner with them—Billy had no folks of his own.

Forgetting all about the Christmas packages in the back of the sleigh—Mr. Pigeon jumped in and, turning around in the hard way he had dug out of the snow, went jingling out of the yard and down the road toward the large garage and oil and gas station that Billy Wakeman had built on the main road.

"Hello, Mr. Pigeon," said Billy. "Merry Christmas!"

"Same to you," returned Jared Pigeon. "I came over after you, Billy Wakeman."

"What can I do for you?" asked Billy.

"Come and eat dinner with ma and me— I kinder expect Caroline ain't coming down."

"Thank you," said Billy getting very red, and then pale.

"Come when you like, so's you get there before one o'clok," grinned Jared, wishing he knew some girl he could ask to share dinner with Billy.

"Well, Jared Pigeon I" exclaimed his wife, coming to the back door as he came in with his delayed packages "where have you been—leaving me with the news about Caroline—"

"Don't get excited, Phoebe," protested her husband dumping the packages on the floor and closing the kitchen door. "I know it's terrible that Caroline won't come home this Christmas, but you know what young folks are these days. I've asked Billy Wakeman to dinner. If you can think of any girl I can ask to there'll be four of us, mother—"

Mrs. Pigeon smiled sedately. "Land no, Jared, Caroline's the only girl I can think of," she said, "and now, with company, we've got to get busy.

Mother Pigeon, running up and down stairs, was very busy setting the table with all their best china. There was a delicious warmth up there in Caroline's room.

Then when everything was almost ready, when Mrs. Pigeon in her best black silk, and a new cap with a tiny violet bow on her lovely white hair was entertaining Billy Wakeman, just as another car for her own beloved son, just before it was time to sit down to that delicious dinner mysteriously set for four people—though Mr. Pigeon knew mother-in-law's ways a long time, and anyway—just then they heard the horn of the village stage.

"It's stopping here !" yelled Mr. Pigeon, rushing to the side door, and in a moment a lovely, laughing girl was throwing off her furs among them not seeing Billy Wakeman at first where he stood white and tense. Then she saw him, and a wonderful look came into her face—"Billy!" she whispered. "You here ? Oh, this makes it perfect !"

Billy Wakeman held out his arms and Caroline went into them like a homing bird.

Mrs. Pigeon drew her husband into the kitchen and closed the door. "Jared," she said, "you took it for granted this morning that Caroline wasn't coming home—and she is here! She said she was tired of the city, and that she would find something to do in town. I knew her heart was breaking for Billy—you did a wonderful thing to ask him—" appeared behind the hoarfrost designs of the birch branches, and the tall candle windows began to dim like eyes tired with watching and glad to be allowed to close and go to sleep. Now the horses were led out of the small gray church stables—inside the men had probably taken a "bracer," and perhaps given the horses a "lacing" to liven them up for the journey homeward. And sure enough there was speed—the wildest racing, with shouts and laughter, but with a serious purpose underneath, because the one arriving home would herald to the Christmas morning service would be the first to have this year's crop safely garnered.

Federal Dole Grant Accepted by Ontario

$2,000,000 To be Given Toward Direct Relief

Toronto. — Ontario's unemployment relief task places upon the government's shoulders the necessity of obtaining approximately $2,000,000 for direct relief. In announcing payments forthcoming from the Dominion Government, Hon. Harry C. Nixon, acting Premier and Provincial Secretary, said that the government would have to raise this sum for direct relief only and placed the total relief bill of the province at $3,000,000 a month.

The Provincial Cabinet approved acceptance of the Dominion grants yesterday. Ontario will receive from the Federal Administration $750,000 a month for September and October and $600,000 monthly after that. Mr. Nixon said he understood that the Dominion Administration would offer $900,000 for six months of the public works and highways program launched by the former Conservative Government in Ontario.

Relief Situation Much Improved

Employment Increased in Every Month in 1934, But One

Ottawa — The relief situation brighiens. For every month of 1934, with the exception of August, reductions have been made in the number of persons on relief in Canada as compared with corresponding months of last year, it was revealed by figures obtained from Dominion Minister of Labor, W. A. Gordon.

Drop in December

December's total has not been completed, but it is estimated a drop of 10 per cent. will be shown from the 1,370,165 figure for the same month of the previous year.

In terms of percentage the decreases in the number of individuals receiving relief from year on comparison with 1933, show: January, 85; February, 2.91; March, 4.11; April, 17.28; May, 5.6; June, 2.13; July, 83; September, 3.7; October, 5.93; November, 10.97; and December 10 approximately.

The sole increase in August amounted to 1.22 per cent. When compared with the August, 1933; figure, this increase is attributed to the seasonal drop in relief in the drier-out areas of Saskatchewan in August of last year.

The number of persons on relief by months, with corresponding figures for the same months of 1933 in brackets were as follows: January, 1,428,864 (1,429,586); February, 1,455,159 (1,533,842); March, 1,502,215 (1,566,238); April, 1,346,835 (1,589,-623); May, 1,295,212 (1,466,733); June, 1,174,876 (1,200,422); July, 1,162,236 (1,114,544); August, 1,070,636 (1,064,-754); September, 1,013,305 (1,052,521); October, 1,106,338 (1,178,377); November, 1,116,553 (1,253,286). December, a decrease of about 10 per cent from 1,370,165 for December, 1933.

had he arisen so early on a Christmas morning. Dressing himself carefully, he went downstairs. He had worked until late the night before decorating the tree, but he was not tired.

Suddenly there was a cry, a cry of joy such as he had never heard.

"Why, there's Santa Claus ! Dear, dear Santa Claus."

The janitor's children had always been afraid of him, but not so of Santa Claus ! He undid his pack. He took gifts off the tree, and the children climbed over him, kissed him, hugged him, loved him! With what a splendid gusto they loved him !

And the children begged Santa Claus to stay for dinner. Curious thing for him to be doing ! But he stayed, and for the first time, almost since he had been a child himself, he had a Christmas, a real Christmas, a Christmas filled with love which had driven the loneliness out!

EBENEZER Y. P. S.

The members of the Ebenezer Y. P. S. met at the home of Miss Hazel Smith, on Wednesday evening, December 5th.

The meeting opened by singing a hymn, followed by prayer. A reading was given by Mr. Wilson Dowell. The scripture reading was taken from St. Matthew, 13th chapter, verses 15 to 24, and was read by Mr. George Nobbs. A reading by Mrs. Sam Smith, was followed by a solo by Miss Eileen McAllister. Hymn 423 was sung and Miss Alice Wilde and Miss Olive Hewitt gave interesting readings.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The roll call was answered with thirteen members present. It was decided to go to the home of Miss Ella Whiteman for the next meeting. Lunch committee, Mrs. Clarence Whiteman and Miss Hazel Smith. Programme Committee, Miss Eileen McAllister and Miss Ella Whiteman.

A solo was given by Miss Ella Whiteman, following which the meeting closed with the singing of Hymn 426.

A very interesting talk was given by Rev. Mrs. Craig. After another hymn, a reading was given by Mrs. Clarence Whiteman. The collection amounted to $1.05. A hymn was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Lunch was served and the usual half hour of games was spent. A vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Smith for the use of her home.

Miracles and the Christ Child

By Katherine Edelman

Indian Brave Guided by Great Spirit, Reveals Story of Christmas

IN THE FAR-flung land of the west the early winter had been unusually mild and although it was nearing Christmas, now the weather was bright and clear, almost sprite-like in its mildness.

Everywhere that the message of the Christ Child had reached, men and women were, busy and happy preparing for the great day, a new and added joy of life surging within their hearts. Into each home there had come a strengthening and rekindling of family ties and a new birth of love and service that reached out even beyond the home.

Out on the reservation, however, the Indians went about their tasks as usual for no hint of the wonder and the glory of the Christmas time had yet come to them. And if they felt a mysterious something in the air at this time, they understood it not at all, for the brightness from the Star of Bethlehem had not yet burst upon them.

Moonlight Brook was very lonely—she had only little Silver Star, her daughter, with her now — the big chief had sent Strong Oak, her husband, with other braves, on a mission to a distant village. And Moonlight Brook had missed him every hour, for their love was still burning as bright as the big camp fire that blazed near the tepees at night.

Her love of the great open spaces helped to cheer her during the long hours of his absence. Every day with little Silver Star she wandered afar. In these lonely places that she went there always came to her the sense of some unknown presence—the hand of the Great Spirit.

Early one morning Moonlight Brook called little Silver Star to her and told her that they would go for a long walk, away up to Roaring Creek. Moonlight Brook was lost in wonder at the beauty of the scene, but a great and sudden change had come over the day. Now, looking at the lowering, threatening sky, she decided that she must make all possible haste back to the village. For with the darkness and the gloom that had come over all there had come, too, from across the prairie, a low menacing wind that carried with it the sound of dry, snowflakes.

With Silver Star in her arms Moonlight Brook started in the direction of the village, walking with the swift, strong stride of the woman who is much in the open. The snow now was coming down in large flakes and the wind had grown blustard-like in its fierceness. Hour was fast dying within her, for she was trembling from exhaustion. Then suddenly there did the thing which she had tried hard to keep from happening—she sank upon the snow—her last thought as she felt consciousness leaving her, to wrap the blanket about little Silver Star and to waft a prayer to the Great Spirit to take care of Strong Oak when she was gone.

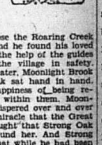
But the prairie has many stories to tell of strange things that have happened there, and on this day there was added to the list another of those coin-cidences which happen often-times in life than some would have us believe. For Strong Oak and his party had come by the very spot where Moonlight Brook and Silver Star had sunk exhausted, but a time after they had sunk exhausted and tried to take the other trail, but some thing within him, that strange, unfathomable force which comes to us at times, made him choose the Roaring Creek trail instead, and he found his loved ones and with the help of the guides they reached the village in safety.



A few hours later, Moonlight Brook and Strong Oak sat hand in hand in the ecstatic happiness of being reunited surging within them. Moonlight Brook listened to the beautiful story that has been told to children for which keeps its thrill through the ages, she felt that this day was indeed a day of miracles, for, like her aroused brave, the story brought her a wonderful peace and stilled the long loneliness which had come to her so often in the past.

In Loving Memory

BROWN — Lovingly remembered, but so sadly missed at this Christmastide, are our dear parents and brother, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Brown, and David.

52ap FAMILY.

FULL MOON

When she awoke it was to hear the sounds of the fine morning. Sparrows gabbled under the thatch and the starlings chattered and whistled from the chimney-tops. A corner of yellow sunshine lit the tough bristles of the thatched cowl where it bent over the tiny window. There was a bluebottle in the room humming with angry vitality, and from her bed she could see the crisp, yellow smell of the stubble in the fields.

She was as excited as a child as she jumped from bed and pulled on her clothes. The sunshine, the grassy garden smell, the yellow-dabbled frogs that dived into the warm pond, the trail of rooks from elm to autumn pastures, these were important things. She threw the cottage casements open. Down below the garden grew right up to window level, peach- coloured roses, phlox, and jaunty red snapdragon. The air was quite numb with warmth, and was there ever such a to-do about the lavender? She stood at the garden door, smiling to herself, her heart beating with excitement. This was how Peggy should see her home when she came down that week-end, like this in the mornings, and to-night the fiery floods of full September moon to lie stilly over the stubble.

It was so right that the weather should be like this, so right. Many times she had gone over in her mind this week-end. It had been hard to get Peggy to come down at all. Young girls led such busy, exciting sort of lives these days. It would have been good to have Peggy down here always. Peggy was not just a daughter. She was everything in everything. Nothing else in the world but Peggy, nothing to look forward to like looking forward to meeting her with the pony and trap. They would sit out afterwards in the violet twilight, watching the bats winking around the cow-pool, smelling the cold, fresh smell of dew. And later the full moon would come up over the elms, vast, ember-red, opaque glory over the darkening fields. Full moon. Important for Peggy to see the full moon. A quiet, breathless consummation, that she explained, unexplainable necessity.

She was quite alone in her cottage which she had taken after her husband died. It had seemed the best thing. Being alone. "Aren't you lonely down there, mother? If you are, then, of course, I'll chuck the job, and come and live with you." Lonely? Bless the child, there are dozens of nice people in the neighborhood. I'm scarcely ever in."

She set the little south room in order, putting the new chints cover on the bed, setting out books, fruit, a box of biscuits. Oh, and cigarettes. She must order those from the post office. She gathered roses from the midday garden, laying them, some still wet with wbit dew, in the flat rush basket, arranging them later in the brown earthenware bowl in the little room. She fed the pony and gave him water, and spent half an hour dusting out the trap, beating the blue cushions.

She could not eat her lunch, she was so excited, but she took a dish of fruit into the garden and sat with it under the grey-boled pear tree. How hot it was. The birds and the wasps had been at the pears. They lay, riddled with brown holes, all over the grass. She looked lazily under the wide rim of her floppy straw sun-hat to the wheat-field. Somewhere they were threshing—boom-da-boom-da-boom, like a great lovely. The fly-catcher on the wire fence fluttered in short unsteady lurches from his perch, the snapplings of his tiny beak sounding clearly.

At a quarter to four she was harnessing the pony. "You know who you're going to meet, don't you?" She would like to wear her pink frock, and the place where the fox-cubs had played in spring, and the dusty lane to Blatch's and the spot where the brambles grew, glossy - black and luscious. And to-night, after the cold chicken and fresh fruit and cream, the full red moon. She hurried back into the house, changed her clothes, pattered quickly into the little room. For a moment she bent over the pillow, smoothing it with her hand. Then she lauched to herself, and ran lightly downstairs.

At the gate she met Jimmy from the post office with the telegram. For a moment she stared in silence at the pink envelope and then, quickly she tore it open. "Mummy darling. Irresistible roof-garden party to-night. Come next week-end instead. Writing. Love, Peggy."

She smiled. "All right, Jimmy, there's no answer."

Her feet dragged sluggishly as she went to the little oak bureau. She sat down, dipped her pen in the ink, and began to write. . . . So it really doesn't matter at all, darling. As a matter of fact I've been asked to a bridge to-night, so perhaps it's just as well. Any week-end will do. . . . Any week end.

She pillowed her chin on her hands and stared bleakly into the small garden. Such starling chatter, mumble of bees, lazy plop of rising fish from the pool. Any week end now. The moon would be there, up there to show the moth-flight of the screaming owl, to darken the poppy heads in the rolling fields. Any week-end.

A LITTLE TEASING IS ALL RIGHT, BUT DON'T GET THE HABIT

Children and Adults Too Often Use Unpleasant Methods to Get Attention

"What is psychology behind a tease ?" asks a lady.

It seems that her son is a tease, and she is very much worried.

No one loves a joker and every one detests a tease. The tease graduates into the joker. It is all one and the same thing.

We believe the psychology behind it is cruelty. Cruelty is "delight in suffering" and the only kick the tease can possibly get out of his performances is to see others made uncomfortable.

Before going into it seriously, let it be mentioned that most of us are not a bit above laughing at someone who slips on an icy path, loses his hat or misses his train. It is quite legitimate to chuckle at odd mishaps and nobody thinks us cruel when we do.

Thus the same spirit probably motivates mischievous youngsters. Only they don't trust to chance to create these episodes. They plan the traps themselves. If they do it with cries or words, instead of tricks in hats, it is all the same thing. They like to see people squirm so they themselves can get a loush.

A bit of teasing is usually regarded as normal and need not be taken too seriously. When it becomes a habit, however, and increases in quality, then it earns the title of real cruelty.

Why ? Well—there is the bully instinct, "inferiority" coming up in own shame by pretending to be a heck of a fellow.

Another answer is "jealousy." This is most likely the case where the same person is always chosen for target.

Again, teasing is merely a bid for attention. Children and even adults who feel they are too little noticed often use unpleasant methods to gain attention.

A parent may regard the tease casually and without alarm if his antics are sporadic and only in fun. But chronic and vicious tease is different. The causes must be looked into.

Strange as it may seem, kindness and more love and sympathy are likely to work a charm.

To give an offender an occasional dose of his own medicine may help. But usually he is a short snort and "can't take it." If this low been tried and failed, there is no harm in trying the milder method. It may supply the very craving for attention the child is after.

HIS AMAZING LOVE

(By JOSEPHINE KANE)

I was hurrying across the small plot of grass between the Hospital and the Nurses' Residence one fine morning on the way to my office when I encountered a youth loitering around.

"Are you wanting anything?" "Yes, I'm just waiting to see Nurse Robinson." "Well you'll hardly see her this early as, no doubt, she is on duty." "Oh yes I will, for I phoned her I'd be waiting around here about ten, and that she could see me by looking out of the window. And she hasn't come yet." He was very confident.

I scented a romance right there, and asked a few leading questions which brought forth: "Yes, he'd been a patient in the Hospital for five weeks, had been operated upon for Mastoiditis." He had no difficulty in pronouncing the word, I noticed —"and did I think Nurse Robinson would be long?" I did not, "for," I said, "it is my firm intention of telephoning right away, and telling her that there is a fine upstanding chap looking up at her window, and that will bring her on the run, I know."

He smiled, with some confusion, but with evident relief. "What I'd like is the on, Ward J? All right, you wait just where you are for one minute."

I could not resist my office quickly enough; I was thrilled at my part. Here was a youngster anxiously waiting outside of a Hospital to obtain a glimpse of his nurse. Could you conceive of anything quite so lovely? One would imagine that the whole Hospital episode would make him eager to put miles between him and the place. But no, there he was, hungering for a look at the one who had bent over him in his pain. Just what tenderness, understanding of his plight, and real pathos, had "Nurse Robinson" shown that had irresistably drawn him to her?

These were the thoughts that chased through my mind as I tried, almost frantically, to get the switchboard, and my heart pounded upon "Oh dear, line busy! Another minute's wait, and still busy. . . . It was really ridiculous how impatient I was. I gave a hurried glance through the window. Yes, he was still there, gazing intently towards the building. At last: "Is that Miss Robinson, yes? Well for mercy sake do take time to throw yourself at the back window, and view your young Romeo. Yes, Tommie L., do you remember him? Well step on the gas and end his agony of waiting. It's perfectly too sad." With a merry laugh, and "I will," the receiver was hung up.

I looked out again. There he stood, with such a pleased and satisfied look on his young face. I felt somewhat at my inability to picture him thus for others to see; the eager eyes, and such a winning shyness in his attitude as he stood there in the early morning sunlight, straight and slim as a sapling, with his arm up-raised drawing her glare in his direction. Said to my perhaps romantic, eyes, showing just a hint of his not-too-far-away manhood. He was indeed lovely.

When he was leaving, I called him into my office. I was anxious to talk further with him, to draw him out, and obtain if I could, something of what was in his heart. But that he was a friend of the following, and his eyes questioned: "Why all this interest?" "Oh,-it hadn't been too bad; he wouldn't mind being back, only the end of the part, and of course he wouldn't like to be operated upon again for he might die." "Were the nurses good to him?" "Well, he'd say so, they were great!" That was about all he would commit himself to in words, but I had seen his eyes, and he had come back to the Hospital. That was enough to fire my imagination. "Come back again soon" I said as he left, to see me as well as Nurse Robinson?

It sat down quietly at my desk, stirred at what sad, so unexpected-ly, been granted me. Such a comfestation of an adoring love of a small patient for his nurse, the most wonderful movie had been enacted right before my astonished eyes, on a stage presenting a little green sward behind the towering walls of a large and old institution, the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, I wish others could have shared it with me, but my eyes alone had seen it.

Had I been depressed that morning as I started out for my office? Well just a little, perhaps, but not now. The whole world had been changed for me, and magnified. How privileged to be on the staff of an institution where one may see such ailing little ones nursed back to health and strength, but where one sees a number of them taken to understanding love abounded as to make these tiny mites eager to come back "to see Nurse Robinson," and smile with such confidence at the nurse. A scene as I had witnessed. Was my share in it small as it was, worthwhile? I had been shown it was.

And so I am going to ask you to help us in this work of curing the sick little ones of Ontario. The need for funds is most urgent. Last year we nursed 7,311 patients in our cots and gave 53,789 treatments at our Out-Patient Department. This does not begin to tell the immensity of the work accomplished. It merely gives you a glimpse of what it must have been. Your contribution may be sent care of the Secretary-Treasurer, Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

No amount is too small—Many littles make a muckle.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

(Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.)

New Poultry Council

The Ontario Poultry Council was formed provisionally at Guelph, early in November and held its first meeting. This Council represents all of the poultry associations known. The names of these five associations are: Canadian Baby Chick Association, Ontario R. O. P., Ontario Hatchery Approval, Ontario Registered Breeders' Association, Ontario Poultry Conformation. Three representatives from the executives of these associations from this council.

Educational Exhibits

The Dominion Department of Agriculture and the Ontario Department of Agriculture were able jointly to put on the Royal Winter Fair and fillet considerable space with splendid educational exhibits. Both Departments emphasized market grades and the preparation of farm produce for market. The exhibit of eggs, showing all the grades was educational indeed, and the same applied to the bacon and lamb displays. Attention was likewise drawn to the proper sales of graded beef and to what is meant by Red and Blue quality. Other branches of the Departments concerned prominent positions in strategic locations.

The Ontario Agricultural College exhibit emphasized the importance of pasture improvement and had on display the actual sward from several pastures where experimental work is being conducted. The improved strains of several grasses were likewise presented for the first time.

Improvement of the Bushlot

Late fall and early winter is the ideal time for working in the bush as the ground is dry and frozen, and there is little snow to interefere with the work.

Many farmers who have been farming cool and saving the seeds will be turning back to the bush for their fuel because of the depression. In cutting a bush the owner should think of the future more than in most other farm operations, as cuttings now may affect the bush 50 to 100 years hence. In all bushes that have not been heavily pastured there are trees whose removal would benefit the remaining stand. These trees will make excellent firewood. In most of the bushes selection cutting should be practiced which is cutting trees here and there through the bush. In this way the bush is never broken as seedlings spring up in the small openings.

Many fine young trees have been cut down during the past two decades to be sawn by the buzz-saw. These trees have just reached the stage to put their maximum wood growth, and often it left five years longer would put on as much wood in growth as they have in the previous 25 years.

For further information write to the Forestry Branch, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. The Forestry Branch also publishes a bulletin on "The Woodlot" which is sent on application.

Winter Fair Winners

Winners in the Agricultural Societies' Class at the Guelph Winter Fair, were as follows:—

1st, Tweedsmuir Society, 482 points; 2nd, Paris Society, 449 points; 3rd, Orrick Society, 446 points; 4th, Alliston Society, 435 points; 5th, Owen Sound Society, 432 points; 6th, Equesing Society, 431 points; 7th London Township Society, 430 points; 8th, Markham Society, 427 points; 9th, Wellington County Society, 425 points; 10th, Camden Society. Other contributing Societies were as follows: Scott Society, South Huron Society, Brooke and Alvinston Society, Peel County Society, Cookstown Society, Richmond Hill Society, North Middlesex Society, Fine Society, Moore District, Comber Society and Powassan Society.

Silage Crops

For ten years the Field Husbandry Division at Ottawa has been conducting experiments with the ensilage of various crops. Twenty crops cut at different stages of maturity and under different conditions have been successfully ensiled in experimental silos. Over two hundred tests have been made. Of the crops tested, corn is without doubt the best for ensiling. Sunflowers are recommended on heavy clay soils and in cool climates where corn does not do well. Mixtures of oats and peas, or oats, peas and red clover is an excellent silage crop but alfalfa is rather difficult to ensile and should be used for hay where possible. Buckwheat cut in full bloom, yields 7 or 8 tons per acre of fairly good silage. Experiments are being continued with these and other crops.

O.A.C. Short Courses

Special attention is directed to the Horticultural Short Courses being held at O. A. C., Guelph, January 2nd to 11th. It is confidently expected that everyone interested in Fruit and Vegetable growing and in ornamental Horticulture will take advantage of this opportunity. There are no fees or expenses other than board and lodging which will cost $5 per day. In addition to the regular staff of the O.A.C. and the Vineland Experimental Station, there will be a number of outstanding speakers, including: "How Plants Live," "Soils and Soil," "Soil Drainage," "Types of Insects and Methods of Control," "Diseases of Plants, Nature and Method of Control," "Plants Nutrients, Their Uses and Effects," "Home Grounds," "Plant Nutrition," "Cold Storage of Horticultural Products," "The Place of the Honey Bee in Horticulture," "Uses of Cement" In addition, there will be more specialized lectures for the different groups under various heads Entertainment will clear the stomach and intestines and restore healthfulness.

Suffered For Years With Backache

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Soon Made Her Well

Mrs. Simmonds Strongly Recommend's Dodd's

Cornwall, Ont., Dec. 25 (Special) "I have no hesitation whatever in recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills," writes Mrs. I. Simmonds, 418 Adolphus St., Cornwall, Ont. "I at twenty-seven years of age and have suffered for a number of years with pains in my back.

"About three years ago, after trying nearly every kind of medicine available, I was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have used them, on and off, for about two years and now I can go about without suffering pain. Whenever I am troubled again I shall immediately turn to Dodd's Kidney Pills, which I have named the 'King of Tonics.'"

Mrs. Simmonds now knows, as do thousands of others that backache is usually the first sign of kidney trouble. It is nature telling you that the kidneys are failing in their important duty of removing the impurities from the blood.

Hay Market Report

In the eastern part of the province the demand for hay is slow at present as dealers bought rather extensively earlier in the season. There have been a few shipments to New York state recently. A large part of the 1934 crop of market hay is still in growers' hands in the Ottawa valley and the St. Lawrence counties, and consists mainly of timothy and timothy-clover mixed. Prices being paid growers range from $10 to $12 per ton.

Prices to the growers for timothy, in Northern Ontario, range from $11 to $14 per ton with a steady demand in the towns and cities.

There is practically no surplus of market hay in Central Ontario this year and the prices range from $16 to $16.50 per ton, and $6.00 for oat straw.

In Southwestern Ontario alfalfa has been the principal hay in supply this year. There is also a fair quantity of timothy and timothy-grass mixed. Little clover hay is available in this part of the province. The demand for hay is only fair at present as live stock is still on pasture in many localities owing to the open weather. Prices to growers are lower than during September ranging from $14 to $16 per ton for timothy No. 1. Local markets such as cities are reported to be taking the available supply in the district. Growers are being paid $5.50 to $7.50 for oat straw and 7 to $8 for wheat straw.

The Oil for the Farmer— A bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the farm home will save many a journey for the doctor. It is not only good for the children when taken with colds and croup, and for the mature who suffer from pains and aches, but there are directions for its use on sick cattle. There should always be a bottle of it in the house.

Recipes & Hints

It is the desire of "The Beaver" to devote this section of the paper, regularly, to the publication of Recipes and Household Hints, received from local women or women's organizations. We would be pleased to receive recipes and suggestions and would ask that they be contributed under the contributor's names, as requested. Contributions will be used as space permits.

(Send them in early in the week.)

CASSEROLE OF HAMBURG

This meat and vegetable combination depends on powdered sage and crushed bayleaf for its seasoning.

One pound round steak ground, one teaspoon powdered sage, one crushed bayleaf, four to six potatoes, two medium sized onions, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, two cups canned tomatoes, two tablespoons butter, paprika.

Trim meat from steak and try out fat. Put steak through food chopper and season with sage, bayleaf, salt and pepper. Brown lightly in hot fat. Put a layer of thinly sliced potatoes in casserole. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover with a layer of meat. Add a layer of sliced onions and cover with a layer of tomatoes. Continue layer for layer until all is used, putting dots of butter and salt on layer of potatoes. Make the top layer of potatoes and sprinkle with paprika. Cover and bake two hours in a moderate oven, removing cover for last half hour in oven top.

MEAT AND TOMATO PIE

Two cups chopped tomatoes, two tablespoons flour, two tablespoons grated onion, one teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper, two cups chopped meat of any kind, one cup flour, one egg, two tablespoons shortening, half teaspoon salt, half a cup milk, two teaspoons baking powder.

Heat bacon fat and add meat. Stir and cook until brown. Sift over flour and mix thoroughly. Add tomatoes, onion and parsley and bring to the boiling point. Season with salt and pepper and pour into well buttered baking dish. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder and rub in shortening. Beat egg until light and work with milk, cutting it into flour with a knife. Spread roughly over mixture in the open weather. Prices to growers are lower than during September ranging from $14 to $16 per ton for timothy No. 1. Local markets such as cities are reported to be taking the available supply in the district. Growers are being paid $5.50 to $7.50 for oat straw and 7 to $8 for wheat straw.

ASPARAGUS AND CREAM SAUCE

The following recipe is taken from the bulletin issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture on canning fruits and vegetables for variety in every-day meals:—

One No. 2 can of asparagus (cooked in the can); drain, reserving the liquid, and arrange on buttered toast. Pour over it the following sauce:

Two tablespoons butter.
Half cup asparagus liquor.
One-third cup grated cheese.
Two tablespoons flour.
Half cup of milk.
One teaspoon salt.

To make this sauce, melt the butter; add flour and blend until smooth, gradually add the liquid and stir until thickened; cook gently for a few minutes, then add cheese and salt. After the sauce is poured over, sprinkle with paprika. Serve at once.

CRANBERRY JELLY

Two pounds (4 quarts) ripe cranberries, four cups water, five and a half cups granulated sugar, half a cup commercial pectin.

Put water and cranberries in a large sauce pan and bring to the boiling point. Rub through a strainer. There should be seven and a half cups fruit pulp and juice. Add water if necessary. Combine sugar and fruit and bring quickly to boiling point, stirring constantly. The mixture must boil hard. Begin to count the time when hard boiling begins and boil hard, stirring constantly, for one minute. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Skim and pour at once into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin and when cold cover with another layer of paraffin.

GRAPE JUICE JELLY

Two cups grape juice, three cups granulated sugar, half a cup commercial pectin.

Put sugar and juice into a large sauce pan and mix well. Bring quickly to the boiling point and add pectin, stirring constantly. Boil hard for thirty seconds. Remove from fire, skim and pour at once into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin as in previous recipe.

SOFT AND SUPPLE

To soften the backs of fur rugs which have been hardened in washing, remove the canvas backing and rub olive oil or glycerine well into the skin. This will require time and patience, as comparatively little oil should be used at a time, but it must be worked well in with the fingers until the skin becomes supple. Wipe off any surplus oil and replace the canvas backing.

Nuts in the Menu

BY BARBARA B. BROOKS

Early in life I knew what a nut tree should look like because in kindergarten we cut out green, billowy tops which were nested just above short slender trunks on sand brown landscapes. The trees were put on with brown crayon and would have been the pride of any nut grower for they were full of their kind.

It was not until this Fall, however, traveling along the coast line in California, that I saw real nut groves with rows and rows of trees for miles after miles. I recognized them at once, for they were to me all that nut trees should have been. True, the green was softer, the trunk more grey than brown and the nuts were not in evidence, but form and symmetry were perfect, and each grove stood like a skillfully made kindergarten cutout.

This was a real pleasure because it is not often that adult realization is equal to childish expectation. Best of all, nuts, like nut trees, never disappoint. You can use nuts in the menu with great expectations and few limitations. Just remember that nuts, seeds really, are concentrated foods, rich in protein and fat, but low in starch. Chestnuts which naturally have a high starch content for protein, are an exception.

Nuts are the best thing to supplement carbohydrate foods which are high in starch and low in protein and fat. Combine them with breads, muffins, cakes, sweets, vegetables and fruits, rather than milk, eggs, cheese, or meat dishes. Or, if you do use nuts and cheese together, for instance, add a starchy food to balance the combination. Use the cheese and nut mixture for sandwiches or as a spread for gingerbread.

Cereals are particularly good with nuts. Not only do the food values of one supplement those of the other, but each seems to enhance the flavor of the other. Add chopped nuts to ready-to-eat cereal for variety in flavor as well as increased food value. Both cereals and nuts can be added to the usual ingredients for quick breads and cakes.

Freshen nuts by heating them in a buttered skillet for a few minutes. This is a little precaution, but very much to do with fine flavor in nut cakes.

MOCHA NUT CAKE

Half cup shortening.
One cup sugar.
Two eggs (separated.)
Two and one-quarter cups flour.
Two teaspoons baking powder.
Half teaspoon salt.
Three-quarters cup nutmeats.
One cup decaffeinated coffee.
One teaspoon vanilla.

Cream shortening, add sugar and beat until fluffy. Add egg yolks and beat thoroughly. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add to flour mixture the nutmeats broken into small pieces and add to creamed mixture alternately with the decaffeinated coffee. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and the vanilla. Bake in a buttered cake pan (8" square is good size) in a moderate oven 390 deg. F., one hour.

FROSTING

One cup brown sugar.
Half cup granulated sugar.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
Half cup strong decaffeinated coffee infusion.
Two egg whites.

Cook the sugars, salt and coffee infusion, stirring constantly, until the sugars are dissolved. Continue cooking without stirring to a temperature of 238 deg. F. (soft ball). Pour the syrup slowly over the beaten egg whites. Set bowl of mixture in hot water and beat until firm enough to spread on cake.

CORN FLAKE DROP COOKIES

One-quarter cup butter.
Half cup brown sugar.
Half cup white sugar.
One egg.
Half cup pecans, broken.
Half cup shredded cocoanut.
Four cups corn flakes.

Cream butter and sugars, add egg and beat well. Stir in nuts, cocoanut and corn flakes. Drop onto a greased cookie sheet, shaping with a round bowled tablespoon. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for about ten minutes. Yield: Two and a half dozen cookies.

SUGARED BRAZIL NUTS

One pound shelled brazil nuts.
One pound sugar.
Half cup water.

Put the brazil nuts into a heavy frying pan with sugar and water and cook until syrup forms the hard ball test in cold water. Remove from the fire and work with a spoon until the sugar granulates and separates from the nuts. Remove half the sugar and continue cooking nuts with the other half. When the brazil nuts have taken up this sugar, add the remainder, little by little, until it has all been taken up by the nuts. Remove from the fire and shake in a sieve until the nuts which stick together are separated.

POTATO NUT BALLS

Add chopped pecans to seasoned mashed sweet potatoes. Form into balls or croquettes. Roll in corn flakes then into slightly beaten egg and again in corn flakes. Fry in hot, deep fat (about 380 deg. F.) until browned. Drain on brown paper of paper towel and serve hot.

Unemployment Intensifies Plight of the Tuberculous

The unemployment problem has intensified the work carried on at the Toronto Hospital for Consumptives and Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children, where more than a thousand patients are now being treated.

It is hard to realize the plight of the unfortunate victims of tuberculosis many of whom come from the homes of the unemployed. Where the breadwinner makes the supply of fresh air and sunshine often as meagre as that of nourishing food.

At these three institutions, men, women and children are now being provided with that which they hitherto lacked and there is hope for their recovery if friends continue the voluntary contributions of other years. Only a few patients are able to pay anything towards the cost of their maintenance and the whole cost of maintenance is received. Each year, there is a difference of thousands of dollars to be paid out.

CHRISTMAS—and "GOD BLESS US EVERY ONE!"

By FRANCES MARSHALL MORGAN

MAGAZINE writer, not long ago made the statement that the real Christmas spirit was as deceased as old Marley's ghost — dead as the proverbial doornail — or deader. "We are simply mad," he said in substance; "we modern men and women; even our children have become too sophisticated to believe in its milk and water myths—

A man who will deliberately and with malice aforethought sit down before his wheezy old typing machine and vilify not millions of sentiments of that kind, without a single qualifying phrase attached, is either a brute moron or a shameless glutton. Either he came into the world with light mental luggage or else he wrote that article the day after the Christmas feast—three helpings of juicy, tender turkey nestling close to a sugary pyramid of cranberries, fragrant giblet gravy and biscuits — southern style — done to a golden turn; a feast in which a steaming, raisin-studded and spice-spiked plum pudding played a stellar role.

This is a day of "movements." Suppose we start a brand new one. Suppose we go out and run to earth every sour, dyspeptic, disillusioned, ill-joy old Scrooge in the land, tie ropes of popcorn, scarlet ribbons and tinsel securely around each scrawny knee, and hang them as high as Haman on the biggest, brightest Christmas tree that ever made happy the hearts of tiny boys and girls. (And serve them right.) And we'll let them screech, "Humbug! Humbug!" as loudly as they choose—once they are safely strung up.

This would be a real world, indeed, were it not for the other kind of folk. Thanks be to the gods that have kept alive the beautiful, child-like, generous spirit of them those wonderful ones, ever young, ever regenerating, though their heads be as silver, who believe in Christmas, who believe in Santa Claus, in little laughing children, in friendship's vows renewed; who believe in making all the sin of which we are capable like the Christmas stars themselves.

And here are three lusty cheers for the men and women who stand boldly forth and stoutly maintain that "Old Christmas" has changed not one jot or tittle throughout the ages—that it will never change as long as childhood lasts in the world, as long as family ties bind and friendship's faith remains. Bless their loving hearts! May their Christmas wish come true, be they rich or poor, of high or low degree, and in whatever place they bless with their sweet presence.

Christmas was surely meant to be a season of joy and laughter, as well as one in which we glorify the birth of the blessed Saviour. Throughout the ages a spirit of revelry has marked the tide of Yule. The observance of an annual season of merriment dates back even further than the advent of Christianity. It is said that the pagan world celebrated the birth of Bethlehem the ancient pagans celebrated a yearly feast near the winter solstice. Romans called this the Saturnalia. It was marked with much wine-drinking, dancing and eating.

In the ancient countries of the North huge fires were kindled and the Aryl reaping flames took skyward human beings were sacrificed upon the altars of Thor and Odin. The Goths and Saxons called this the festival of Yule.

The Teutons selected a huge tree which they raised amid much chanting and shouting, in honor of the god of the sun. Bright objects and lights were placed in its branches to represent the light of day, the moon and stars. Animals were fastened to the branches, historians say, that the pagan gods might be propitiated in favor of their savage worshipers.

So we know that the Christmas celebration were not at the beginning of religious significance. But with Christianity's dawn the many old customs that remained were given a religious symbolism. There are a number of our present-day customs that are picturesque and interesting because of their great antiquity.

When we tramp into the winter woods and bring home loads of scarlet-berried holly and mistletoe, we are merely following in the footsteps of our pagan ancestors. When we wreathe our doorsills and windows with the beautiful, waxy white clusters of mistletoe, when we ornament the mantle above the bright fire with its dark-green clusters, we are but unconsciously repeating the pagan custom of old when the Druids the ancient priests, performed their mystical rites upon their forest altars.

The cutting and burning of the Yule log is, today, as important as a feature of the Christmas celebration, as the manor homes of "Merrie England" as it was before the world knew the meaning of a true Christian observance of the season. The cheery, heartening salutation „Merry Christmas !" originated in England. This greeting has never been known to fail in bringing a smile to even the most woe-begone countenance.

And an English Christmas is, indeed, a wonderful thing to experience. Even the very tales of the Englishman's Yuletide make our hearts beat faster and our imaginations run riot. The time has not yet arrived when Dickens' "Christmas Carol" with its description of the Christmas market stalls with their long rows of hanging geese decorated with bunches of sage and onions, of tarts, puddings and sweetmeats will lose its delicious charm and mouth-watering powers.

And who can write about Christmas without thinking of the humble though none the less delectable dinner presided over by proud Bob Cratchit—and Tiny Tim seated on the board with his frail, small fingers clasping his spoon and repeating honest Bob's blessing as he gazed upon his adoring family—"God bless us, every one." Poor little Tim with his crutch across his knee!

Some authorities state that the Christmas tree as we know it originated in Scandinavia. Others claim that the Germans first made use of it. Certain it is that we, in our own land, did not have our brightly decorated trees until after the German immigrant arrived.

Christmas carols are sung in many lands; in England, in France where they are called "noels," in Wales, Ireland and Italy and in many other countries. In Italy, at the season of Advent, the Calabrian shepherds troop down from their hills and chant their unusual mountain songs in the cities. The word "carol" is derived from "conture," meaning to sing and "rola," an interpection of joy; therefore it is not a musical term peculiarly belonging to Christmas, although it is usually associated with this season. One of the most ancient, if not the very oldest carol of a religious nature is the exquisite, "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night." It was written by Nahum Tate, England's poet laureate, in 1692.

Quaint old English carols that are still sung are: "God Rest You, Merry Gentlemen," "Good King Wenceslas" and "The Holly and Ivy." These were sung by the waits who went from house to house in the old days. A whole book could be made interesting by recounting the customs of the ancient carol singers of the different lands.

In connection with the Christmas candle which has been used as a beautiful symbol in many countries from ancient days to the present, it is interesting to know that even the gypsies, those wandering, mysterious vagabonds of unknown origin and self-exiled aristocrats, have a legend about a burning candle that was set at a certain season to light the way of a mother and child across the darkness of a desert land. This legend is to be found somewhere in an old book—perhaps it was recounted by George Borrow—but the writer of these lines has been unable to locate it again.

After all, it is the spirit of any observance that really counts.

When a mother detects from the writhings and fretting of a child that worms are troubling it, she can procure no better remedy than Miller's Worm Powders, which are guaranteed to totally expel worms from the system. They may cause vomiting, but this need cause no anxiety, because it is but a manifestation of their thorough work. No worms can long exist where these Powders are used.

Christmas Legend

Quaint and curious are some of the old moniish stories about the first Christmas. One of the charming legends relates that at the moment of the Nativity everything and everybody stood still. The birds paused for an instant in mid-air; rivers ceased for the time to flow—in short, all movements of men and things everywhere were suspended for a brief space. The spells of witches and wizards evidently became ineffectual—an idea which was no doubt, at the root of Shakespeare's reference to Christmas time as being a holy time that "no fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm."

Two table-top pictures. At left, is a tiny cork-and-paper ship given a "Flying Dutchman" aspect by placing it on a pane of glass and shooting from underneath. Above, a circus scene made with familiar dolls and toys.

ONE of the most interesting of camera stunts is the making of "table-top" pictures. As the term indicates, you assemble your picture material on some convenient table or bench, and shoot it from any desired angle.

"Table-top" pictures are, usually, very much like model stage settings. You may use dolls, toys, statuettes, model airplanes, miniature trains, boats—anything at all that appeals to you. The point of the whole thing is to arrange your subjects in an interesting, realistic, or fantastic fashion, and to light this arrangement so that it makes a good picture.

Usually, these pictures are taken at close range. If your camera cannot be focused for close-ups, use a portrait attachment—a simple, inexpensive, and highly useful little gadget.

There's no limit to the effects you can achieve. And there's nothing much more fascinating than working them out. Here are some pointers that may save you time and trouble:

Remember that the only point of view that matters is the point of view of your camera's lens. Your set-up may appear charming from above or from the side. But don't let it mislead you. The camera must be pleased.

Working at close range, the depth of focus of your lens is not likely to be great. So keep the elements within as short a distance, front to back, as possible. And the most important feature should be at the point of exact focus.

If you want to give an effect of deep distance, as in a miniature landscape set-up, place various figures (trees, houses, fences, etc.) in receding planes. The focus will be less exact at the distance from the camera increases. A piece of dark cardboard, cut with an irregular edging, and placed at the back of the set, will become a range of distant hills. And a big piece of light cardboard, set up well back of the rest of the set-up, gives you a good "sky".

Remember that the camera's outlook is wedge-shaped—narrow close to the lens and widening out as it goes into the distance.

The greatest fun in this work is playing with light. Sometimes a single strong flood of light will give you what you want. Again, you may want one figure to stand out brilliantly, with everything else subdued. To do this, you will have to block off most of the light with shirt cardboards, books, or whatever you have.

You'll get your best effects by working with the lens at its smallest opening. Allow plenty of time—anywhere from ten-seconds to a minute or two, depending on the amount of light.

Too, don't forget that most films register blue as white, and red as black or dark gray. A white figure against a blue background will tend to be lost; similarly, a red figure will not stand out against a dark background.

It's fascinating business, all in all, and will repay you well for your patience and ingenuity.

Why Britain Approves Canadian Poultry

The British Isles are going to have Canadian turkeys again for Christmas this year, and there are several good reasons why the British poultry trade is full of praise for Canadian quality and Canadian methods. Canadian exporters of turkeys know what the British market demands the best and the Poultry Services of the Dominion Department of Agriculture assist in every way possible in safeguarding the Dominion's reputation for correct grading and uniformity in the packing of the dressed birds. All of the poultry exported from Canada is government inspected and certificates are issued before the poultry is shipped. But this work of inspection, it is necessary to engage a considerable number of inspectors each fall, and it is realized that in the selection and training of these men who place the mark of the Canadian Government on each box of poultry, lies largely the secret of Canada's success.

The appointment of an inspector is no hap-hazard affair. The inspectors are chosen by examination, which consists not only of a written test of the candidate's knowledge of the poultry industry, and of the dressed poultry trade in particular, but also of a practical demonstration of the candidate's ability to grade poultry in accordance with the Canadian standards. Only those men who take a high standing in the practical test are chosen. To be able to accomplish that, they must have considerable knowledge of the poultry trade and also be all-round well equipped individually.

Nor does the matter end here. Following the selection of these men as government inspectors, grading schools are held in principal centres in the producing areas, to which not only those who are to be inspectors are invited but the graders for the co-operative associations and private firms as well. In these schools the men are given extended practice in grading and their results are closely checked, including their ability to judge weight tolerances, and particularly in packing. The inspectors who are to pass judgment on the grading of others, are taken aside and given a further special course of instruction, in addition to that which the regular graders receive.

Poultry is graded by the graders as it comes from the producers. The inspectors observe the grading of the birds as they are placed in the boxes, keeping a check on the weight grade, tions in the box, and on the skill and attractiveness of the packing. In this way, right across Canada, a great bulk of poultry intended for export and interprovincial movement is packed under one system and under one plan. One of the leading Smithfield merchants told an officer of the Canadian Government last year, how pleased he was with the Canadian service, particularly with regard to Christmas turkeys. Hitherto it had been the practice of other countries to ship these birds keeping miscellaneously. The merchant had to hang them up and escort each specimen along the line. Children individually select the birds required, but under the Canadian system the merchant has only to open up a single grade and sell the man up to 100 birds on the basis of that grade. It saves the firm's and also the customer's time, the merchant explained, and enables him to give first-class service.

Dollars Bring Health to Frail and Weak

Up in Muskoka, where sparkling lakes and pure, fresh air is abundant, stands Dr. Ydelda's Sanitarium in Bracebridge on a high plateau, overlooking the Muskoka River and the Toronto Muskoka Sanatorium and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptives. Here, too, there are havens for the frail and weak and there is never-ending work for the love of man, women and children is the motive.

"There are only few of the patients in these hospitals who can pay anything like a real living rate. There is none for whom the whole cost of maintenance is not involved. For the difference we look to many thousands of dollars a year, these institutions look to the generosity of warm-hearted friends. Last year, Christmas was a very joyful time for many children who brought back home now well and tired.

Over a thousand patients are now being cared for in these hospitals. Many others will be on the waiting list. These hospitals can give. Will you please help them so that none may be turned away by sending a gift of money to George A. Reid, Treasurer, Dept. 38, Canada Cement Building, 1245 College Street, Toronto 2.

Misses Clara and Emma Shorey were the Christmas guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Shorey, at Cannington.

The annual White Gift service of the Young People's Society of the United Church was held at the Sunday evening service, which was largely attended. Rev. Anderson gave a splendid address. "O Holy Night" and "Come." Christmas hymns were sung and the choir gave special music appropriate for the occasion. After the address, four girls, Dorothy Joyce, Mary Holden, Dorothy Paul and Beatrice Yates, gathered the white gifts. Also the "Trail Rangers" brought a goodly number. Little boys and Mr. Alfred Rogers kindly repaired them, to give to children that would not receive gifts. They were distributed by the young people on Christmas Eve.

The Public School concert, which was held on Friday evening, was a splendid success. Miss Rundle and Miss deserve great credit for training the children, for a splendid programme was rendered. The audience on such a stormy evening.

Rev. Frank Anderson, B.A., of Oshawa; Dr. Douglas Anderson, of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hudgins, of Selby, were the holiday guests of Rev. and Mrs. Anderson, at the parsonage.

Miss Inez McKnight, of Selby, spent Christmas at her home in Selby.

Mr. Wm. Ellis, of the Beaver, and Staff, I wish you A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year, and many more to come.

EMPEY HILL

Empey Hill, December 24—Mr. and Mrs. McMath, Mr. and Mrs. Empey, Mr. and Mrs. MacGillivary, attended the sixtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hinds and Mrs. James McMath, Deseronto. We extend congratulations.

Miss Mabel Stafford was operated on on Wednesday in Kingston Hospital. Miss is able to be around again, and much improved in health.

Mr. Stewart Hyland is engaged with his tractor pressing hay and straw.

Miss Freda Pingland has been out of school a few days with lumbago.

The farmers are busily engaged in cutting and hauling wood.

BETHEL

Bethel, December 21—The heavy fall of snow on Wednesday evening, one feel that winter is here to stay. About ten inches fell on the level, and the ice in the lakes is around eight inches thick.

Practicing for Christmas entertainments has been the joy of the young folk for the past few weeks.

Miss Mary Wallace, Bethel schoolteacher, held a very successful Christmas tree and entertainment last night.

Miss Winnie Eckhardt, Colebrook school teacher, and also Miss Ingripe, Colebrook Boarding School, will hold theirs jointly on Christmas Eve, and are looking forward to a splendid time and a full house.

Mr. Percy Galbraith has a couple of men, the Griffith brothers, threshing wood.

Several from this vicinity spent a day this week in Kingston, shopping for Santa Claus.

Mr. Thos. Allenbrack, who has been ill for some time, took much worse on Wednesday evening, and is lying very low at the time writing, with Dr. Whytock in attendance.

Those who are planning to spend Christmas away from home are hoping the weather man will not spoil the roads for travelling.

Mr. Editor, and the Staff of The Napanee Beaver, we wish you a Very Merry Christmas and a Prosperous and Happy New Year.

YARKER

Yarker, December 24—On Monday of last week, December 17th, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Edgar, of this village, were home to their numerous friends. The occasion was the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. The marriage certificate, which Mrs. Edgar has kept in good condition, showed that on the 17th of December, 1884, the ceremony that made the two of them one was performed in the Township of Clark's Mills, now Camden East. In the neighborhood of ninety guests presented themselves to do honor to the couple who have travelled the long trail together for a half a century. Cake and coffee were served, and many offerings of good will were extended. Their two sons and daughter were home for the event, Osborne, of Kingston; Percy of Moose Jaw, and Mrs. F. Garrison, of Colebrook. The Ladies' Aid of the United Church, of which society Mrs. Edgar has been a member for long standing, appeared in a body, and presented her with a beautiful basket of yellow mums as an expression of the society's good will and kindly feelings. The two grandsons, Miss Jean Wright; Miss Pauline Buck; Miss Isabelle McKenzie, Miss Dorothy Garrison and Miss Mildred Edgar. During the course of the afternoon and evening Mr. Edgar entertained guests with incidents and stories of things that have occurred during the past fifty years, drawing attention to the great and many changes that have taken place in that time. Mr. Edgar is enjoying the best of health. Mrs. Edgar has not been overly well for the past year or more, though quite able to receive guests on the day of their Golden Jubilee.

The heavy snowfall of last week, and the wind that followed, have blocked the road from Yarker north. Just north of Colebrook many cars were stalled Saturday and Sunday. Mr. McKenzie could not get through Sunday morning to keep his appointment at Moscow. Late Sunday afternoon, however, the snow plough went through, which cleared the road for the present. Snow fighters perhaps will help the situation when they get erected in their proper positions.

The public school held their concert on Friday night of last week.

REIDVILLE

Reidville, December 22.—The Christmas tree entertainment held in our school the night of December 20th was a great success. Even the weatherman helped by sending a five-inch blanket of snow which fell that night. Cars gave way to the old-fashioned sleighs, and the merry sound of sleigh bells added to the gaiety of the evening. Our popular teacher, Miss Lavere Allen, received a gift of flowers for having her pupils so well trained for this event. Drills, dialogues, recitations, musical items and Christmas choruses were pulled off with a regularity and precision that would do credit to a city school. A lynwood turn green with envy. The school house was tastefully decorated in red and green streamers and lovely evergreens. The holly was there, huge Christmas bells in evidence, even the old-fashioned fire place, with a Yule log fire, was also there. The audience was loud in praise to all the children's hearts, was gorgeous in gay attire and showed hospitality. At 9 o'clock Elmer Hyland, chairman, called the audience to order and introduced Santa, who was to come at 11 o'clock, appeared just as the clock struck the hour, dressed in red and white and looked the part. One could see they were enjoying the presence of Santa immensely, with just a touch of the crazy feeling when he came too close. After distributing the presents, St. Nicholas left, wishing everybody A Merry Christmas, and was whisked away in his sleigh, drawn by eight swift reindeers, disappearing in the big woods nearby.

Mr. W. M. Hyland, of Belleville, is visiting friends in Reidville and Croyden the past couple of weeks.

Mrs. Geo. Kennedy, of Chatham, spent a week at her brother's, Mr. Elmer Hyland.

Mrs. Bathrate of Toronto, is spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Bert Grinnell.

We are pleased to see Mr. Adam Fingland is able to be around again, and much improved in health.

Mrs. Preda Pingland has been out of school a few days with lumbago.

The farmers are busily engaged in cutting and hauling wood.

That Gobbler for Christmas

By CLARA DELAFIELD

"They Just Could Not Kill the Bird They Had Watched Grow Up From Babyhood"

AL, MARM, by yuhur I you have the gobbler for Christmas," said Silas Hicks "He'll be a fine bird by then. But I dunno. He's the only one I've reared out of that brood, and I'm kinder attached to him."

However, he promised Mrs. James finally to let her have the gobbler.

Silas Hicks was not a sentimental man. He was a farmer, and in business for the money it brought him. He had a brother John, who had gone to the city and made money hand over fist. John was a crusty old bachelor and largely devoid of the sense of family obligations.

There had been a time, five years before, when things went badly with Silas. There was a heavy mortgage to meet, the crops had been a failure, and he had been in danger of dispossession. Besides, his wife was on her sickbed, from which she was never to arise.

Silas had gone in his despair to the brother whom he had not seen for years. John had turned him down flat.

"Father left you the farm because you played up to him, and Father was out into the world," he said. "Now I've made my pile, you have the nerve to come to me for help. I don't see it, Silas."

"My wife's sick," pleaded Silas. "I've got to have more money than you know what to do with."

"Oh, I can find a use for it," John rejoined caustically. "Maybe if you'd shown a little sympathy for me when I was hoeing it on the sidewalks I'd have a little more for you, Silas."

Silas went home. Somehow he managed to survive the crisis. But his wife died, and he grew lonelier and lonelier. If he had a few thousand dollars he would have sold off. But he couldn't, so he toiled there alone.

He began to call it John. It had a queer way of putting its head upon one side and calling, as John used to do when he was a boy. Gradually the old Silas' fancy, the gobbler became an effigy of John. He hated it.

He hated it, and he was attached, too. He made a sort of pet of the bird. He wanted it to thrive, in so far as a turkey gobbler is capable of love. Then when Christmas came, he was going to cut its throat as slowly, bending its head back to see the terror in its eyes. He would thus get his revenge upon his brother.

"Yes, marm, John's thriving nicely, and putting on flesh," he told Mrs. James. "Here he comes. John I, John I"

Up came the big gobbler, put its head on one side amuf surveyed Silas to see if he had any bread crumbs.

"Isn't he the cutest thing?" said Mrs. James. "I don't wonder you can't bear to let me have it, Mr. Hicks."

"Oh, that's be all right, marm," responded Silas cheerily.

But he couldn't wield for the gobbler had come to fill his heart. Christmas was at hand. He pictured the bird, as he would look when he got up from it; then it should die slowly, as he would like John to die.

On Christmas morning he found a letter from an unknown correspondent in the city. Opening it, he read that his brother John was dead.

John had left forty thousand dollars, half of which was to go to Silas. "In memory of our boyhood times together, and in the hope that my ill feeling, if it existed, has long ago been canceled."

Silas stared at the letter. His eyes grew misty. He saw himself as a little boy upon the farm: his heart went out to John across the years. "John I, Gobbler I. The big turkey was standing in front of him, its head on one side, one claw raised, begging for crumbs.

"You great big faker, you!" he loved Silas.

The gobbler, looking a little alarmed, retreated a step or two.

"I don't," he said.

"Oh, no, Hicks, I'm willing to pay for that turkey, but somehow I—I feel I just can't use him after seeing him grow up from babyhood."

"Wal, Mrs. James, I was kinder feeling that way myself," said Silas Hicks, scratching his head. "You see, I'm selling out and going south, and I was thinking of taking him along and raising turkeys."

Canada has a world-wide reputation as a producer of asbige. Ontario and Quebec produce world contests in quality and price for many years.

The major commercial areas in Canad producing table stock, sowbe turnips for export, are Ontario and Prince Edward Island.

The total annual production of clovers and grass seeds in Canada has remained about the same in recent years.

PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE

We are given the gift of life, and whether we like it or not, we have to accept it. We cannot exchange it, except for one thing, which is death. Some, becoming bored with it, and not finding in it the pleasure and the joy which one should find in a gift, have deliberately effected this exchange. But not one of these has ever come back to tell us whether or not the exchange was worthwhile.

So the great majority of us keep on going. We accept—with more or less grace according to our various natures—this gift that has been thrust upon us. And it is astonishing how many points of beauty may be discovered in the unbiased scrutiny of even the most doubtful gift.

It seems to me that every normal, decent-living human-being on earth is a hero, no matter how humble or how insignificant, his pathway through life, he is, nevertheless, made of the stuff of heroes. He is born with a death sentence on his head. He does not know the hour: he does not know the day; but it is there hanging over his head like the sword of Damocles. HE KNOWS, that, perhaps to-morrow, perhaps next decade; his life will end.

Yet, he works; he strives; he laughs; he snatches at joy—and finds it, too. Gallantly, he puts behind him the thought of the inevitable ending, and builds his life as architecturally beautiful as possible; working on the supposition that the building shall endure through eternity.

Surprisingly, it often does. We, who are inferior, look back at the cathedral or palace, that someone has has made of his life, and we are inspired, and begin to build, too. Even if the one on whom we look back has achieved only a hut; if it is a clean hut and well-shaped, we are still inspired to build, ourselves. Then we see in the hut, the attempts made at a palace and we begin our foundations as gallantly and hopefully as our predecessor did. We are going to achieve the palace!

And so we go onward and upward, step by step, stone after stone, brick on brick, and the great alike. Destined for death as surely as the warriors in battle; but, like them, challenging it; fighting to the last; daring it; waving at it our swords of laughter and courage. And when it does overcome us, what of it? Just another adventurer, another country to explore.

This is the gallant side of life. And it is THERE. It is what keeps up from sinking back into the mud of protoplasm times and staying there. Human beings ARE gallant; and they ARE brave; and there is a thousand times as much good as evil in the world. If it were not so the world would cease to exist entirely.

Yes, human beings are both gallant and brave, but they are also strange creatures in a way. They cannot live alone; and they cannot live together. Every one is essentially lonely. Words are an insufficient medium for expressing what is really in our hearts. If it were not so the world would cease to exist entirely.

DR. A. R. DAFOE'S STORY OF THE DIONNE QUINTUPLETS' BIRTH

(As Reported in The New York Times)

babies do not look alike (any more than members of the same family). There are separate afterbirths for each baby, and the babies may or may not be of the same sex. The Dionne quintuplets then had their origin in one fertilized sac cell, and not five separate cells. The babies looked alike at birth and have gradually become more and more alike. At the present when they are lying in a row, it requires a certain amount of concentration to tell them apart. Their eyes are changing from a dark brown and their hair is a light shade of brown.

"In order to prevent any mistakes in identification of mother now or in the future, footprints of all the babies were taken and filed away. While from the feet are taken because the usual whorls found in adults are not developed enough in their tiny fingers to make an impression. At one time the possibility of a blood transfusion for one of the little babies was considered, so their blood was grouped, and as would be expected, they were all found to be of the same type.

"To any one, except a biological expert, the theories of how it all happened are difficult to understand. Some even go to the extent of 'throw-back' explanation. We occasionally see in human beings miniature twins in the abdomen and this is supposed to show that sometime during the process of evolution animal twins existed. It was had more than one baby at birth. There are other instances of apparently they are all based on comparison with lower animals, and there is no direct proof found in humans."

Describes Country There

Dr. Dafoe described the lake-studded country, with fertile patches between its rocky hills, and asserted that the hardy and sturdy inhabitants are essential to making a living in this country. Although many have been on relief in the last few years, work has been found for all of them, enabling them to retain their self-respect, he said.

"The people of this section of the Northland," he continued, "are sturdy. They are direct descendants of the early settlers of Lower Canada, who left Normandy willingly and gladly. Their home life is remarkably pure. They live close to the soil and up to what been spoiled by the modern civilization. These people are sturdy, simple, law-abiding folk. They love their race and particularly to their faith. Race suicide is non-existent and it is not unusual to find families of fifteen to twenty. They are naturally happy in nature, buoyant in outlook, and live to a some extent under a communal system.

"I have spent my summers spent in Callander and I am vitally interested in the problems, both medical and social, of the Indians that is there. My work has been hard at times, but I have been fairly happy through it all, and the smile of distinctions elsewhere, in this country will continue to be my hope.

"Immediately following graduation in 1907 I stepped out into the unknown realms of general practice with a few words of advise from a wonderful father—himself a country doctor who lived to practice for fifty-one years. 'Do your work well and keep your mouth shut.' The first year was made up of locum tenens work in several mining towns of Ontario, but finally ending up in Callander. This village at that time was very small with its lumbering activities during the Summer, but rather quiet in the Winter.

"The country surrounding was somewhat sparsely settled and the roads were very bad, impassable in the Winter and Spring months. The struggle which was necessary for a bare existence during the first five years of practice, remains as a nightmare.

Bought a Few Books

"It was able to save enough money to buy a few books and they, with my dog and rifle, were my constant companions. As time went on practice improved; better roads were built and the country opened up for Summer visitors. At the present I have a comfortable home with electricity and a good library and I still have my two friends to whom I have made an addition in the form of a radio.

"Mrs. Dionne was 25 years of age when the five babies were born. She was married at 16 and had six previous full-time babies, all of whom are living except one. A midwife looked after the births of her first and last two babies, but I looked after the other three. She did not receive medical pre-natal care with any of her pregnancies and all her babies were born in a normal way. Apart from the process of labor with each baby was less than five hours, and there were no complications. The mother was always out of bed by the fifth day, and carrying on with light house work. This treatment, of course is not due to my advice, but it has been the practice of the country. They would most certainly benefit by a continued rest in bed, but this is sometimes impossible to carry out as the houses are small and the children numerous.

Called in May 12

"My first intimation about the condition of the patient was received on May 12, when her husband came to tell me that she wasn't well. From the symptoms given it was evident that she was in a moderate degree of toxemia, or poisoning, of pregnancy present. He was asked to report during the next week and from certain tests it was easily seen that the condition was becoming worse and I insisted on visiting her. My fears were unfortunately true and I found the mother in rather an alarming condition. She was showing the typical signs of a condition well known in pregnancy, which borders on convulsions, but was still up and around. She was put to bed, help obtained, and certain measures of treatment instituted. She was somewhat uncertain about the exact time that the baby was expected, but on careful questioning, the expected date of birth was found to be around the third week of July.

"The examination showed that there was some definite abnormality of the pregnancy, but the tissues were so swollen, that exact findings were very difficult, and I didn't particularly suspect multiple pregnancy. From outward evidence in her history, there was a slight possibility of another baby, but there was no proof and, of course, this cannot be accepted as a fact. Therefore the next week the mother improved.

"At 4 a.m. on May 28th, a hurry call came from Dr. Dionne's home. I arrived to find the house in confusion, no preparation made for confinement, except a tea-kettle boiling on the stove. I was astonished to find two babies had already been born, and a third one was arriving. Two neighbours were present as midwives, and were excellent work. The father had disappeared. I scrubbed up in the best way available, and took over the situation. The neighbors then scurried around the house to get some coverings for the babies and replenish the fire. In the meantime, another baby arrived. Three babies was more than one baby at birth. There are other theories, but apparently they are all based on comparison with lower animals, and there is no direct proof found in humans."

He was asked to report during the next week and from certain tests it was easily seen that the condition was becoming worse and I insisted on visiting her. My fears were unfortunately true and I found the mother in rather an alarming condition. She was showing the typical signs of a condition well known in pregnancy, which the first opportunity was given to us to organize and lay out plans for the future. Previous to this, we were working with the most meagre equipment. The babies' room was isolated and carefully cleansed; all possible measures of aseptic technique were introduced, including gowns, masks, etc. The nurses, through a women's organization of North Bay, made special Little Red Riding Hood dresses without sleeves, absorbent cotton gauze jackets, and flannelled diapers to suit their small bodies. Each baby had its own complete outfit and these were washed most carefully and kept apart.

"The children of the house were moved to other quarters, as several of them had colds. We have been particularly fortunate in having such splendid nurses. They have been faithful and loyal and most faithful in their duty. Every one knows, I am sure, the value of good nursing with any case, but this is particularly true in the case of premature infants. A great deal of credit should go to them for the survival of these babies.

Babies Gained Steadily

"During the first few months the babies had their 'ups' and 'downs,' but they gained steadily in weight and their progress in health was favorable. They were fed at first every two hours, then 2½ hours and later three hours, and at present time, and now this has advanced to four hours. They remained in their incubators until they all reached the six-pound mark. They had their first bath with soap and water when they were two months old. Before this they were given olive oil baths. In the early weeks of development it was vitally important to handle these babies as little as possible, either in feeding or in cleaning.

"The growth of the three larger babies has been more rapid than that of the two smaller ones, but still they all have maintained a fairly normal increase. Little Marie has a haemangioma (or blood vessel tumor) on her right leg, which grew fairly rapidly from the size of a large nickel to a 50-cent piece. It was raised above the surface of the skin and was dark purple in color. This was treated with radium emanations in August, and although it hasn't disappeared, there is a cessation of growth. It will be necessary to have further radium.

An uncle of the children hesitatingly inquired of a North Bay newspaper the cost of inserting 'a new-in-a-row birth notice.? Dr. Dafoe read and then focused his attention of the world on the quintuplets. He said the publicity that followed them was bringing in much of the money for the school. Though he'd like to see Mrs. Dionne have a home of her own, he hoped that anobbish great-aunt who's given to Marie a complete doll's house and doesn't want Patty around. She has a home Christmas more than your Jim."

Father was eyeing mother anxiously. Her bright smile eased him. "Well, I'm sure there's room for them both. I am glad you have such kind hearted children."

"But now Mr. Will spoke timidly. "I'm sorry, mother but I, too, have asked a guest. Couldn't help it some how! That young Miller at the office. How can you about his mother's death; and a boarding house is a dreary place to spend Christmas, I'm sure. Hospital is unsuitable, most pleading.

But Mrs. Will's bright smile had not turned to a calm, resigned look. "Oh, that's splendid, dear," she said. "For, do you know, I myself have invited that pretty little Gladys Sayers. She looked so wistful when I met her at the grocer's Saturday afternoon. Her mother also was going home for Christmas. She said a poor school teacher couldn't travel way from Christmas at home. What could I do! And do you know I've always thought Gladys and Ted Miller ought to meet. They're such nice young people—and Gladys is so pretty!"

Mr. Will's face lighted and the Wills' precious family Christmas. But one of the Wills felt that he had been cheated of anything. On the contrary! And Mr. and Mrs. Will are in clover happiness than ever. You see, they are the same sort of people—not a too common thing in this world. And Ted Miller and Lucy are growing up rather like them.

CAMDEN EAST

Camden East, December 24. — The Women's Missionary meeting resulted in the roads being quite heavy, but motor cars on Thursday morning had a difficult time in getting through. The was the first real storm so far this winter, and up until Wednesday the roads had been in good condition.

Many from the village attended the funeral of David Smith, an aged resident of Conway, on Monday. Burial was brought to Camden East on Wednesday last. Mr. Smith was well known in this vicinity. The family have the sympathy of the community in the loss of a devoted husband and father.

The public school closed on Friday for the Christmas vacation. The teacher and scholars held their annual concert in the hall on Friday night, and also the Sunday School combined. There were treats for the children, Christmas songs and recitations.

Mrs. David Smith and two daughters, of Conway, took tea with Mrs. Blanche Hawley on Wednesday afternoon last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Histed spent Friday afternoon at Napanee.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bellis received the lucky ticket for the turkey at John Dwyer's store on Thursday, and Mr. E. Hamilton on Friday. Received for the goose, and Wesley Patterson received the four pounds of cheese. Tates, and Mr. Allen got the two pounds of chocolates, and John Bellis got ten pounds of granulated sugar for the highest number of tickets.

Wall Street is getting over its powder, trigger, discouragement and sulkiness.—Rober W. Babson.

Christmas Day in Own Home

By ETHEL COOK ELIOT

Mother, Father and Children Have Special Christmas a Family Feast

I'M ALMOST glad we're not going to Grandmother's for Christmas this year,' Mrs. Will confided to Mr. Will a week before that day. 'To you realize we've never had a Christmas here in our own home, just ourselves and our family?'

'Yes, I've been thinking of that,' Mr. Will replied. 'Let's keep it just ourselves, and give the kiddies genuine home Christmas to remember.'

As usual Mr. and Mrs. Will were in complete agreement in their ideas and emotions. Mrs. Will sighed contentment. Mr. Will was contentment, too; for after all, such harmony as theirs is not so common and rare that it is worthy of wives and husbands.

But as Christmas day grew nearer and nearer Mrs. Will suddenly realized she was nursing a sick conscience. There was something she had not the heart to confide to Mr. Will. Now, Mr. Will had a sick conscience, too. There was something he had not the heart to confide to Mrs. Will. But fortunately everything was straightened out before Christmas that day of peace, dawned.

Mrs. Will's secret didn't know what the word conscience meant. Of course he had heard mother and father talk about it, but he knew only a strictly family Christmas would be. He had heard them, but perhaps he hadn't understood their sentiment. Anyway, at luncheon, two days before Christmas, he suddenly blurted, 'Say, Mom, I've asked Jim Larkin to our Christmas dinner and the tree. You know his folks are in Europe, and he's just staying on at the school. Thought he'd like it here better. Mom, homesick?'

'Oh, bother, Billy,' Lucy cried — thirteen-year-old Lady Lucy. 'I've told Jim she hasn't any folks any more, even in Europe. Just that snobbish great-aunt who's given to Marie a complete doll's house and doesn't want Patty around. She has a home Christmas more than your Jim.'

Father was eyeing mother anxiously. Her bright smile eased him. "Well, I'm sure there's room for them both. I am glad you have such kind hearted children.'

But now Mr. Will spoke timidly. 'I'm sorry, mother but I, too, have asked a guest. Couldn't help it some how! That young Miller at the office. How can you about his mother's death; and a boarding house is a dreary place to spend Christmas, I'm sure. Hospital is unsuitable, most pleading.

But Mrs. Will's bright smile had not turned to a calm, resigned look. "Oh, that's splendid, dear," she said. "For, do you know, I myself have invited that pretty little Gladys Sayers. She looked so wistful when I met her at the grocer's Saturday afternoon. Her mother also was going home for Christmas. She said a poor school teacher couldn't travel way from Christmas at home. What could I do! And do you know I've always thought Gladys and Ted Miller ought to meet. They're such nice young people—and Gladys is so pretty!"

Mr. Will's face lighted and the Wills' precious family Christmas. But one of the Wills felt that he had been cheated of anything. On the contrary! And Mr. and Mrs. Will are in clover happiness than ever. You see, they are the same sort of people—not a too common thing in this world. And Ted Miller and Lucy are growing up rather like them.

CAMDEN EAST

Camden East, December 24. — The Women's Missionary meeting resulted in the roads being quite heavy, but motor cars on Thursday morning had a difficult time in getting through. The was the first real storm so far this winter, and up until Wednesday the roads had been in good condition.

Many from the village attended the funeral of David Smith, an aged resident of Conway, on Monday. Burial was brought to Camden East on Wednesday last. Mr. Smith was well known in this vicinity. The family have the sympathy of the community in the loss of a devoted husband and father.

The public school closed on Friday for the Christmas vacation. The teacher and scholars held their annual concert in the hall on Friday night, and also the Sunday School combined. There were treats for the children, Christmas songs and recitations.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Histed spent Friday afternoon at Napanee.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bellis received the lucky ticket for the turkey at John Dwyer's store on Thursday, and Mr. E. Hamilton on Friday. Received for the goose, and Wesley Patterson received the four pounds of cheese. Tates, and Mr. Allen got the two pounds of chocolates, and John Bellis got ten pounds of granulated sugar for the highest number of tickets.

Wall Street is getting over its powder, trigger, discouragement and sulkiness.—Rober W. Babson.

MILLHAVEN

Millhaven, December 21. — The weather man is at present giving us a taste of winter, with cold and deep snow on the roads.

A gang of men are busy sanding the dangerous spots on the roads in this district.

A number of people from here attended the shower and dance last Tuesday at Mr. Harold Baker's Ernestown, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Franklin (nee Jean Kilgannon). Many beautiful and useful gifts were received, which showed the esteem in which the young couple were held.

The Christmas concert, held at Millhaven school on Wednesday evening, was well attended considering the condition of the roads. Miss Mildred MacLaughlin, teacher, is to be congratulated, along with her pupils, for putting on such a fine concert.

Mr. Charles Baker is confined to his home here, having the misfortune to injure one of his feet while working on the farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peters, of Sillsville, spent Thursday afternoon with Miss Kaye Young.

Your correspondent wishes the publishers of The Beaver, Mr. Graham, and the rest of the staff "A Merry Christmas" and "A Happy New Year".

SELBY

Selby, December 24. — The past week has been one of unusual activity and interest in the children and the young people. The entertainment of the different schools were well attended, and the programmes well presented. And Santa Claus has made his appearance. Great credit is due the teachers for their splendid efforts in developing the talent of their young charges.

The annual entertainment of the United Church, held Wednesday evening, was of peculiar interest to old and young alike. The public schools, under the direction of their teachers and assisted by the choir, rendered each to the programme, which, with recitations rendered by several small boys and girls of the school, a duet, dialogues and selections by local minstrels, The Four Black Crows, was enjoyed. The treatment of an evening well spent. At the conclusion of the programme the pastor and superintendent distributed the treat of candy to the younger members of the school and others assisting with the programme, and also extended Season's Greetings to the appreciative audience that had braved the elements of the winter's night that they might contribute to the success of this annual event.

The Mission Band party, held Friday evening at the parsonage, was an unqualified success. The youthful guests are most appreciative of the hospitality of Mrs. Fast and Mrs. Dr. and Mrs. Smith, and very enthusiastic for the work of their organization, "The Selby Mission Band."

The Christmas service, held Sunday afternoon in the United Church auditorium, was well attended. The programme, rendered by the choir, church, with its festive decorations and colored lights, was most attractive, and held the interest of the large congregation. The children's choir contributed a fine chorus, and Dr. Smith told a most interesting story of a little Russian girl, who had been blind from childhood, became blind at the age of four and spent her childhood in darkness. Then, one Christmas, she received a light, as her Christmas gift, and suddenly her eyes were opened. It was a beautiful story well told.

Mrs. Robert Martin, of Kingston, Mrs. Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Martin, of Belleville, were guests of Mr. Henry Martin on Monday.

Mrs. Thomas Johnson and Miss Keith Gourlie and Leo Mowers delivered boxes of Christmas cheer for the local W. C. T. U. to some of our aged and needy shut-ins.

At one home they tarried for a call and told a Christmas story. There is a question as to which was most appreciated, the toothsome dainties or the interesting story, so well told by the youthful narators. The enjoyment, however, was mutual.

Christmas visitors include Mr. Charles Wright, of Norwood, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Wright; Mr. Chas. Jackson, of Toronto, and Miss Jackson, of Bowmanton, with Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner Jackson; Miss Jennie Pringle with her mother, Mrs. S. Pringle; Misses Helen and Louisa Ramsay with Mr. and Mrs. Ted Wilde.

Mr. and Mrs. Wicks, of Sydenham, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Kilgannon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Laird and family spent Sunday, the guests of Mrs. George Stagg.

Dr. Clifford Smith and family, of Detroit, are holidaying with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Smith.

Miss Marian Lambert, of Moscow, has been spending the past two weeks the guest of Mrs. Harvey Lucas.

Miss Gertrude Carruthers, of Odessa, is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Cairns.

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Gardiner, of Cataraqui, were recent guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Boyce.

Mrs. James Boyce returned last Sunday from spending the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kingston.

Miss Verna Benjamin has returned from spending the past two weeks with her parents, Mrs. Benjamin, Point Ann.

Mrs. Hugh Mohan is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Melville, Kingston.

Miss Bessie Allen is visiting her sister, Mrs. Fred Scott, Montreal.

Mrs. George Stagg and daughter, Evelyn, spent last Saturday as guests of Mrs. A. E. Laird, Kingston.

Mr. Blacklock, Manager of the Bank of Montreal, Odessa, and Mrs. Blacklock are holidaying at his home in Woodstock.

Miss Joan is holidaying at her home in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Calder attended the banquet, held in the Superior Tea Rooms, Napanee, last Wednesday night, in honor of Messrs. Lennox and Addington Medical Association.

The Thursday night the Women's Institute, assisted by Wilton, Violet-ville, Bethel, Westbrook and Bell Institutes, put on a splendid concert in the Town Hall in aid of the Public Library. A short programme of concert, and the music was furnished by the Deseronto "Aces". Reeve Wilson, of Ernestown, chairman. The concert and dance were largely attended.

The Pals, C. G. I. T. group, met at the parsonage last Friday night, when Miss Dorothy Ladley, Miss Ruth Babcock, of Napanee, entertained the group by a crepe paper demonstration. Refreshments were served.

Nelson Smith attended the funeral of his uncle, the late David Smith, of Adolphustown, on Wednesday afternoon. The deceased was a brother of the late James Smith, and had reached his 79th year. Mrs. Chas. Kilgannon is a niece of Mr. Smith's. Mr. and Mrs. Smith celebrated their golden wedding last November.

Ross Jones has moved to the Dan Hall house, which he has purchased.

The sale held by Mrs. Arthur Fraser from their late farm home, was largely attended by anxious buyers, but prices were very satisfactory.

The Christmas concert and concert was held in the Town Hall last Thursday night, and two splendid plays were given by the Principal, Mr. Cordick, and his assistant, Mr. Blacklock. There was a fine attendance and the plays were very much enjoyed.

The Public School entertainment was held in the school rooms on Friday afternoon, and a handsome Christmas present was given to the pupils. The school closed Friday night for the Christmas holidays.

The Sunday School of the United Church held their Christmas tree in the Sunday School rooms on Friday. An excellent programme had been prepared.

The stores are beautifully decorated for the festive season and compare favorably with the city, with the lovely display of Christmas gifts.

MORVEN

Morven, December 24.—Mrs. Weese, of Picton, who has spent the past two months with Mrs. R. W. Street, is visiting a daughter in Toronto.

Miss Florence Fisher spent Friday night with Miss Gertrude Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Baird, of Anderson, called on Mr. and Mrs. L. Baird on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Mills called on Mr. and Mrs. W. Cummings on Sunday afternoon.

The school concert, which was held on Friday evening, was a splendid success. The newly decorated interior made a good setting for the seasonable decorations, which helped the children to carry on their program to a splendid finish. Too much praise could not be said of their teacher, Mrs. Denyes, who very ably directed the entire program.

The Y. P. S. will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lake on Friday evening. A good attendance is requested, as the election of officers will take place at this meeting.

There is a heavy public demand for information from the Dominion Experimental Branch on such subjects as improved sprays for household insects, moth-proofing chemicals and other preparations, suitable vacuum cleaners, in eliminating and controlling clothes moths and carpet beetles.

The grand championship carload of sheep at the Chicago Exhibition, shown by Mr. C. J. Brodie, of Stouffville, Ont., was sold at $1.50 per cwt., the highest price since 1930.

DORLAND

Dorland, December 22. — Present indications all point toward a white Christmas, but it may be difficult to carry out plans for family parties where guests were expected from a distance, as motoring is very heavy, sleighing is good.

Glenora ferry has been unable to operate for some days, but is rumored all the way to Picton. Parties have been making across Hay Bay, but the ice is badly cracked.

The weather on Wednesday was very disagreeable for the funeral of the late David Smith, which was held from his late residence to Camden East, where the family plot is located.

Despite unpleasant weather and roads, Santa Claus succeeded in attending the various school concerts where he was enthusiastically received.

The first meeting of the W. M. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. Andrew Mason on Wednesday afternoon, January 2nd.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the U. E. L. Butter and Cheese Company will be held in the factory on Saturday, December 29th, night.

BAY CIRCUIT

Bay Circuit, December 24. — My, what a lovely white Christmas. Surely it is everything that anyone could desire. Try to carry the Christmas spirit with you throughout the New Year.

Several Christmas hampers found their way to some of the homes of the people of this circuit. Thanks is hereby extended to the Ladies' Aids of the circuit and The Beaver Santa Claus Fund.

Our public school teachers left for their homes on Friday night. Your correspondent joins with others in wishing them the Compliments of the Season, and the hope that they may enjoy their well earned holiday.

The Christmas concert in connection with Gretna Public School was held in the United Church on Thursday evening last, with a splendid attendance and an excellent concert. Mr. William Joyce acted as chairman. The church choir sang a chorus, and the older people presented a good dialogue. Miss Martin, the teacher of the school, and her children, are to be complimented on the success of the entertainment.

The Christmas concert in connection with Mrs. Moore's parents, in Toronto, and his Aces, of Deseronto. With the addition of Bro. Bell to its veteran membership, the Rose Lodge Band has its membership with twenty-five year to its credit. Thos. Monaghan, R. J. Cousins, J. T. Bell, Adam Finglind, Fred VanVolkenburg, H. W. Wright, Hamilton Monaghan, S. Wagar, C. W. Keech and Samuel Cameron, the four last named being charter members of the band, first instituted in 1907.

On Tuesday afternoon the annual school concert was held in the public school, under the management of the teacher, Miss Rock. The Crewe Wagar acted as chairman and Elgin Kennest assumed the role of Santa Claus.

On Friday evening the annual school concert was held in the school room of Desmond Public School, where a splendid programme was given by the pupils, under the guidance of Miss Marguerite Wagar, with Frank Switzer as chairman and Okel Drew as Saint Nicholas.

Enjoyable school concerts were also held in the pupils of Gosport, Section of which was in charge of Miss Dorothy Bell, of Tamworth; at Croydon School, Miss Rowland acted as chairman; Miss Forsythe is to be congratulated on the evening's success.

The Hay Bay Ladies' Aid held their annual meeting at the home of the President, Mrs. Wilfred McCabe, on Tuesday afternoon. Reports of the treasurer was given, showing a substantial balance in the treasury. The usual gift to the Santa Claus Fund was paid. A short Christmas programme was given. The following are the officers for 1935: President, Mrs. Wilfred McCabe; Vice President, Mrs. Ira Robertson; Secretary, Miss L. T. Parks; Treasurer, Mrs. P. Huyck. A dainty supper was served by members of the President, Mrs. W. McCabe, at the Christmas entertainment, as a token of appreciation of her services, during the last two years.

The Hay Bay Sunday School Christmas concert was held in the church on Thursday evening. The program opened with a chorus by the young people. Miss McConkie then presented the program, prepared by her pupils. The songs and recitations were worthy of special mention. Miss Forsythe and her pupils gave the last part of the program. The recitations, numbers by four of the pupils, as well as the singing of choruses, and chart after sketches, was unusually good. At the close of the program Santa Claus appeared and candies and presents were distributed.

The Sand Hill special Christmas meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Silver, with a splendid attendance. A short program was given, followed by the election of officers. The officers for the year are: President, Mrs. Walter Huffman; Vice President, Mrs. J. Hamby; Secretary, Mrs. Elmer Silver; Treasurer, Mrs. Ezra Huffman, and Organist, Mrs. P. Brown. At the close of the meeting, a tea was served, and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present.

The Christmas entertainment, under the auspices of Anderson Young People's Union, was held in the church on Tuesday evening. The program was given by the two public school teachers, Miss Brown and Miss Glenn. The program consisted of dialogues, recitations, drills, music, and was well given by the children. At the close of the program, candies and popcorn were served to everyone.

The parsonage people take this opportunity of publicly acknowledging the following Christmas gifts: From Hay Bay Ladies' Aid, a substantial cheque; from Bethany Ladies' Aid, a hamper, containing meats, apples, fruit, butter, etc.; from Sand Hill Ladies' Aid, a pair of beautiful quilts, and from Gretna Ladies' Aid, a large goose. Several other gifts were received from individuals.

For reasons that need not be mentioned there will be no services on the Bay Circuit on Sunday, December 30th. The services on January 6th will be Hay Bay, Bethany and Anderson.

The writer of this column takes this opportunity of wishing all readers a very Happy New Year, and may it be one of the brightest and best.

A FAIR EXCHANGE

Laura and Tommy often had important discussions on serious subjects. Christmas evening found them in the Sunday School room on Friday. An excellent programme had been prepared.

The stores are beautifully decorated for the festive season and compare favorably with the city, with the lovely display of Christmas gifts.

BAY CIRCUIT ENTERPRISE

Enterprise, December 24.—Tuesday evening, December 18th, a most enjoyable affair was staged in the Community Hall, sponsored by the members of Red Rose Lodge, I.O.O.F., which marked another milestone in the history of the lodge. The event was staged in honor of one of the most faithful members of the lodge, John T. Bell, who, twenty-five years ago was initiated into membership, and who, in recognition of faithful attendance and continuous membership, was presented with a twenty-five year Veteran dewel. The members were honored by the attendance of Bro. Matthew Taylor, D.D.G.M. of Napanee District, No. 48, who presented the jewel. Miss Marguerite Wagar and Miss Vera Rock assisted in the programme with several readings. Following the programme, adjournment was made to the dining-room of the hall, where a most sumptuous banquet was served by the members of the Ladies' Aid of the United Church. Following the banquet, dancing was enjoyed to an early hour. Most delightful music was furnished by Jack Brumsell and his Aces, of Deseronto. With the addition of Bro. Bell to its veteran membership, the Rose Lodge Band has its membership with twenty-five year to its credit. Thos. Monaghan, R. J. Cousins, J. T. Bell, Adam Finglind, Fred VanVolkenburg, H. W. Important Question Will be Discussed at Dairy Convention

Will Vote on Resolution Asking Cheese Bonus

One of the most important matters for the consideration of the delegates to the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association Convention in Napanee, this week, will be the question of bonusing the cheese export business. The scheme will be explained by Allan C. Fraser, Secretary-Treasurer of the National Dairy Council of Canada, at the afternoon session on Friday, January 4th. The plan is one which should be given careful consideration by all dairymen in this district, noted throughout the world as one of the greatest cheese producing areas. The proposal, under the National Products Marketing Act, will be submitted to the Dominion Marketing Board about January 15.

Mr. Fraser will discuss the details at the convention and the delegates will be asked to give its endorsation, will be asked to give it endorsation, if they approve of it.

Details of the Plan

While the plan will not be completed for some weeks, it is understood the proposal contemplates a levy of a maximum of one cent per pound on all butter fat finding its market through ordinary marketing channels. The levy to establish the fund would be collected from the producer only. The proposed fund, it is learned, would establish a bonus of two cents per pound for any cheese exported and if necessary a bonus of five cents per pound on the comparatively small exportable surplus of butter.

Two cents per pound bonus for cheese, the advocates of the plan claim, would enable cheese factories to pay an additional 18 cents per 100 pounds of milk as an encouragement to the patronage of the cheese factory and bring the cheese industry to a much better place in the dairy industry.

Cheese Export Decreasing

Exports of Canadian cheese have been declining rapidly in recent years, and in the past six years have decreased by nearly 50,000,000 pounds. Milk, it is stated, which would normarily go into cheese making is being diverted into the fluid milk markets. Some cheese factories, sponsors of the scheme, claim, are closing, and some are being converted into creameries, threatening a serious unbalancing of distribution.

Considering the importance of this question to every milk producer and farmers generally, it is expected a large number will be present at the meeting, to hear the plan discussed.

Mr., Mrs. Calvin Arnold Celebrated 68th Anniversary

An event of considerable interest was celebrated on New Year's Day when Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Arnold, of Roblin, marked the 68th anniversary of their marriage. The marriage was solemnized at Napanee on January 1st, 1867, just half a year before confederation. The Rev. John S. Clark, one of the early ministers of the Methodist Church in Napanee, which is now Trinity United Church, was the officiating clergyman. For many years after their marriage, they lived on a farm near Selby and later retired to Roblin. Mr. Arnold, who is 88 years of age and Mrs. Arnold who is 84 years, are both still quite active and continue to live by themselves.

Their children all live in the county. There are four daughters, Mrs. Walter Doidge, Selby; Mrs. William Ramsay, Newburgh, Mrs. John McParland, Napanee; Mrs. Kenneth Weese, of Centreville, and one son, George Arnold, of Sharp's Corners.

On New Year's Day a family reunion was held at which all the members of the family and many other friends were present.

Boys' Welfare Hockey League Re-Organize

The Napanee Boys' Welfare Hockey League sponsored by the Rotary Club, held a re-organization meeting recently, at the Town Hall. The retiring president, Robert Paul, presided, and after the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Jack Willoughby, gave a report of last year's activities.

Following the reports, Chief Watts the originator of the Welfare League in Napanee, stepped down as president, Robert Paul, with a medal, as a token of appreciation of the excellent work he had done while in office.

Officers were elected for the coming year. The president is Donald Holmes and the secretary, Kenneth Moore.

Games will be played on Saturday mornings at the rink. The first games were played on Saturday morning, December 29th.

Premier Bennett To Open Campaign By Radio

It is generally conceded that Premier R. H. Bennett will open the election campaign on Wednesday night (to-night) when he speaks from Ottawa over a nation-wide radio hook-up.

It will be the first of five or six 30-minute addresses that Mr. Bennett will deliver. They are designed to place the position of the Government, its administration record, its policies and its accomplishments, before the people.

County Justices of The Peace Dismissed

TWO APPOINTMENTS MADE

Mr. Kenneth S. Ham, the Crown Attorney for Lennox and Addington, this week received notice of the dismissal of the Justices of the Peace of the County, of whom there were nearly 100. Many of them have held office for a great many years.

Two appointments were made to replace the dismissed officials. They are W. E. Carscallen of Tamworth, and Charles P. Stein of Denbigh. In addition, the Mayors, Reeves and Deputy Reeves of all municipalities, continue to be Justices of the Peace by virtue of their office.

The functions and privileges of a Justice of the Peace are not very important. A Justice of the Peace may not perform marriages. Two Justices of the Peace have the same power, when acting together, as a Magistrate. They are all allowed to take declarations and affidavits.

There is no salary attached to the office, but fees may be collected, if the justice so wishes.

Drama Group Executive Meeting

On Friday evening of this week, a meeting of the executive of the Napanee Drama Group will be held at the home of the President, Mrs. W. A. Templeton, Bridge Street.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss plans for the coming months and arrange the programs for the monthly open meetings. All members of the executive and reading committee are expected to be present.

Canada's Population Becomes More Canadian

Less Immigration. More Remain in Canada

Silent but remarkable changes are taking place in the population of Canada. As it increases year by year it is becoming more and more a Canadian-born population. This is one of the direct results of the years of depression which ordinarily escapes the notice of Canadians engaged in the more personal or immediate consequences.

185,000 Increase

As 1934 drew to an end it found Canada with a population of some 10,835,000, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, just 185,000 more than a year ago. This is so despite the barriers which have been steadily maintained against immigration during the last four years.

The significance of the figures is that the population of Canada is increasing just as fast now as in the years when thousands of immigrants from the United Kingdom and Europe were permitted or persuaded to come here.

Prior to 1930, when Canada's doors were open to immigrants from overseas, the doors of the United States were open to Canadians. Immigrants moved in, Canadians moved out. Now immigrants stay out and Canadians stay in. The natural increase in population balances the gain formerly made by the excess of immigrants over the number of Canadians leaving Canada.

The year 1930 is the pivotal year, for it was then that increasing unemployment led the Dominion Government to close the doors to newcomers except the few who intended to and were equipped with the capital and experience to make successful farmers.

In the 19 years from 1911 to 1930 the number of people in Canada rose from 7,207,000 to 10,206,000, an average yearly increase of 157,000. In the four years from 1930 to the present seven months the population has increased from 10,206,000 to 10,835,000, an average annual increase of 157,200, approximately the same. Further, the increase from 1933 to 1934 of 185,000 is the largest in a single year since 1928.

John J. Sweeney Died Last Week In New York

On Tuesday, December 25th, word was received by Napanee friends, of the death of John J. Sweeney, in New York city. He passed away on Monday, after an illness of some weeks.

Mr. Sweeney was born near Marysville, Ontario, and in his earlier life had conducted a dry goods business in Napanee. About 45 years ago he went to New York and entered the wholesale manufacturing copper and sheet plate business, which is young-er brother, William H. Sweeney, had established. For many years the business was very successfully carried on by the brothers and other members of the family. Mr. Sweeney was the last of the family to pass away.

Just a few years ago he retired and continued to make his home in New York city. Other members of the family who predeceased him, were James, Mrs. Rooney, Mrs. J. P. Hanley, formerly of Napanee, and William H. Mr. Sweeney's wife, whom he married in New York, also predeceased him. There were no children. Mrs. Rooney and William Mooney and Miss Mooney of Napanee, are second cousins of the late Mr. Sweeney.

The funeral and burial were in New York city.

A few months ago Mr. Sweeney offered the town of Napanee a considerable sum of money for the erection of a new hospital. Negotiations were entered into with him, but since the offer was made, Mr. Sweeney was too ill to do business of any sort.

Almost every shipper of eggs to Scotland, with the exception of some continental countries, has adopted the style of package used by Canada, namely 30-dozen cases, with sections.

Ont. Asso. Rural Municipalities To Convene in Toronto

The announcement of the second annual convention of the Ontario Association of Rural Municipalities, at Toronto, February 19 and 20, is received with increased interest, says President Manley Rathwell. Already adhesions from 128 municipalities have been received, and more are coming every week. Several villages and small towns, not separated from counties, are joining our association, says the president, because they had no "say" whatever in the older association, it being dominated by the cities. Some important resolutions have been received for discussion. The special features of the program will include "rural school programs" and "did the Province take over all the county roads?" "Are Municipal Councils dwindling into mere tax-collecting agencies?" and other live topics. Entertainment with the assistance of the Toronto Conservatory of Music is also being arranged. Delegates are expected to be present in the morning of the stand pipe, which will be done in 1935.

Napanee Resident J. W. Hall, Observes His 89th Birthday

Mr. J. W. Hall, one of Napanee's oldest residents, celebrated his 89th birthday on Sunday, December 23rd. During the day a number of Mr. Hall's friends called on him to extend congratulations and best wishes. He was the recipient of many messages, and some lovely gifts.

Mr. Hall is remarkably good health and is enjoying life. He has been a resident of Napanee quite a number of years. Previous to that he was a most successful farmer in Richmond Township.

When he came to Napanee he took up the business of cattle buying, from which he retired a few years ago.

Former Napanee Citizen Married In New York

A wedding of interest to Napanee citizens took place at The Little Church Around the Corner, in New York, on December 29th, Miss M. Juanita Thompson, M.D., formerly of Napanee, was united in marriage, to Dr. J. Harold Perkins, of Boston.

Dr. Thompson is the niece of Mrs. J. Glover of Napanee. She received her public and high school training at the local schools. At Toronto University she had a brilliant course in medicine. Since graduation, she has been engaged in research work first in Toronto and then in the Rockefeller Institute in New York.

Her husband, Harold J. Perkins, is a graduate of Toronto University and is engaged in research work at Boston clinic.

The couple, after the wedding, left imediately for Bermuda, for their honeymoon.

Central Bank Will Control $100,-000,000 Gold

When the Bank of Canada commences operations, probably by March 1, it will have control of at least $100,000,000 of gold, of which about $70,000,000 will be taken over from the Department of Finance, and the remainder from the chartered banks. It will also at that time assume responsibility for the Dominion notes in circulation, the total of which, at Nov. 30, was shown to amount to nearly $220,000,000.

Body of Aged Man Frozen to Death Near Marlbank

The body of Mr. Allan Airhart was found on a lonely road west of Marlbank about two or three miles, on Monday, December 24th. He had, apparently, died from exposure. During the evening of the previous Saturday he had been in the Village of Marlbank and left late in the evening for his shanty west of the village about three miles, where he carried on wood cutting operations.

Just what happened is not definitely known, but it is thought he was overcome with the cold and probably froze to death. Dr. Mather, of Tweed, Coroner and the Provincial Police, of Belleville, investigated and decided death was from natural causes, and an inquest will not be held.

Mr. Airhart's home was at Westplain, but during the winter he was engaged in wood cutting on a wood lot near Marlbank. He is survived by several children, among them Mrs. Hughes, at Marlbank. His body was taken to Tamworth and placed in the vault, to await interment in the S...

Lonsdale Man Lost Life In Blizzard

Vincent McNamara, who had been missing from his home near Lonsdale, since Wednesday, was found frozen to death not far from his house on Friday. It is thought that during the blinding blizzard on Wednesday, while returning home from a nearby point on foot, he was overcome in his tracks and lost his way. Search by the family and friends revealed his frozen body a short distance from home.

The late Mr. McNamara was a son of the late Judah McNamara, whose death occurred on October 27th, 1934, and whose body was found in the bay of Quinte. Deceased is survived by his mother, four brothers, James, Dominick, Francis, and Joseph, and one sister, Mrs. James Roach.

1935 Seed Fair Planned For Quinte Area, March

It has been arranged to hold the annual fair of the Eastern District Seed Growers' Association in March, 1935, at Cobourg. This is appreciated by the farmers of Northumberland County, as the fair gives an opportunity to sell their grain at good prices, as well as being able to compete for prizes.

Levulose (fruit sugar), one of the three sugars found in honey, is non-granulating and is usually the preponderating sugar. Sucrose (cane sugars are dextrose (grape sugar and sucrose (cane sugar). Dextrose is a rapid granulating sugar. Sucrose is present in honey only in very small quantities.

Capt. A. E. Baker Given Honor by King George

Members of Well Known County Family

A member of a well-known family of Lennox and Addington County was included in the King's New Year's honor list. Captain A. E. Baker, managing director of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, was made a member of the Order of the British Empire, which entitles him to wear after his name the letters O. B. E. The distinction is conferred on civilians who have rendered outstanding service in their spheres of work. In the case of Captain Baker it is a well merited recognition of service.

Captain Baker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John William Baker, residing near Millhaven, on the old Baker homestead. He received his early education in local schools and attended Napanee Collegiate Institute. Later he graduated in science from Queen's University and when the war broke out, went overseas.

He was wounded and lost his eyesight while in action. Before returning to Canada he attended the Sir Arthur Pearson Institute for the Blind, in England, and when he came home took a position with Toronto with the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario.

Some time later he became identified with the work for the blind, in Canada, and is now the managing director of the Canadian Institute. Captain Baker travels from coast to coast in his work, which is steadily increasing in importance to the blind of the country.

Captain Baker is a brother of Mrs. J. B. Elliott of South Fredericksburgh, and a cousin of Mrs. M. R. Reid, of Napanee.

A statement concerning the work of the Institute for the past year, was recently issued, and follows:

Increased demand for its products, maintenance of income at the level of the past four years and expansion of services to the rural blind were 1934 developments that greatly encouraged the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Captain A. E. Baker, managing director, disclosed on Thursday in an interview.

Throughout Canada demand for articles manufactured by the blind was reflected in greater sales, but Ontario and the Maritime Provinces outstripped them all with a 27 per cent increase in the last seven months compared with a similar period a year ago.

Despite maintenance of income, the greatest problem faced by the institute remains the elderly unemployable blind. "The institute is making every effort to relieve this condition," said Captain Baker, "but it is recognized that the only adequate solution of the maintenance problem, where need exists, must be a form of state allowance or pension for the blind."

Increased public interest in work of the institute was noted throughout the Dominion. Captain Baker said, especially Ontario, where institute boards were established in Hamilton, London, Ottawa, St. Catharines, Kingston, Port William, Port Arthur, Oshawa, Peterborough and Port Hope, its smaller centres of population in Canada; special committees and auxiliaries were formed to look after local needs.

Special efforts have been made to complete a register of Canada's blind, but the task is far from finished. At present 7,200 are registered, the oldest of whom is John Martin, of Kingston, Ont., 108 last September. He became blind when 101 years old.

The most comprehensive exhibit of activities and work of the institute was presented at the Canadian National Exhibition where 300,000 people were amazed at the variety and skill of the work done by the sightless. Captain Baker plans to have a greater and more interesting exhibit for 1935.

Last Year's Council Tell of 1934 Work at Nomination Meeting

Town Finances shown In Good Condition

While nomination papers were being filed, Mr. W. A. Grange, the Town Clerk, called on the Chairman of the School Board and members of the Public Utilities Commission to speak.

Mr. Alpine Woods, the first speaker, briefly reviewed the work of the School Board during 1934. He dealt with it from a financial and an academic standpoint. In both respects the report, he considered, was very satisfactory. In the Public Schools the receipts were $16,275.00 and expenditures $15,863.00, of which $11,496.00 was for salaries. The cash balance is $722.00. For the Collegiate the receipts were $50,887.00 of expenditures $50,323.80, salaries 25,637.00, and the balance is $365.00, making a total cash balance of $1,087.00.

The academic results may be judged from the Inspector's reports and the examination results. The Public School Inspector and the three Inspectors who visited the Collegiate were highly complimentary concerning the condition of the schools. In the matter of examination results 39 tried the entrance to High Schools exams. and 37 passed. In the Collegiate 78% were successful in Middle School exams. and 75% in the Upper School exams.

Mr. J. H. Moffat, one of the Public Utilities Commissioners, dealt with the waterworks report for the year. The waterworks plant showed an operating surplus of $4,968.00. Total collections were $19,508.00. $3,479.00 was paid on the debenture debt, and an extension costing $848.00 was built. The system has 740 customers, 600 of whom are domestic and 140 commercial. In all 15 meters are in use. The arrears show a total of $1,580.00, of which $1,100 will be paid the first of the year by the C. N. Railway and Acme Dairy. After the first of the year the arrears are to be divided into monthly payments, which those owing will be asked to pay. Less was collected in 1934 than in 1933 for electric... The only repairs to be made to the present system are those to the stand pipe, which will be done in 1935.

Dealing with the Hydro section of the Public Utilities, W. T. Mackenzie reported a surplus for 11 months, to December 31st, as $4,978.01. Last year it was under $2,000.00. It is expected the December operation will increase the surplus. Last year $27,466.00 has been paid off the debenture debt. Last year's payment was $7,794.00 capital and interest. The total debenture debt balance of $37,533.00 will be paid in nine years.

During the coming year the Commission proposes to improve the service by a second feeder line from the sub-station to the town. There are 765 domestic customers, 193 commercial, and 31 power customers. In the town there are only about 60 houses which are not using electric power

Ontario Achieves New Mining Record

An estimate of $136,000,000 in value of the total mineral output of the Province of Ontario was announced last week by W. R. Rogers, Director of Publications and Statistics, Ontario Department of Mines.

This is the largest total ever achieved by the mineral industry of the Province. It compares with the $109,819,557 in 1933, and with the former peak of $117,-909,722 recorded in 1929.

While the volume of gold output in terms of ounces declined, the quantity of ore handled by the mines increased steadily throughout the year, indicating a gradual tightening of the policy of treating lower grades ore with the cost of lengthening the life of the mines and adding years to the communities which they serve.

St. John's Anglican Church, Newburgh X'mas Entertainment

The congregation of St. John's Anglican Church held their Christmas entertainment in the Municipal Hall on Friday evening, with a good house. The storm which started in the early afternoon kept some at home, who missed the splendid program put on by the children and young people of the church, under the leadership of Mr. P. M. Gould, organist of Newburgh High School.

In the absence of the Rector, Rev. Canon Spencer, Reeve C. G. Walker acted as chairman, and introduced the program opened with an singing a Christmas hymn, "Hark ! The Herald Angels Sing." Recitations by Master Jim Alcombrack, Clifford Card and Miss Betty Bradley and Doreen Card were well given and little Miss Margaret Dickerson gave a splendid exhibition of tap dancing, with Mr. Gould at the piano.

Miss Helen Dougan and the Moffatt brothers gave some musical selections on the piano. The singing of Christmas Carols by the young people was much enjoyed. Master Jim Alcombrack rendered a vocal solo "Santa Claus is Coming to Town," in splendid manner.

A special number "Illuminated Christmas Bells," by Mr. Alex Moffatt, was well received. After community singing of Christmas carols, a splendid programme closed with the National Anthem.

A treat of candies, nuts and oranges and a hearty vote of thanks extended to Mr. Gould for his kindness in arranging the program, the pretty yuletide decorations, and piano accompaniment for the singing. The ladies of the congregation served delicious refreshments, after which games and dancing were enjoyed and all returned home voting the evening a splendid success.

Ontario Older Boys Elect Premier And Cabinet

Gerald Simmons of Napanee A Member

At a caucus of members of the Fourteenth Older Boys' Parliament in Victoria College, Toronto, last week, William Wisner, Jordan Station, was elected Premier by a majority of one vote over W. Gray Rivers, of Madoc, who will become the Leader of the Opposition.

The following boys were elected to form the remainder of the Cabinet: Minister of Finance, Jack Barnard, West York; Minister of Publicity, Ted Moock, Waterloo; Minister of Organization, Edward Sergeant, Owen Sound; Minister of Eastern Camps, Hudson Campbell, Leeds County; Minister of Western Camps, Ken Ingham, Stratford; Minister of Welfare, Lennox, Ottawa, St. Catharines, Kingston, Port William, Port Arthur, Oshawa, Peterborough and Port Hope, its smaller centres of population in Canada; special committees and auxiliaries were formed to look after local needs.

The following boys were elected to form the remainder of the Cabinet: Minister of Finance, Jack Barnard, West York; Minister of Publicity, Ted Moock, Waterloo; Minister of Organization, Edward Sergeant, Owen Sound; Minister of Eastern Camps, Hudson Campbell, Leeds County; Minister of Western Camps, Ken Ingham, Stratford; Minister of World Prince Edward County; Provincial Secretary, Reginald Kingston, Peterboro'; Speaker of the House, George Fallis, Toronto, and Deputy Speaker, Kenneth Moriand, North Bay.

According to the latest statistics, every Canadian in 1932 used fifteen pounds of soap, or 68 pounds for each family. The total production of all kinds of soap in Canada in 1932, was 159,127,624 pounds, valued at $12,266,376 at factory prices.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT

A good deal of friction between the United States and Japan has been removed by the kindly tone which the United States adopted in the note which she sent to Japan on Saturday. The Japanese Government had sent notice that she intends to renounce the Washington Treaty. This treaty set the ratios of navies as between Great Britain, the United States and Japan, as at 5-5-3, in that order. Japan is pressing for a navy that will be equal to either that of Britain or the United States. And when it was impossible for the representatives of these nations, in the recent preliminary negotiations, to arrive at any basis of agreement, Japan gave notice of terminating the treaty. Under these circumstances, it would not have been difficult for the United States to retaliate in some way or other. But in a conciliating and dignified note, the Secretary of State answers Japan. The note clearly states that the United States is disappointed at the failure of the negotiations to arrive at some agreement on the size of the various navies. It admits the right of every nation to have equality of security, rather than equality of armament. This the United States believes has been provided for, in the present arrangement. The note further recognizes the futility of any security pact which is not voluntarily arrived at by all the parties to it. The United States concludes its statement, by reminding Japan, that the intention to terminate the treaty does not mean that the treaty is ended on the date of notification. Two years are necessary before the agreement of 1921 shall become inoperative. During this time, the Government of the United States hopes that negotiations will continue and that some agreement will be reached, which will not put an undue burden on the peoples of the world, in the matter of armament building.

The whole note is a quiet and restrained appeal to the good sense of the Japanese Government, in the hope that by co-operative effort, some way out of the prospective dilemma will be found. It is to be hoped that it will receive a favourable response. It is to be hoped that the Japanese Government will co-operate with Britain and the United States, in the matter of naval restrictions.

The world does not desire a repetition of naval competition such as marked the years of 1910-1914. To repeat the blunders of those prewar years, would undoubtedly lead to the same consequences as those which prevailed during the World War. Another such upheaval would probably mean the end of our present civilization. Unless the Japanese people have no historic perspective, they cannot fail to note this and to seek, along with the western nations, a means of averting so great a tragedy.

THE PRIME MINISTER'S MESSAGE

The Premier of Canada, whose responsibility of office precludes any extravagance in statement, has issued a very reassuring message to the people of Canada. He points out the obvious fact that the distress and the suffering caused by the economic disturbance of the past five years were of such a nature, that it has been impossible to deal with them permanently, up-to-date. The need is great and imperative. No time could be lost in seeking causes. In the face of a great need, the obvious thing for the Government to do was, meet it in as generous a way as possible, until the situation was improved. This the Prime Minister says, his government has done. Now that the conditions are improving, it is the Government's duty to seek the causes of hard times and prescribe a permanent remedy. This the Prime Minister promises to do, and in his New Year's message, he urges all the citizens to unite with him in the effort.

In all of this, we are in hearty accord. When a ship is sinking, the obvious thing to do is to save the crew. There is time enough afterwards to hold an investigation. And when people are hungry, the first necessity is to feed them. After the food has been provided, time can be had to discover the reason for the shortage of unemployment. It is encouraging to the people of Canada to know that now, when conditions are improving, the Government seeks to discover the causes of the depression.

For a long time economists have propounded the theory of periodic cycles, boom times followed by depressions in unremitting regularity, as though it were a prescribed order of nature. That this need not be taken as a final analysis of our economic life, has become daily more evident during the past few years. To simply admit that nothing can be done to prevent the recurrence of stagnation in trade, is an admission of defeat, by men who are capable of greater things.

That the Government has admitted, by implication at any rate, the fallacy of the cycle theory of boom and depression, and is prepared to seek the causes, is one of the most hopeful messages the people of Canada can hear on New Year's.

THE NOMINATIONS

The Town Council for 1935 has been elected by acclamation. There were a great many nominated, but it was only at the last moment that a sufficient number qualified to fill the various places. It is an unfortunate thing that, in a town of this size, there are so few men ready to assume responsibility in the conduct of the town's business. The Council, as elected, is little changed from last year. Mr. Masters retires and Dr. Morden resigns to contest the position of Deputy-Reeve. These two positions have been filled. Mr. J. G. Daly is a capable business man, who has served the Town with great credit in the past, both as councillor and mayor. Mr. Robson is a new man in municipal affairs. He is popular and successful in business, and should be a great asset to the Council.

The position of Mayor will be fought out between Mr. Tustin, the present mayor, and Mr. George Paul, who has served the Town for a number of years, in various canacities.

Capt. Hughson and Dr. Wilson, both of whom have had considerable experience in council work, will seek the Reeveship.

Dr. Morden, who has devoted his time and ability unstintedly to the Town during the past year, will be opposed by J. H. Fitzpatrick, proprietor of the Paisley Hotel, for the position of Deputy-Reeve.

The TORONTO ELECTION

During the past few weeks, the people of Ontario have been able to watch, with a certain sense of amused detachment, the Toronto elections. This annual event arouses a good deal of interest throughout the Province and provides a considerable amount of entertainment. The Toronto papers take their municipal politics rather seriously. This year, they seem to have outdone themselves in their partisanship.

The interest centered largely around the election of a mayor. For several years, there has been no contest for this office, as Mayor Stewart has been elected by acclamation. With his retirement, however, four candidates entered the field: Hunt, Ramsden, Simpson, Smith. James Simpson, member of the Board of Control, and who has a long record of public service to his credit, received the majority of the votes and thus becomes the Mayor for 1935.

Mr. Simpson is a labor man. He was born in England, and began life selling papers at ten years of age. At fourteen he came, with his parents, to Canada and became apprenticed to the printing trade. Later he became a reporter for municipal affairs in Toronto. He then entered public life, was a member of the Board of Education, is a life-long member of the Labor Union, and has served as arbitrator on numerous committees of national and international importance. He is undoubtedly the best equipped of any of the candidates. His candidature was endorsed by the [illegible] which principles [illegible] adopt. The newspapers [illegible] opposed him, their battle cry. Day after day, they conjured up fears of what would happen if a radical and a C. C. F. were elected. Quotations from speeches made years ago were unearthed and used against him. In subtle ways he was made to appear as a Red, Karl Marxian, and radical. But all to no avail. The Toronto papers who opposed Mr. Simpson, ought to have learned by now, that the people in Ontario are not going to be frightened by any labels which they stick on a man. The people are doing their own thinking. The most significant illustration of this, was the vote in wards one and eight. These wards are almost wholly Conservative and Protestant and might have been expected to have been swayed by the appeals of stand-patism. But these wards gave majorities for Mr. Simpson.

Mr. Simpson came through the campaign with distinction. He did not repudiate the C. C. F. when this new and rather untried organization endorsed him. A weaker man would have done so. He was elected in spite of the bogies which the press scared up against him.

While Mr. Simpson is a Socialist, in the best sense, he is a champion of the British tradition and the British way of achieving change through the regular process of the vote. In this he is in the good company of Ramsay Macdonald, Philip Snowden, J. H. Thomas, Arthur Henderson, and others — men who, in a troubled and changing era, have been a powerful and steadying influence on British politics.

Mr. Hunt, who ran second to Mr. Simpson, is a successful businessman of Toronto. He carried on a dignified and enthusiastic campaign. In his message, after his defeat, he shows himself a true gentleman, who kept his temper and controlled himself, much better than some of the bitter and reactionary papers which supported him.

'Round the Kitchen Stove with "Roland"

This is electioneering week. For some it will be a week of hard driving .... much talk .... many promises .... caustic comments .... arguments, and all the sundries that go to make up an election campaign. This is the hectic week that belongs to the seeker of municipal honours. May there be no friendships lost in the ill-chosen words, in the excitement of the moment.

President Roosevelt has formulated a scheme and now has a committee working on the idea to take the profit out of war. In a broad way it simply means the conscription of industry as well as men in time of war. Why not carry the idea a little farther and conscript all industries, including munitions, make Big Business subservient to the will of the people.... Why not carry the idea a little farther and conscript all industri... which produce munitions, make Big Business subservient to the will of the people....
